EXTRA POINTS

life of retail store management?"

Why thanks, I'm glad you asked.

The success of any weekly newspaper depends on the relationship between the community it serves and that newspaper. We are no different.

Whether it be the Little League update, softball standings or a small blurb on how the lacrosse team is doing, we want to hear from you. No nugget of information is too small.

In addition, besides keeping you updated on how the local teams are doing, I want to take that extra step and bring out the people behind the names you see cracking that homerun or crossing the finish line.

We want to no know about the guy on High Street preparing for his first marathon. We want to know about the athlete who overcame tremendous hurdles to reach the top of his game. We want to know about the star athlete who donates his/her time at the homeless shelter.

The only way we learn about these great stories is with a little bit of your help.

I can be reached directly at (617) 837-4577 or through the main office number (617) 837-3500. If I'm not around, please leave a message on the voice mail.

You can also fax results, standings or any other community information to me at (617) 837-4540.

But wait, there's more. The all powerful CNC has dragged me kicking and screaming onto the information super-highway and given me an e-mail address where you can reach me, david.wolcott@cnc.com.

If you, like me, have no idea how to even make sense of the whole e-mail thing, you can also give the postal service some work and drop me a note at Mariner Newspapers, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield, 02050.

Anyway, I look forward to hearing from you and seeing everyone out at the games.

Sparklers and Flyers Battle it Out

By Kim Lee DeAngelis
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Tuesday evening, May 27, the Spirito Sparklers and the Fidelity Flyers were matched to play their second softball game of the spring '97 season. The crisp, clear yet cool evening set the stage for a great game.

Molly Ogrodnik stood tall on first base to make a great catch on a play to get a Flyer out. Molly Liddell helped out also with a direct throw over to first from her pitcher's mound position to capture the second out against the Flyers. Quickly following was Charlotte Seda with a terrific long throw from her third base position to contribute to the Flyers time at bat.

With a sponsor like Spirito, Inc., and enthusiastic coaches as Martha Ogrodnik, Darilyn Evans and Sue Rizzoti, the Spirito Sparklers team grabbed their turns at bat, with smiles and shrieks of "is it my turn yet?"

Alison Dean led off an inning getting right on first base as did her teammate Marissa Evans! Lauren Rizzoti and Michelle Lemaire both hit strong line drives to successfully run to first base. Remy Lee joined her teammates to drill a base hit and run to first base with Alison Krupczek landing a solid hit also to get her over to second. Teammate Melissa Crawford was able to score at home as she ran across the plate, grinning all the way. Lucy Kittle proved her skills as catcher and worked several great throws over to first to capture outs for her team. Katie DeWaal contributed to the string of Sparkler hits to find herself also on base.

Although the ending score of 10-6 was the Sparklers' first loss this season, the spirits and fun these young players displayed will no doubt carry them on to more victories and smiles this season. Great teamwork, Sparklers and Coaches!

Green Machine Rolls On

The Green Machine is tearing up the turf this spring, and having a ball! With pitchers Lindsay Grossman, Gia Petrakis and Carrie Pierson doing an awesome job firing the ball over home plate, the Green Machine's fielders are executing some terrific, smart plays.

Catchers Meghan Marr and Zoe Murray not only keep their eyes on the ball, but manage to keep the ball in their glove, with both players having caught pop fouls for important outs! Good knowledge of the game and fast action by infielders Gillian Weber, Caroline Carr, Yasmine Afshar and Maura O'Brien have helped stopped runners at first and second base. Meanwhile, terrific outfielding by players Kate Lewis, Julia Scribner, Jenna Lowe and Holly Dinsmore, including a great fly ball catch by Rachel Doyle, have kept runners at third and the opposing team's runs to a minimum.

With all the talent in the field, The Green Machine's real depth seems to be in the batter's box! Parents and fans have been thrilled with each crack of the bat as this hard-hitting team wallops the ball. Personifying The Green Machine's team spirit is player Kelly Hurley, who, though temporarily sidelined with a foot injury, is at every game enthusiastically cheering on each batter and waiting for the day she can play!

Angels Flying High

Charlie's Angels softball team is off to a great start this season. After two games against the Sunshine Girls, the Angels are building strength. Powerful hitting, masterful fielding and terrific energy make the girls in pink a formidable opponent for any team. The Angels, sponsored by Judy and Charlie Flint, have depth and versatility, with all of the girls playing infield and outfield, and doing whatever is needed to help the team.

In their first game of the season, the Angels came from behind with an exciting seven-run fourth inning to tie the Sunshine Girls 21-21. Alas, the Sunshine Girls pulled it out in the sixth inning to defeat the Angels, but that did not dampen the Angels' enthusiasm. Coaches and spectators are impressed with their hitting and ball-handling.

Jen Murray's catching is a threat to any runner approaching home plate. At third base, Mackenzie Holway's double play fly catch caused the crowd to roar. Melissa Crowley-Buck's first base skill was evident in the second game as she tagged her runner and threw the ball home for another magnificent double play. Mary Silvia, with her powerful throwing arm, protected second base and relayed many balls back to the pitcher.

All positions are rotated because the Angels have so much talent. Jenna Larson, Catherine Calorio, Emilie Shea and Jackie Flint are a great infield combination, holding the other team to few runs. In the outfield, the team shines, with all players hustling for the ball as fast as they can.

And boy, can these girls hit. Sluggers like Catherine Whoriskey, Emily Nash, Miranda Lanzilotti, Whitney Condon and Kate Kuppens will propel the team to glory.

Coaches Janice Crowley, Jane Lanzilotti and Gitte Shea are thrilled with their team's talent, enthusiasm and teamwork. Good luck for a terrific season!

Seniors and Community Service are a Good Mix

Students Display Projects in Assembly

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently, Cohasset High School seniors participated in the Community Service Learning Senior Project program, which allows seniors to volunteer their services, individually or in groups, in the community. This year, projects took the students to Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and even Boston. Thirty-one seniors took part in 14 different projects and, as CHS health/physical education teacher and director of C.L.S. Ron Ford commented, "Every project had a positive impact on the community."

Andrea Freeman, Karen Niessink and Kelly O'Donnell showed a video about their work with the Recreation Department, painting the backstop at the Beechwood ballpark and helping with the program's four young children. Lauren Cassino, Jo Hurley and Megan Pratt worked as teacher's aides in Hull's Head Start Program, working with underprivileged children. Ryan Bishop, Rob Buckley, Kevin McKenna and Bob Stansell all worked for the Cohasset Water Department, painting pipes at the plant and clearing brush by the reservoir. The group produced a video which documented their efforts as part of the department.

Rachel Bloom, Emily Collins, Jodi Colwill and Andrea Grew all worked as teacher's aides at the Joseph Osgood School, helping with students from kindergarten through the second grade. Nicole Santoro helped Mrs. Judy Ritts down at the Deer Hill and showed a video about her project. Emily Henderson volunteered at Hingham's Derby Academy. Modifying her project after a few days, Emily came to enjoy her work as a teacher's aide, helping the students learn Spanish. Catie Campbell and Chad Whitman's project was unique. They decided to volunteer time at the New England Medical Center, spending time with terminally ill children suffering from cancer or sickle cell anemia. Mike Kearney's project also stood out, as the senior spent several weeks as an intern at WSBK. Kearney helped produce news shows, advertisements and feature spots and played a video which detailed his work.

Erica Hettstrom, Joe Magner and Liz Mahoney worked at renovating the Beechwood Congregational Church. They painted benches and helped with the church's elderly by preparing and serving meals. Matt Belson became a member of the Cohasset Highway, tree and park department for a few weeks, performing manual labor around town and producing a video, set to music, which chronicled his hard work. Monique DeVoe and Courtney Goff helped beautify Cohasset High School by painting a wall of the school library. Faces of luminaries such as Gandhi, Mother Teresa, Einstein and Martin Luther King Jr. now all stare down at the diligent students of CHS as they study rigorously. Natalie Cheel, Matt Conley, Dave Noble and Matt O'Connor undertook the huge project of renovating the historic Cohasset boathouse by Cohasset Harbor and prepared a video to exhibit their progress. Jarrod Batts showed slides which displayed his work in Hingham's D.A.R.E. Program, which helps educate students about the dangers of drugs and alcohol.

The Cohasset High School seniors made the most of their last few months as high-schoolers, providing community service, while also enjoying the freedom of not being cooped up inside the walls of CHS. Perhaps Karen Niessink said it best. "It was a good learning experience, but we had a lot of fun, too."

Megan Pratt, Jo Hurley and Lauren Cassino stand with the display for the final presentation of their senior project, serving as teacher's aides at the Head Start program in Hull.

DRUGS

DRUG FACT

Older siblings are the chief source of supply for very young users. Because the myth of marijuana's 'harmlessness' has so permeated our society, youngsters often feel they are doing their smaller brothers and sisters a favor by getting them high. There is also another motive. If the younger child gets involved, he or she won't tell Mom and Dad. It is quite possible for Mom and Dad to be unaware of the fact that their children are stoned. With marijuana use it's easy to 'hide the high' or to 'come down' by dinner time. The clearest telltale symptom — red eyes — is handled by kids via eye drops. (The eye drop industry reports a boom in sales.)"

Maritime Museum Opens Sunday, June 1

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum, Elm Street, Cohasset center, will open for the summer season Sunday, June 1. Hours through September are 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. each day except Mondays. Admission is free and donations are accepted.

The museum features artifacts such as ship models, fishing gear, lifesaving materials, shipbuilding and shipwreck relics, as well as a collection of Native American stone tools relating to the history of this small New England village.

For further information call the Historical Society at 617-383-1434.

Cohasset Dramatic Club Meeting Scheduled

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will host a reception for its adult members Sunday, June 8, at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset Town Hall.

Come by and have some refreshments while renewing friendships. Meet the scholarship winners and find out what is planned for the 1997-1998 season.

Buy Tickets for Dance Cruise

Enjoy a very casual evening watching the sun set over the skyline of Boston aboard the 200' Provincetown II, while being entertained by continuous live music from four bands on three separate decks. Passenger may board at the World Trade Center in Boston, or at Pemberton Pier in Hull. The gangplank will be raised at 7:15 p.m. sharp in Boston and 8:15 p.m. sharp in Hull. Tickets are $37.50 or this June 14 music extravaganza, and may be purchased from any Cohasset Soccer Club coach, at Cohasset Hardware and The Good Sport. Mail orders accepted with a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Cohasset Soccer Club, P.O. Box 409, Cohasset, 02025. When the last ticket is sold, you have missed the boat!

Many enjoyed last year's tournament to benefit GEMS of Hope, USA.

Farmers Market on the Common

The Cohasset Village Farmers' market on historic Cohasset Common will be held Thursdays 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. from June 5 to Oct. 9. It will feature a free folk music concert the first Thursday of each month along with organic produce, strawberries, herbs, perennials, bedding plants, bread, fresh flower bouquets, French pastries, and honey products.

The Village Butcher and Deli will be on hand with a sausage cart.

The June 5 market will feature Mark Purcell, singer and songwriter, along with fiddle player Joseph Kessler.

Plan to visit village shops and cafés while supporting local agriculture on the South Shore.

Making the Marriage Work

Some wives say, "I am a believer but my husband is not." How to maintain marital and family harmony, live an abundant life and honor one's religious convictions will be considered in an upcoming workshop for women. It will be offered free-of-charge Saturday, June 7, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. by Strait Paths Counseling of Cohasset.

The morning session, limited to women, will be led by a female family therapist and will center on group discussion, praise music and referral to Scripture and relevant current literature; among the scheduled activities for the afternoon are presentations by a panel of pastors and concerned women, a question and answer period and a review of the day's insights and recommendations.

Although no fee will be charged, registration is necessary; seating is limited. Call (617) 383-1346 for further information, registration and directions to Strait Paths.

Coffee With the Authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present its spring "Coffee with the Authors" Tuesday, June 10, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Chart House restaurant in Cohasset. First-time novelists Caroline Preston, Suzanne Berne and Mameve Medwed, and author Alexandra Marshall will discuss and sign their books.

Avid readers won't want to miss the four warm, witty and wonderful women writers who will speak. Alexandra Marshall ("Something Borrowed"), Caroline Preston ("Jackie by Josie"), Suzanne Berne ("A Crime in the Neighborhood"), and Mameve Medwed ("Mail") have written engaging, poignant and sometimes just plain funny novels. All the books are a treat to read — and discuss.

Call Buttonwood at (617) 383-2665 to reserve your place at $10 per person for a morning of coffee and conversation.

OBITUARIES

John C. Ryan

John C. Ryan of Cohasset died May 23 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth following a brief illness.

He worked in the shoe industry for 40 years and retired in 1992.

Mr. Ryan was born in Boston and raised in West Roxbury. He attended Boston public schools. He lived in Cohasset for more than 30 years.

He leaves his wife, Kathleen (Taylor) Ryan; a daughter, Jill of Cohasset; four sisters, Mary Christie, Helen Mertic and Carol Gillis of Scituate, and Marion Hession of Quincy; and a granddaughter, Katelyn T. Ryan. He was the father of the late John T. Ryan.

A funeral Mass was celebrated May 27 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Joslin Diabetes Clinic, 1 Joslin Place, Boston, 02215.

Marguerite Hill

Marguerite Leahy Hill, 79, of Cohasset, a community activist, died May 31 at home after a brief illness.

Mrs. Hill was one of the founders of the South Shore Art Center, where she taught calligraphy, Chinese painting and stitchery. She was an accomplished pianist and was extensively involved in programs which supported the South Shore Service League, volunteering for many years with both the Cohasset Consignment Shop and Meals on Wheels.

She was a member of the Cohasset Yacht Club and the Cohasset Golf Club. She was a team golfer and bowler, tennis player and bridge player.

Mrs. Hill was born in Brookline and lived in Cohasset since 1950. She was a graduate of the Choate School in Brookline and earned art degrees from the Chamberlain School of Design in 1935 and Vesper George School of Art in 1937. At the age of 62, she returned to college and graduated with honors from Boston University in 1972, with a double major of English literature and art history.

Wife of the late Edgar D. Hill, she leaves three sons, E. David Hill of Naples, Fla., Brian A. Hill of Wellesley and Roger Q. Hill of Cohasset; two daughters, Deborah H. Bornheimer of Duxbury and Elizabeth H. McLoughlin of Brookline; two brothers, Francis T. Leahy of Bethesda, Md. and Paul R. Leahy of Boston; four sisters, Helen Steverman of Newton, Elizabeth Dennis of West Roxbury, Priscilla Blue of Brookline and Anne Moore of Needham; nine grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 3 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was private.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home handled the arrangements.

James Graham Jr.

James M. Graham Jr., 79, of Cohasset, an attorney and a decorated veteran of World War II, died May 31 at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston after a brief illness.

He was a former chairman of the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals and a member of the planning board.

Mr. Graham was a well-known hockey player and coach. He played at Boston College High School and was among the first hockey players at Georgetown University. He continued playing in senior leagues when he was more than 70 years old.

He was coach of several youths hockey teams in Weymouth, including a bantam league champion.

Mr. Graham was the former president of Forest Hills Cooperative Bank for 20 years.

He practiced law at his family's firm, Graham, Gargan and Sullivan, and later at Morrison, Mahoney and Miller in Boston. He was a member of the Boston Bar Association and the Norfolk Bar Association.

An Army Air Corps veteran of World War II, Mr. Graham earned five flying medals, including the Distinguished Flying Cross. He flew B-24s out of England and served as an operations officer and squadron commander.

He later served in the Massachusetts National Guard, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

An avid boater, he was a member of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club and the Satuit Boat Club.

He was a graduate of Boston College High School, Georgetown University and Boston College Law School.

Mr. Graham was a Cohasset resident for 45 years.

He leaves his wife, Joan (Benoit) Graham; four sons, James M. Graham III and Peter J. Graham, both of Scituate, Eugene B. Graham of Reading a Richard A. Graham of Winchester; a daughter, M Graham Beer of Quechee, Vt.; three sisters, Angeli Graham of Brookline, Mary Brogan of Philadelphia and Marguerite Stevenson of Marshfield; and seven grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 4 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Donations in Mr. Graham's memory, may be made to St. Anthony's Church, 129 S. Main St., Cohasset 02025.

Joseph A. Dunn

Joseph A. Dunn, 75, of Cohasset, a former vice president of Rockland Trust Co., died May 30 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

He retired in 1985 after 38 years of service with the bank.

Mr. Dunn was a World War II veteran and served in the Army Medical Corps in Italy and North Africa.

He was a member of the Marshfield Country Club and the Cohasset Yacht Club.

An accomplished musician, he played the clarinet and the saxophone.

Mr. Dunn had been a resident of Cohasset since 1957. He was a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and a 1944 graduate of Harvard College.

He leaves his wife, Ann M. (Kenney) Dunn; two daughters, Susan M. Hassey of Scituate and Melissa A. Dunn of Boston; a brother, Robert R. Dunn of Duxbury; and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 3 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Holy Family Cemetery, Rockland.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Town Mourns Loss of Local Environmentalist

Hubbard Remembered for Love of Conservation

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Monday afternoon, John F. "Jack" Hubbard, died doing what he loved — rowing out from Little Harbor in his favorite boat Cohasset Comet.

Friends, acquaintances and loved ones are mourning the loss of the 73-year-old Cohasset resident, whose body was found on the outskirts of Cohasset Harbor after a local sailor discovered an empty rowing shell.

Hubbard's wife, June, called the harbormaster's office about 3:45 p.m. just a few minutes after the sailing ves-

Class of 1997 Graduates Told to Keep Smiling

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The town's best and brightest took center stage at the Music Cirus Sunday for the Cohasset High School Class of 1997 commencement exercises.

About 800 family and friends crowded into the big top for the traditional student-oriented graduation which added a new twist this year — an extra speech because the class yielded two vale-

MBTA Asks State for Route 3A Station Signal

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Selectmen hope the town will get a traffic light at the proposed Route 3A train station and are encouraged by a recent letter from the MBTA to the state highway department asking for one.

The MBTA has asked the Massachusetts Highway Department for a traffic light on Route 3A at the train station which will be built at the site of the former skating rink where Barry Waste Recycling is located.

The station and proposed signal are part of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project which includes the Greenbush Line that runs through Cohasset along the old railroad right of way.

Selectman Diane Sullivan, who sits on the Greenbush Mitigation Committee, said the letter was positive and a sign that the town is "chugging along" in its dealings with the MBTA.

Selectman Merle Brown stressed that the town get any promises in writing from the T.

Earlier this spring MBTA Manager of Environmental Affairs Andrew Brennan said he would make a formal request to the MHD on the town's behalf although at the time he said he

James Graham Jr.

James M. Graham Jr., 79, of Cohasset, an attorney and a decorated veteran of World War II, died May 31 at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston after a brief illness.

He was a former chairman of the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals and a member of the planning board.

Mr. Graham was a well-known hockey player and coach. He played at Boston College High School and was among the first hockey players at Georgetown University. He continued playing in senior leagues when he was more than 70 years old.

He was coach of several youths hockey teams in Weymouth, including a bantam league champion.

Mr. Graham was the former president of Forest Hills Cooperative Bank for 20 years.

He practiced law at his family's firm, Graham, Gargan and Sullivan, and later at Morrison, Mahoney and Miller in Boston. He was a member of the Boston Bar Association and the Norfolk Bar Association.

An Army Air Corps veteran of World War II, Mr. Graham earned five flying medals, including the Distinguished Flying Cross. He flew B-24s out of England and served as an operations officer and squadron commander.

He later served in the Massachusetts National Guard, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

An avid boater, he was a member of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club and the Satuit Boat Club.

He was a graduate of Boston College High School, Georgetown University and Boston College Law School.

Mr. Graham was a Cohasset resident for 45 years.

He leaves his wife, Joan (Benoit) Graham; four sons, James M. Graham III and Peter J. Graham, both of Scituate, Eugene B. Graham of Reading a· Richard A. Graham of Winchester; a daughter, M Graham Beer of Quechee, Vt.; three sisters, Angeli Graham of Brookline, Mary Brogan of Philadelphia and Marguerite Stevenson of Marshfield; and seven grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 4 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Donations in Mr. Graham's memory, may be made to St. Anthony's Church, 129 S. Main St., Cohasset 02025.

Joseph A. Dunn

Joseph A. Dunn, 75, of Cohasset, a former vice president of Rockland Trust Co., died May 30 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

He retired in 1985 after 38 years of service with the bank.

Mr. Dunn was a World War II veteran and served in the Army Medical Corps in Italy and North Africa.

He was a member of the Marshfield Country Club and the Cohasset Yacht Club.

An accomplished musician, he played the clarinet and the saxophone.

Mr. Dunn had been a resident of Cohasset since 1957. He was a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and a 1944 graduate of Harvard College.

He leaves his wife, Ann M. (Kenney) Dunn; two daughters, Susan M. Hassey of Scituate and Melissa A. Dunn of Boston; a brother, Robert R. Dunn of Duxbury; and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 3 at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Holy Family Cemetery, Rockland.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. handled the arrangements.

Town Mourns Loss of Local Environmentalist

Hubbard Remembered for Love of Conservation

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Monday afternoon, John F. "Jack" Hubbard, died doing what he loved — rowing out from Little Harbor in his favorite boat Cohasset Comet.

Friends, acquaintances and loved ones are mourning the loss of the 73-year-old Cohasset resident, whose body was found on the outskirts of Cohasset Harbor after a local sailor discovered an empty rowing shell.

Hubbard's wife, June, called the harbormaster's office about 3:45 p.m. just a few minutes after the sailing ves-

Class of 1997 Graduates Told to Keep Smiling

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

The town's best and brightest took center stage at the Music Cirus Sunday for the Cohasset High School Class of 1997 commencement exercises.

About 800 family and friends crowded into the big top for the traditional student-oriented graduation which added a new twist this year — an extra speech because the class yielded two vale-

MBTA Asks State for Route 3A Station Signal

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Selectmen hope the town will get a traffic light at the proposed Route 3A train station and are encouraged by a recent letter from the MBTA to the state highway department asking for one.

The MBTA has asked the Massachusetts Highway Department for a traffic light on Route 3A at the train station which will be built at the site of the former skating rink where Barry Waste Recycling is located.

The station and proposed signal are part of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project which includes the Greenbush Line that runs through Cohasset along the old railroad right of way.

Selectman Diane Sullivan, who sits on the Greenbush Mitigation Committee, said the letter was positive and a sign that the town is "chugging along" in its dealings with the MBTA.

Selectman Merle Brown stressed that the town get any promises in writing from the T.

Earlier this spring MBTA Manager of Environmental Affairs Andrew Brennan said he would make a formal request to the MHD on the town's behalf although at the time he said he

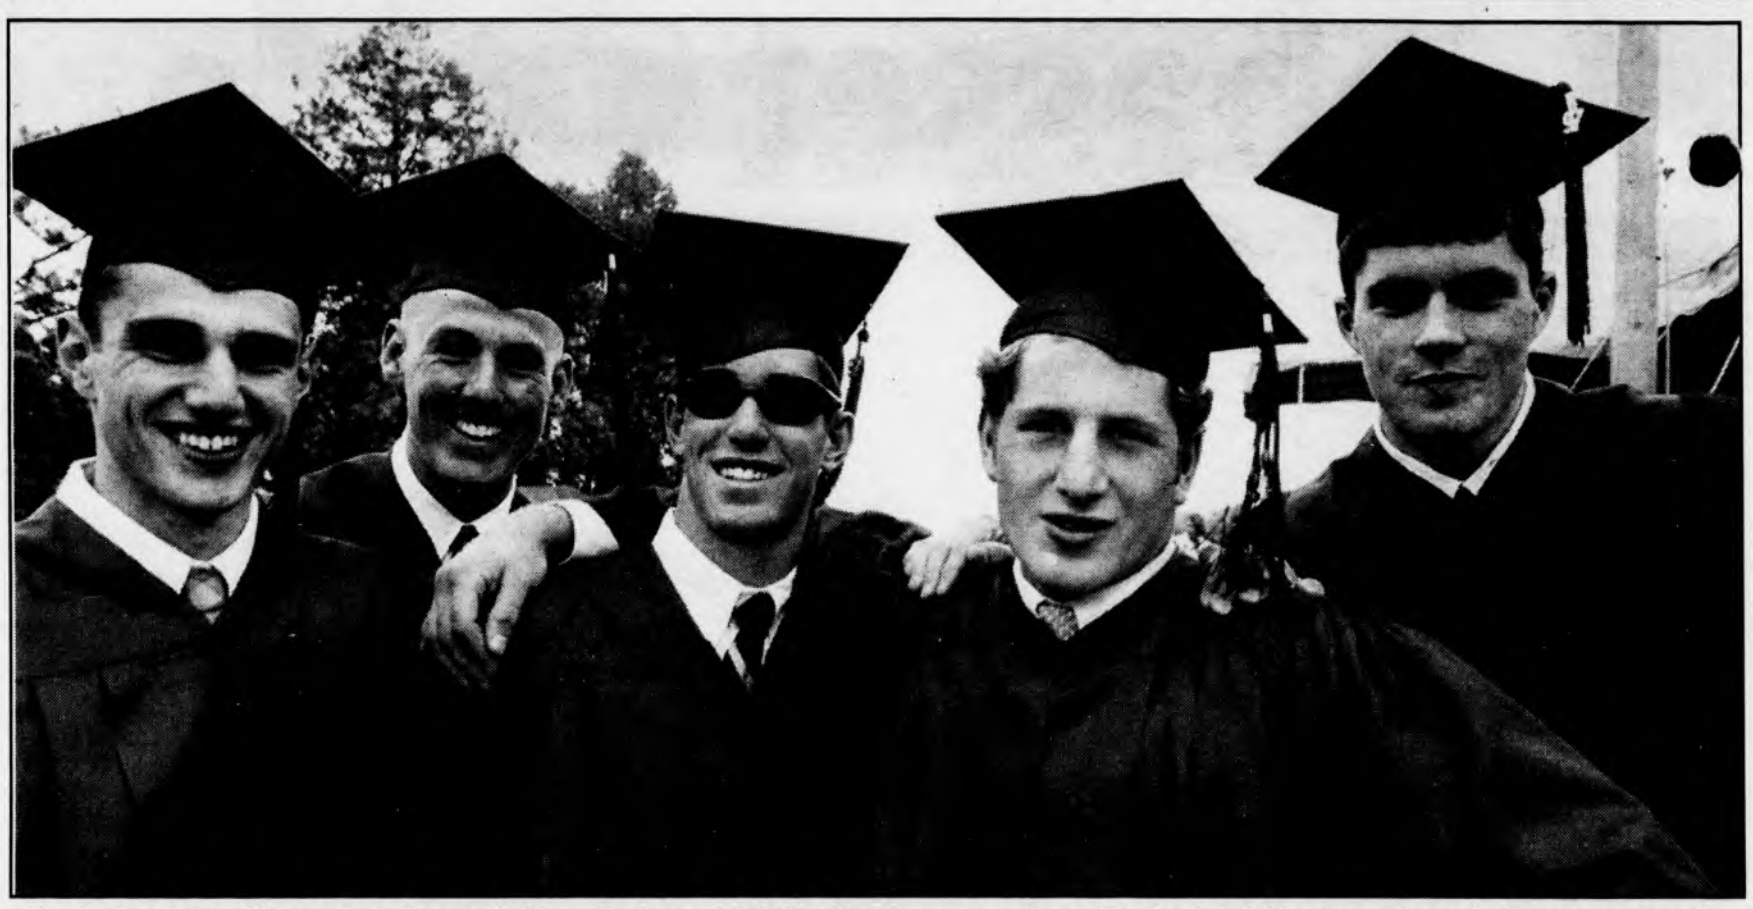
Thirty Apply for Town Manager

Selectmen will start interviewing the 11 top candidates from a pool of about 30 applicants for the town manager position tonight. They will continue the interviews which will take place in executive session on Monday evening.

Executive sessions to screen candidates are allowed under the state Open Meeting Law. Interviews with finalists must be held in open session, interim Town Administrator Ed McCann said.



They hope to hire a town manager by July 1 and have him or her on board by August 1. The salary will be about $60,000 but selectmen say they may have to go back to town meeting and ask for more depending on what the candidates are seeking.

They plan to ask the candidates a range of questions on their personnel, budgetary, and procurement expertise and their knowledge of Massachusetts General Laws.

In a related matter, the Government Structure Committee is holding a meeting to discuss the switch to the town manager form of government at 7:30 p.m., June 18 at town hall. That meeting will be open to the public.

Member Ann Swanborg said the committee agreed to host the meeting to address any concerns that any boards of committees have.

They asked that McCann attend and said that Tom Gruber, the lead signer on the citizens petition opting for at town manager that passed at town meeting, will also be there.

Notice to Water Customers

Construction will continue on Pond Street for the next couple of weeks. Please be aware that discoloration may occur when the new water main is turned on, the water department said.

Step Rate Increase Approved

Selectmen approved a raise for accounting clerk Mary Farrell. Her hourly rate will go to $11.82 from $11.27 effective June 14.

Board of Health Reorganizes

Alix P. White replaces member Tom Cook as the chairman of the three-member board of health. Member Kevin M. Ulmer will serve as clerk.

Ambulance Billing Update

The town has collected $109, 138.10 through May in fiscal year 1997 which ends June 30. The town is owed $116,496.31 for transports this year, according to the fire department.

In May the town billed for 19 ambulance transports for a total of $6,809.17 and collected $11,128.60.

Payments that are collected for ambulance transports are applied to invoices from all previous fiscal years as well as the current year.

Mosquito Committee Members Sought

Selectmen are seeking two more volunteers to serve on the Mosquito Control Committee. They warn that this is going to be a bad year for the pesky insects and hope that some citizens will come forward to sit on the committee which looks at ways to control the mosquito population in town. It also tries to educate citizens on how to keep mosquitoes from breeding in their own yards. Anyone who is interested in serving should call the selectmen's office at 383-9900 or stop by the office which is on the second floor of town hall.

Antique Auto Show to Boost Programs

Drug & Alcohol Committee Plots Course

By Stacey K. Powers
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Drug & Alcohol Committee made a unanimous vote Tuesday night to hold an antique car show next June to raise funds for various programs and events.

Proposed by Lisa Matos, Cohasset Police Department representative to the group, the car show would feature various classes, makes and models of antique cars that have been fully restored to their original splendor.

"These shows are great fun for the whole family," Matos said.

Invited guests at Tuesday's meeting were officer John Small of the Cohasset Police Department and Cohasset resident Kenny Thayer, also members of an organization that caters to antique car lovers who explained the procedures of hosting a car show for potentially 125 to 250 cars. In June, 1996, Small helped put together a benefit car show in Hingham to raise funds for the family of Scituate resident Lee Hazen, who is in a coma following a serious automobile accident.

"This would be a great opportunity for the whole community to participate in a worthwhile cause," Small said.

Based on his experience, Small added that local merchants would be invited to participate by placing ads in a program booklet sponsoring the event or donating merchandise and materials.

> 'This would be a great opportunity for the whole community to participate in a worthwhile cause,.'
> — Police Officer John Small.

"When everybody pitches in it really makes a difference," he said.

Each car would pay a $10 fee to participate. An admission fee of approximately $2 would also be charged for adults and children over the age of ten. Senior citizens and kids under the age of ten would be admitted free. Trophies would be awarded at the end of the show for various categories. Committee member Rev. E. Clifford Cutler suggested a table at the show be set up with information concerning the dangers of drinking and driving as well as other related drug and alcohol literature to further promote the group's cause.

Another proposal for raising funds was made by Liz Bates, interested resident, who suggested picking up and disposing of Christmas trees after the holidays and charging $10-$15.

CASA Network

In other business, the committee has created a brochure that will be mailed to approximately 5,000 households which will also include a letter from Mike Gill, director of health education at Cohasset High School, and police chief Brian Noonan, as well as a return pledge card for all members of the family to sign indicating their participation in the group's recently launched CASA program. Based on the town's former Safe Homes program, CASA is a network for parents to be able to make sure that their children spend their free time in a healthy, supportive drug and alcohol-free environment. Parents will receive a list of other participating families which can be used as a valuable guide in planning or approving a teenager's social activities.

In a discussion led by committee member Nan Roth, who is also on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, the group discussed recruiting additional youth representatives from different grade levels to participate in Drug & Alcohol Committee related activities. The committee currently has two youth representatives from Cohasset High School: Jami Butman and Tony Bramblett, both 16-year-old sophomores. Also discussed was the possibility of creating another teen center for older kids on the site of the former highway department headquarters in the town parking lot.

"The board of selectmen have been seeking proposals for that particular building and I think this could be a viable situation," Roth said.

Voter Registration is Ongoing

As the May 3 Annual Town Election is past, the Town Clerk would like to remind citizens that voter registration is an ongoing process.

Since July 1, 1994, new voters have been able to register without the need to come to town hall. Registration forms are available at the Town Hall, Registry, Post Office, Library, Department of Welfare, WIC, AFDC, Medicaid, Army Recruitment offices, and other offices that provide services to people with disabilities. Affidavits of registration are mailed to the clerk's office or sent electronically through the computer from the Registry. After certifying the affidavit, an acknowledgment notice is then mailed to the voter. The central voter registry maintains a statewide list of all registered voters in Massachusetts. This computerized listing is essential in prohibiting voter registration fraud.

In addition to broadening the opportunity to register to vote, the motor voter law also changes the way in which voters may be removed from the voting list. A voter may not be removed from the voting list on the ground that the registrant has changed his residence unless the registrant: Confirms in writing that he has moved to a place outside the registrar's jurisdiction registers in another city or town; or Fails to respond to a confirmation notice and has not voted in the second general election for Federal office after the date of the notice. Registration closes 20 days before an election and Annual Town Meeting (10 days before a Special Town Meeting). Citizens may register during this period, but will not be able to vote at that election.

sel Cotton Tail radioed in about the empty boat. Mrs. Hubbard was concerned because she hadn't heard from her husband who was overdue, said Assistant Harbormaster Robert Baggs.

In good weather, Hubbard regularly rowed from his home on Little Harbor out to Minot's Light and back.

Lobstermen Bill Kelly and Scott Herzog and Baggs headed out in Kelly's boat and went to the scene where Hubbard's boat was discovered.

"We knew right away whose it was, it had Cohasset Comet on the side," said Baggs, who alerted the Coast Guard, which as it turned out wasn't needed.

"We started a circular, ever widening search and found Mr. Hubbard about 1/4 mile north and west of the location of his boat," he said.

A family spokesman said Tuesday the family was notified by the state medical examiner's office that Hubbard died of natural causes.

Hubbard was a skillful rower and competed in many races, which he usually won, recalls his best friend John Hartshorne of Border Street.

In a 1993 Cohasset Mariner interview, Hubbard said living on the ocean made rowing a natural sport for him.

"Having the ocean right here makes rowing such a natural thing," he said. "I'm just very fortunate to have it."

He said he enjoyed the independence that rowing provides and the challenge of racing.

"Everything is up to you. That's the appeal to me," he said.

But Hubbard is best known around town for his passion for the environment.

"Jack was an environmentalist with a capital E," said Hartshorne.

"He was one of the early ones long before it was a popular idea. He was sensitive to the needs of protecting earth resources, all types of birds and animals in particular.

"He played that out in many ways and translated his ideas into action," Hartshorne said.

Hubbard served as one of the town's first members of the conservation commission. He was a member of the recycling committee since its inception a decade ago. He served as a director of the Manomet Bird Observatory in the Plymouth area, a nationally known organization which identifies and bands birds.

He was president of the board of directors of Hull Lifesaving Museum which includes a rowing program and was a director of the Alden Ocean Shell Association, a rowing organization.

Hubbard, a former director of the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham, continued to support the center.

"He would bike around town and pick up every can and bottle you can see with all the proceeds going to the center," Hartshorne said.

Jack Hubbard had a keen interest in recycling. Here he demonstrates a special composter for home use at the RTF.

Hubbard cared about all living creatures.

He lobbied to have "don't feed the ducks" educational signs posted around the duck pond on the common, so the birds would be self-sufficient and fly south in the winter. The signs explain the unhealthy consequences feeding has for the ducks.

A founder and director of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private group dedicated to preserving land as open space, Hubbard also served on the town's open space committee and Turkey Hill working group.

Susan Cope of Beechwood Street, who is chairman of the open space committee, admired Hubbard's energy and dedication to conservation.

"He had boundless enthusiasm for nature and the outdoors. He inspired appreciation for nature and the environment in recycling, open space acquisition, outdoor recreation and nature appreciation," Cope said.

"He was a leader by example — he was not just talk, he did all the time."

Cope said Hubbard worked hard to help make the Turkey Hill acquisition a reality. The purchase and sale agreement was signed last month. The property is now co-owned by Hingham and Cohasset and is being managed by the Trustees of Reservations, a non-profit organization that also has jurisdiction over World's End and Thayer and Whitney Woods.

In the weekly feature "Picture This" a year ago, Hubbard told the Mariner his goal was to help acquire Turkey Hill for the town.

"I am pleased he was around to see the final acquisition," Cope said, recalling how Hubbard hosted all the Turkey Hill "working group" meetings at his Beach Street home.

"I feel the loss personally and for the community, Jack was a dedicated conservationist," she said.

Arthur Lehr, chairman of the recycling committee, said Hubbard will leave a gap in a lot of lives and organizations.

"I'll miss him, his personal friends will miss him and the town will miss him," he said.

OBITUARY

John Hubbard

Jack Hubbard was doing what he truly loved best on Monday afternoon, June 9 – rowing on calm waters on a beautiful, sunny day near Minot's Light. He suffered a "quiet heart attack," and died quickly and peacefully, with no water in his lungs. He died as he lived – one with nature.

Jack Hubbard was born in Cambridge in 1924. As a child, he summered in Cohasset on Little Harbor, and early on he developed a deep love for the ocean, as well as for the birds that migrated over it and the wetlands that edged it.

As a career, he engineered oceanographic and sonar equipment for Massa Co. in Hingham. Upon his retirement, he was able to explore his natural interests with more time and passion. He helped start two organizations, Manomet Observatory and the New England Wildlife Center, to provide research and educational opportunities for scientists and school kids alike.

His many years of active service on the Cohasset Conservation Commission and as chairman of the Conservation Trust helped to insure the natural preservation of some of the most beautiful parts of Cohasset and its neighboring communities. He was also an early proponent of recycling and shared his knowledge of organic gardening, composting and other environmentally sound techniques with like-minded people.

As a board member, he helped to revitalize the Hull Life Saving Museum and contributed greatly to the restoration of the original life-saving station from 1889, which today brings history to life for many visiting school groups. The museum also sponsors a maritime program which continues to challenge and inspire organized classes of troubled, inner-city children.

Above all, Mr. Hubbard loved to row and was thrilled to convert others to his passion. He developed a large, loyal fan club of friends, both young and old, who were guided and encouraged by him over the years. He was a member of the Riverside Boat Club in Cambridge and one of the high points of each fall for him since 1979, was rowing in the Head of the Charles, single shell division. His personal best was fifth place in 1988 at the age of 64, but he made his friends and family proud every year as they cheered him on from the banks. He raced almost weekly during the season, from short courses to vigorous, six-mile routes off the coast of Maine. But Jack Hubbard was truly happy when he was alone, with just the currents, the sun, the wind, the ocean birds, and his own vitality for companionship. He rowed every day, staying youthful and strong. He was loved, and will be missed by many.

He leaves his wife, June Swain Hubbard, a brother, Eliot Hubbard Jr., a sister, Celia Hubbard, four children, Sarah Hubbard Krieger, John Hubbard, Peter Hubbard, Jennifer Hubbard Alba, and five grandchildren. A memorial service will be held Saturday, June 14, at 11 a.m. at the Unitarian First Parish Church. In lieu of flowers, contributions can be made to the Hull Life Saving Museum, P.O. Box 221, Hull 02045, and the New England Wild Life Center, 19 Fort Hill St., Hingham, 02043.

His ashes will be scattered on the outgoing tide from Little Harbor at some later date.

Don't miss anything that happens around town.

Rizzo to Remain on Train Mitigation Committee

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

In an apparent about face, selectmen backed off demanding Dean Rizzo resign from the Greenbush Mitigation Committee because of comments he made to the Cohasset Mariner on the village train station.

Selectman Merle Brown's motion to oust Rizzo from the committee Monday failed for lack of a second.

"Town meeting voted against the village station twice," said Brown adding he didn't think it was right for Rizzo to speak out on the station location.

In a letter to the board, Rizzo said he refused to resign and said he would not only step down as chairman if his fellow board members asked him to.

Selectman Diane Sullivan, who is now a full member of the mitigation committee, said Rizzo was held in high esteem and has done a fine job on the committee.

She said everyone is entitled to their personal viewpoint on an issue.

Two weeks ago, selectmen told Rizzo he would have to be silent on the village station if he wanted to remain on the committee on which he serves as chairman. They were outraged at the time by a Cohasset Mariner story which ran the previous week and focused on how some village businesses feel left out of the decision process on where the train station should be located and long for a study on the village station.

Resident Gail Whitehouse, a vocal opponent of the village station, said Rizzo did not have the town's wider interests at heart.

"He stands for business. It's business interests he is looking out for. I have lost faith with him as chairman," she said.

But Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan pointed out that Rizzo is the Chamber of Commerce's representative on the committee on which other factions are represented including conservation and citizens-at-large.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said the mitigation committee is not dealing with location of the station, which selectmen said is a dead issue, but will work toward ways to abate issues such as noise and vibration.

"The station (on Route 3A) is a done deal. It is in all the state plans," she said.

Last fall, selectmen held an informal, non-binding straw poll outside town meeting on the train station location issue. The Route 3A site at the former skating rink won by a wide margin over the village station site. At the annual town meeting in March, voters rejected 78-57 a study and a non-binding vote to reconsider the downtown site.

thought it had little chance of approval.

"The MBTA is willing to provide traffic controls, roadway reconstruction and other measures which would reduce any traffic impacts on Route 3A to improve conditions for our patrons," Brennan wrote. "The Town of Cohasset is also interested in the traffic conditions at this station and has suggested a light as a means to improve traffic flow in and out of the station and on Route 3A."

Brennan explained the station will accommodate 300 parked cars as well as "kiss and ride" commuters.

The May 26 letter was good news to selectmen, who think their meeting earlier last month with state Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes may be paying off. The meeting was arranged by Brennan to ask Kerasiotes and MBTA general manager Patrick Moynihan to reconsider a list of mitigation items rejected by the MBTA. Selectmen Merle Brown and Diane Sullivan attended along with conservation commissioners Veneta Roebuck and Thomas Callahan and Greenbush Mitigation Committee members Dean Rizzo and Michael Dick.

In his letter to the state highway department, Brennan says the intersection is not likely to meet the MHD warrants for placement of a new traffic signal but stressed the MBTA believes there is a strong case to be made that a traffic light is needed at this intersection.

Brennan asked the MHD to consider authorizing the signal for the following reasons:

- the light would reduce delays for commuter rail patrons exiting the station in the afternoon and for drivers dropping off or picking up passengers at the station;
- there is a relatively long distance between signals on Route 3A and a traffic signal would help create gaps in the traffic stream to allow vehicles to enter Route 3A from side streets and businesses'
- this location is an important entrance to Wompatuck State Park and other open space. Hikers and cyclists will cross Route 3A at this point to get from the commuter rail station to a dirt trail which leads to the park. A signal at this location would allow this crossing to occur with improved safety, Brennan said.

Brennan said the MBTA would cover the cost of the signal as part of the construction of the commuter rail project.

He invited MHD officials to visit the site.

"We believe there is a compelling public interest in allowing the signal to be put in place," he said.

Gospel Concert at First Parish

First Parish of Cohasset, Main Street, Cohasset, will present the New Temple Singers, under the direction of David Coleman, in a gospel concert Saturday, June 21, at 8 p.m., as part of Cohasset's Arts Festival/Harborfest celebration. For this, the fifth of the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church of Cohasset's annual gospel concert, the well known gospel singer Ruth Hamilton will provide musical solos, in addition to the choir's repertoire.

Hamilton, who has been singing in the Boston area for more than 50 years, has performed in Symphony Hall with Arthur Fielder and the Boston Pops, in France with the Patterson Chorale, in Jordan Hall and at the Gardner Museum, but mostly, in church. She will be accompanied by Carolyn Curtis, music director, First Parish.

The New Temple Singers is a mixed chorus of singers who perform contemporary and original gospel music. The choir, which can also be heard in regular Sunday worship services at St. Paul AME Church (Rev. Dr. Leroy Attles, Pastor) in Cambridge, has two recordings among its achievements.

Director Coleman, a native of Tennessee, is a graduate of Boston University with degrees in composition and piano, and has composed and arranged several of the New Temple Singers musical selections.

Hamilton and the New Temple Singers will perform in the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common.

Tickets are $7, (but only $5 with a Harborfest Button). Tickets, as well as buttons, are available at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church office, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Call 383-1100 for tickets or information.

Wellspring Walkfest to Feature Sand Sculpture Contest

On Saturday, June 14, when Wellspring Multiservice Center hosts its annual Walkfest, the new dimension of art will be added to the festivities. Nantasket Beach, right in front of the Bernie King Pavilion, will be the site of the first annual sand sculpture contest, with free admission and an array of fantastic prizes.

All artists, young and old, serious sculptors and whimsical artists alike, are invited to participate. Wellspring and nature will supply the sand and water. Bring your own tools and buckets. Starting time is anytime after 9 a.m., when you can register for a sandspace. Judging time will be 11:30 a.m. Bring your ideas, your family or fellow artists, your entire class, or just yourself and your fans, if you are a fiercely independent sculptor, but be sure to come. There will be an old-fashioned brick-in-the-sand treasure hunt for young children, and of course, the 10k beach walk, all to support the good work of the Wellspring Multiservice Center. Call 925-3211 for more information.

The Whitmans Set a School System Record!

Twins Chad and Mark Whitman graduated from Cohasset High School last Saturday, and with them went a record of sorts — after 24 years, Peter and Blanche Whitman will no longer have a child in the Cohasset school system! The Whitman gents have been such an intricate part of the schools, whatever they attempted, they excelled at! We certainly wish Mark and Chad the best as they follow their scholastic careers, and hope that they keep in touch with us!

News from Bob Martin this week, the Cohasset WebPage is On-Line! They are starting small but they hope that you will help them grow and grow! Organizations are encouraged to provide information on scheduled activities and other pertinent information. Everyone is encouraged to give the Cohasset WebPage comments and suggestions. They ask that you take a look at WWW.COHASSETMA.COM. If you wish to participate, please fax them at (617) 383-3109.

Hats off to Anna Abbruzzese, the Farmers' Market is underway again! And it will run every Thursday from 3 to 7 p.m. through Oct. 9. The market will be held on the Cohasset Common this year, and it will hold 15 vendors (they have room for one or two more; if you are interested, give the market coordinators a call: Anna Abbruzzese at 383-9539 or Barbara Anglin at 383-2284). Vendors will be selling many different things, such as plants, flowers, homegrown produce — even lobsters! Watch out, Stop and Shop! Go, have fun (there will be various folk artists performing on the first Thursday of each month).

This Friday and Saturday are BIG, that's when the American Cancer Society's "Relay For Life" will take place. The event will be held at the Cohasset alumni field track. Teams of eight to 12 people will walk or run in designated shifts. The teams must keep one member on the track for the whole 24 hours. They will have a great time — music, food, games etc. will be there, and they will have luminaries around the track in memory of loved ones (or in prayer for one you know). If you aren't running, purchase a luminary from a committee member! By the way, the committee has worked long and hard to make this a success, support them any way you can! Even if it's to encourage teams along the way!

Lots of you remember Charlie Brady, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Brady of Brewster Road fame, right? Get this — Charlie was in a charity golf tournament recently, it took place in Atlanta. Charlie shot a hole-in-one and won a BMW roadster worth $31,500 for his efforts! And, he was using the same set of clubs that he used when he was a sophomore at Cohasset High as a member of the golf team! Charlie's coach, Jim Franey, must be so proud! We sure are!

Had news regarding Melinda Johansen this week; she attained dean's list status at Simmons College for this semester! Not only that, she was named a Healthnet Fellow, so she will be teaching public school teachers all about the program that Simmons runs on the Internet!

Happy belated birthday greetings go to Elinor Kennedy this week — Elinor turned 95 June 6, although you'd never know it! Did you know that she still writes beautiful poetry? What a wonderful woman! Here's to the next 95 years, Elinor!

Attention seniors — there will be a complimentary luncheon at the Iron Kettle Inn in Hanover Wednesday, June 25, at 12:30 p.m. The Cushing chorus will perform for a sit-down meal which will include clam chowder, your choice of baked chicken or schrod, dessert and beverage. The Iron Kettle Inn presently serves as a work-training program for developmentally disabled students enrolled at Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center. Tours will be available following the luncheon to guests who wish to visit the retail center. Please RSVP by June 20, by calling Jane Spitz at (617) 826-6371 and indicate your name, phone number and choice of entree.

Finally, we hope that you will support the efforts of the Sandy Beach Association and donate what you can to aid them in the giant beach clean-up effort that they have ahead of them! Your parking sticker fee, it doesn't help them — it goes directly to the town of Cohasset to maintain the parking lot, not the beach. If you contribute, you will receive an "I Love Sandy Beach" sticker in appreciation of your support. Opening day is June 14; won't it be nice to display your new sticker at that time!

That's the news from here, be sure to inform me as to your latest event! Give me a call, or drop me a note, that's all it takes!

Obituaries

Florin J. Hailer Jr.

Florin J. "Sonny" Hailer, Jr., 79, of Scituate, vice president of Whittaker, Clark & Daniels Chemical Company of New Jersey, died Saturday, June 7, at the Life Care Center of the South Shore.

He served as a Navy flight instructor during World War II, training many notable pilots, including Red Sox star Ted Williams.

Mr. Hailer was born in Brighton and raised in Scarsdale, N.Y. He moved to Newton at age 16 and graduated from Boston College High School in 1937.

He was a graduate of Bridgeton Academy in Maine, and attended Holy Cross College. An excellent athlete, he set several track records at the Boston Garden, and was selected to represent Bridgeton Academy at the Penn Relays in Philadelphia. He also played running back in football.

After the war, Mr. Hailer entered the chemical industry. He traveled throughout the northeast by car or train, never flying again after the war.

He was a member of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club for 40 years and was also a member of the Hatherly Country Club in Scituate, Algonquin Club and Clover Club of Boston, and the New England Chemical Club.

He was active at the Scituate Youth Center, and coached football and baseball for over 20 years.

He leaves his wife, Marion E. (Carroll) Hailer; two sons, Andy Hailer of Cohasset and Fred Hailer of Boston; five daughters, Nancy McKinnon of New York, Mary Lee Graham of Scituate, Beth Kennedy of Los Altos, Calif., June Powers of Scituate and Janet Mahoney of Madison, N.J.; two brothers, Robert Hailer of Wellesley and Donald Hailer of Park Ridge, N.J.; two sisters, Janet McGrath of Atlantis, Fla., and Claire Dennis of Waban; and 15 grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated June 10 at St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Church. Burial was in Cudworth Cemetery.

Donations may be made to St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Church, Hood Road, Scituate 02066.

Molly Wood Cooney

Molly Wood Cooney, 73, formerly of Cohasset died recently at Mediplex of Weymouth after a long illness.

Mrs. Cooney was born in Cambridge and raised in the Brookline section of Chestnut Hill.

She was a graduate of Dana Hall School in Wellesley and the Katherine Gibbs School in Boston. She was a member of the Junior League of Boston for several years.

For over 20 years she gave her time to Boston Lying In Hospital.

Mrs. Cooney was a member of the Longwood Cricket Club in Brookline, the Cohasset Tennis Club and the Cohasset Yacht Club.

During a visit to London in 1948, she was presented to King George IV and Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace. She was an enthusiastic follower of the Windsor House for the rest of her life.

She was a Cohasset resident for 20 years before moving to Weymouth 10 years ago.

She leaves her husband, William J. Cooney, Jr.; two sons, George Philip Smart Cooney of Dedham and William J. Cooney III of Carlisle; two brothers, John E. Wood of Marlboro and Henry F. Wood, Jr. of Short Hills, N.J.; two granddaughters; two nieces and two nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church. A graveside service took place at the Walnut Hills Cemetery in Brookline.

Arrangements were provided by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to St. Anthony's Church, 129 Main St., Cohasset 02025, to benefit the youth center building fund.

JUST WHAT IS "SEVERE"?

▶ Many car owners ignore the severe maintenance schedule intervals in their automobile's owner's manuals in the belief that their driving styles do not qualify them for the more frequent maintenance recommendations. The fact is, however, that the "normal" driving that many of us find ourselves doing actually qualifies as severe. This condition includes such behavior as extended driving in stop-and-go traffic, undertaking many successive short trips, driving in dusty conditions, extended high-speed driving, and running the engine under a heavy load (towing). Anyone who subjects his or her car to these types of use should subscribe to the more frequent severe-driving maintenance schedule in the owner's manual.

▶ It pays to take care of your car with regular tune-ups, oil changes, and check-ups--that way you can ensure you will be receiving your car's top performance and will be extending its useful life. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, we run our shop like a family, and our customers and employees are part of that family. Our experienced technicians uphold our reputation for service excellence with their courteous, attentive response to your concerns. Visit us at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A (383-9090).

HINT

Subjecting a car to long periods of highway driving does not qualify as severe because a fully warmed-up engine driving at highway speeds is operating at peak efficiency and is practically wear-free.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

The World Classroom

Already, they have seen the best of times and the worst of times; the Class of 1997 that graduated from Cohasset High School Saturday.

Maybe they learned from the events in the world classroom as much as they learned in the classrooms at dear old HHS, the things their fathers' generation never did.

They were first graders when their fellow Americans recognized the first Martin Luther King Day as an official holiday; and the space shuttle Challenger exploded after lift off, killing six astronauts and Christa McAuliffe.

It seems like only yesterday . . .

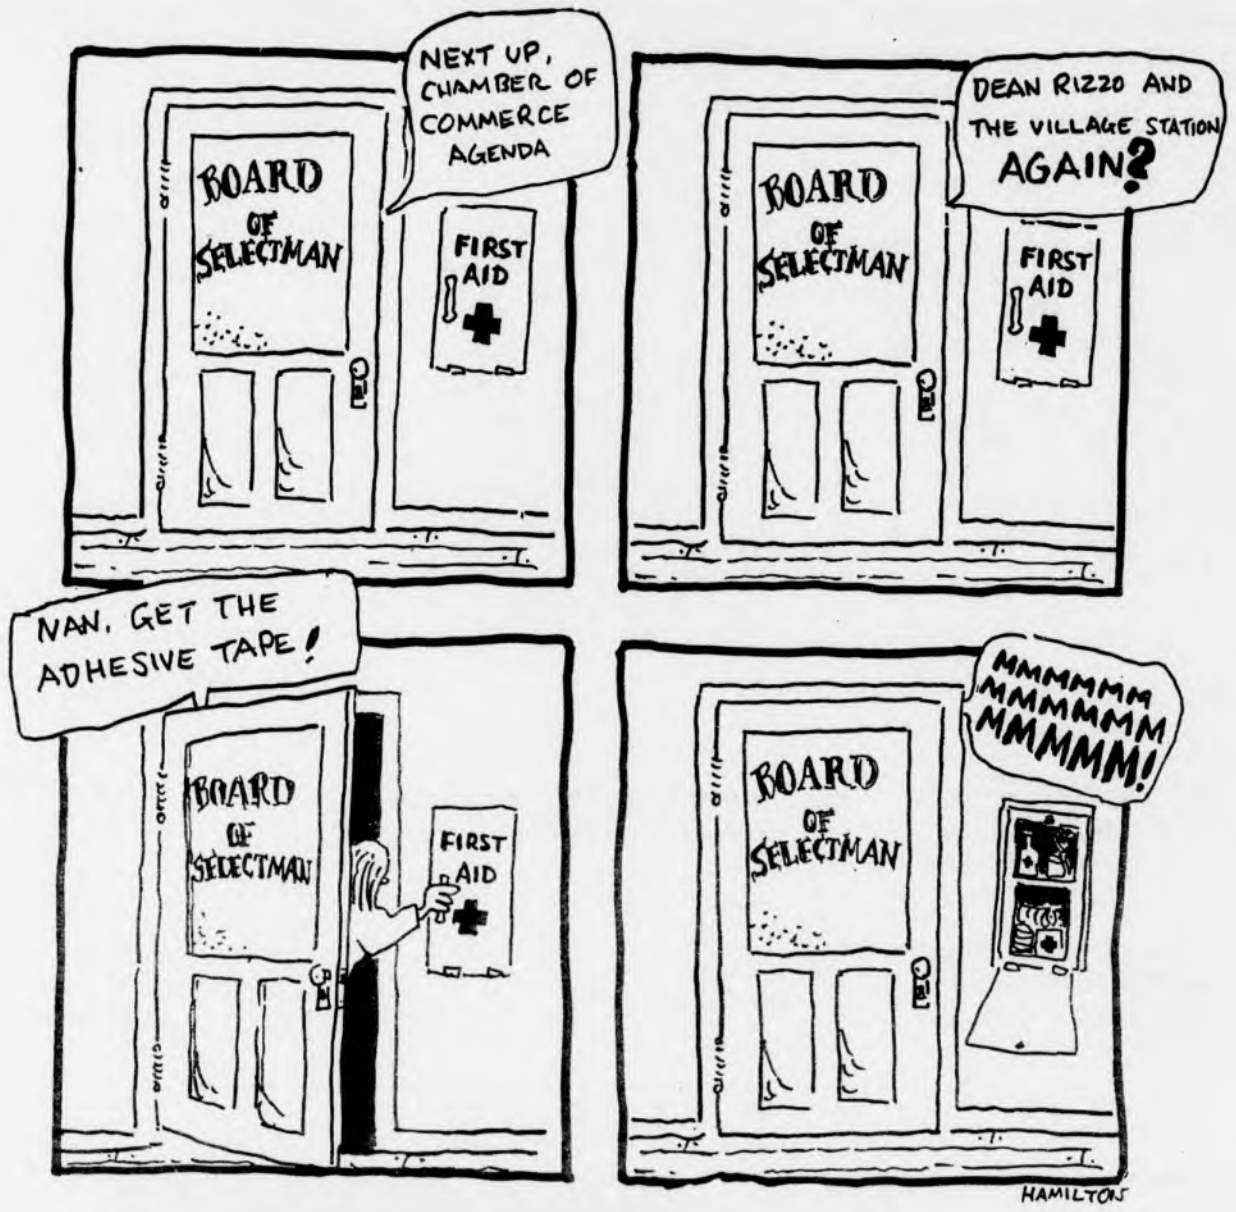
They were in the second grade when President Reagan and the Congress produced the first trillion dollar budget. It was half that the year they were born, around $75 million in their fathers' day.

The earth shook in San Francisco, interrupting the World Series and buckling the Bay Bridge while they were in the fifth grade. In the same year, a new president, George Bush, signed the Americans with Disabilities Act.

It seems like only yesterday . . .

The Persian Gulf War broke out when the were in the sixth grade and a year later the ghetto of South Central Los Angeles erupted into race war when four white cops were acquitted in the video-taped beating of a black man.

They were just entering high school when the Mississippi River burst her banks, flooding the Midwest, and the nation's first woman attorney general, Janet Reno, appointed an independent counsel to investigate something called "White Water."



It seems like only yesterday . . .

O. J. Simpson, his white Bronco and his widely televised trial for killing his former wife, Nicole, and Ron Goldman dominated the news in their sophomore year even after a terrorist bomb destroyed the federal building in Oklahoma City, killing 169.

They were juniors when Shannon Faulkner fought her way into the all-male Citadel military academy in South Carolina only to quit after a few days and a million black men marched on Washington at the behest of the widely distrusted Louis Farrakan.

Come to think of it. it was only yesterday and it is as much the heritage of the Class of 1997 as the Saturday afternoons at AlumniField or Spanish class or the senior prom at the Braintree Tara.

Perhaps they remembered those things as they marched off the graduation stage Saturday with a resolve to help make the world a better place than their fathers'.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Proud and Honored to Serve'

To The Editor:

I understand that the Tiny Town Gazette has stated that at recent Memorial Day events I represented the Board of Selectman "dressed in blue jeans" thereby showing my lack of respect for the occasion. Nothing could be further from the truth! Not only was I not so attired, but I believe strongly in a community's show of honor and respect for those who have served their country in times of war and in times of peace. I also believe strongly in teaching our children to appreciate that service, as well as the sacrifice those individuals and their families have made for us all.

My children have attended each Memorial Day parade with me as either participants or supporters. They came with me to the dedication of the POW-MIA Square and listened to Ray Buckley talk of his experiences. We have ongoing discussions in our household about the horrors of fascism and those who fought against it. My three oldest children recently accompanied me to the dedication of Peter Cogill Square in our neighborhood. They were touched, as was I, by the sacrifice that family made. They remember Operation Desert Storm and we have talked about the service of three of our neighbors' sons and what that means to a family and to us all.

When one holds public office you expect disagreement with your positions on issues and you also expect criticism of your public conduct. But I can not remain silent when the Gazette fails to print the truth on this subject. I am proud and honored to be asked each year to march in the Memorial Day parade alongside our community's veterans, as I am proud and honored to serve on your board of selectman.

PSO Phone-A-Thon a Success

To the Editor:

The PSO Annual Phone-A-Thon, which was held May 20 and 21, earned $7,000! Its success was due to the hard work of all of those involved.

Special Thank-You's go out to Ilene Colwill, Joni Meade and Deanna Mulligan. The fundraising committee would also like to thank Hallmark 100 Properties, Hunneman & Company, and Jack Conway Company for the use of their offices. Because of the generosity of all those who pledged, the PSO will be able to continue to assist the schools in providing teacher grants, curriculum enrichment programs and school improvements.

Again, many thanks to all those involved with this event, which capped off a record breaking year for the PSO fundraising committee.

— The Cohasset PSO

Clarification

In last week's editorial we mentioned conservation commissioner Tom Callahan in making a point about the selectmen's dispute with Dean Rizzo. It was not our intention to leave people with the impression that Mr. Callahan or his former client did anything improper or unethical, and we have no basis upon which to draw such a conclusion. Mr. Callahan has reaffirmed to us that he has never represented a client before the board he sits on. We apologize for any confusion this may have caused.

Keating to Speak at Democratic Town Committee meeting

Senator William Keating, D-Sharon, a candidate for District Attorney, will speak to local democrats at a meeting of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee to be held at 8 p.m., Tuesday, June 17, at the Unitarian Parish House.

Notre Dame Academy Bids Class of '97 Farewell

By Auston Habershaw
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Saturday, May 31, the auditorium of Notre Dame Academy was filled with proud parents and relatives of the 127 graduating seniors at Notre Dame Academy a full half-hour before the ceremony even started.

The atmosphere was excited, almost tense, as cameras were loaded, seats were found, and all the bugs were being worked out of innumerable camcorders.

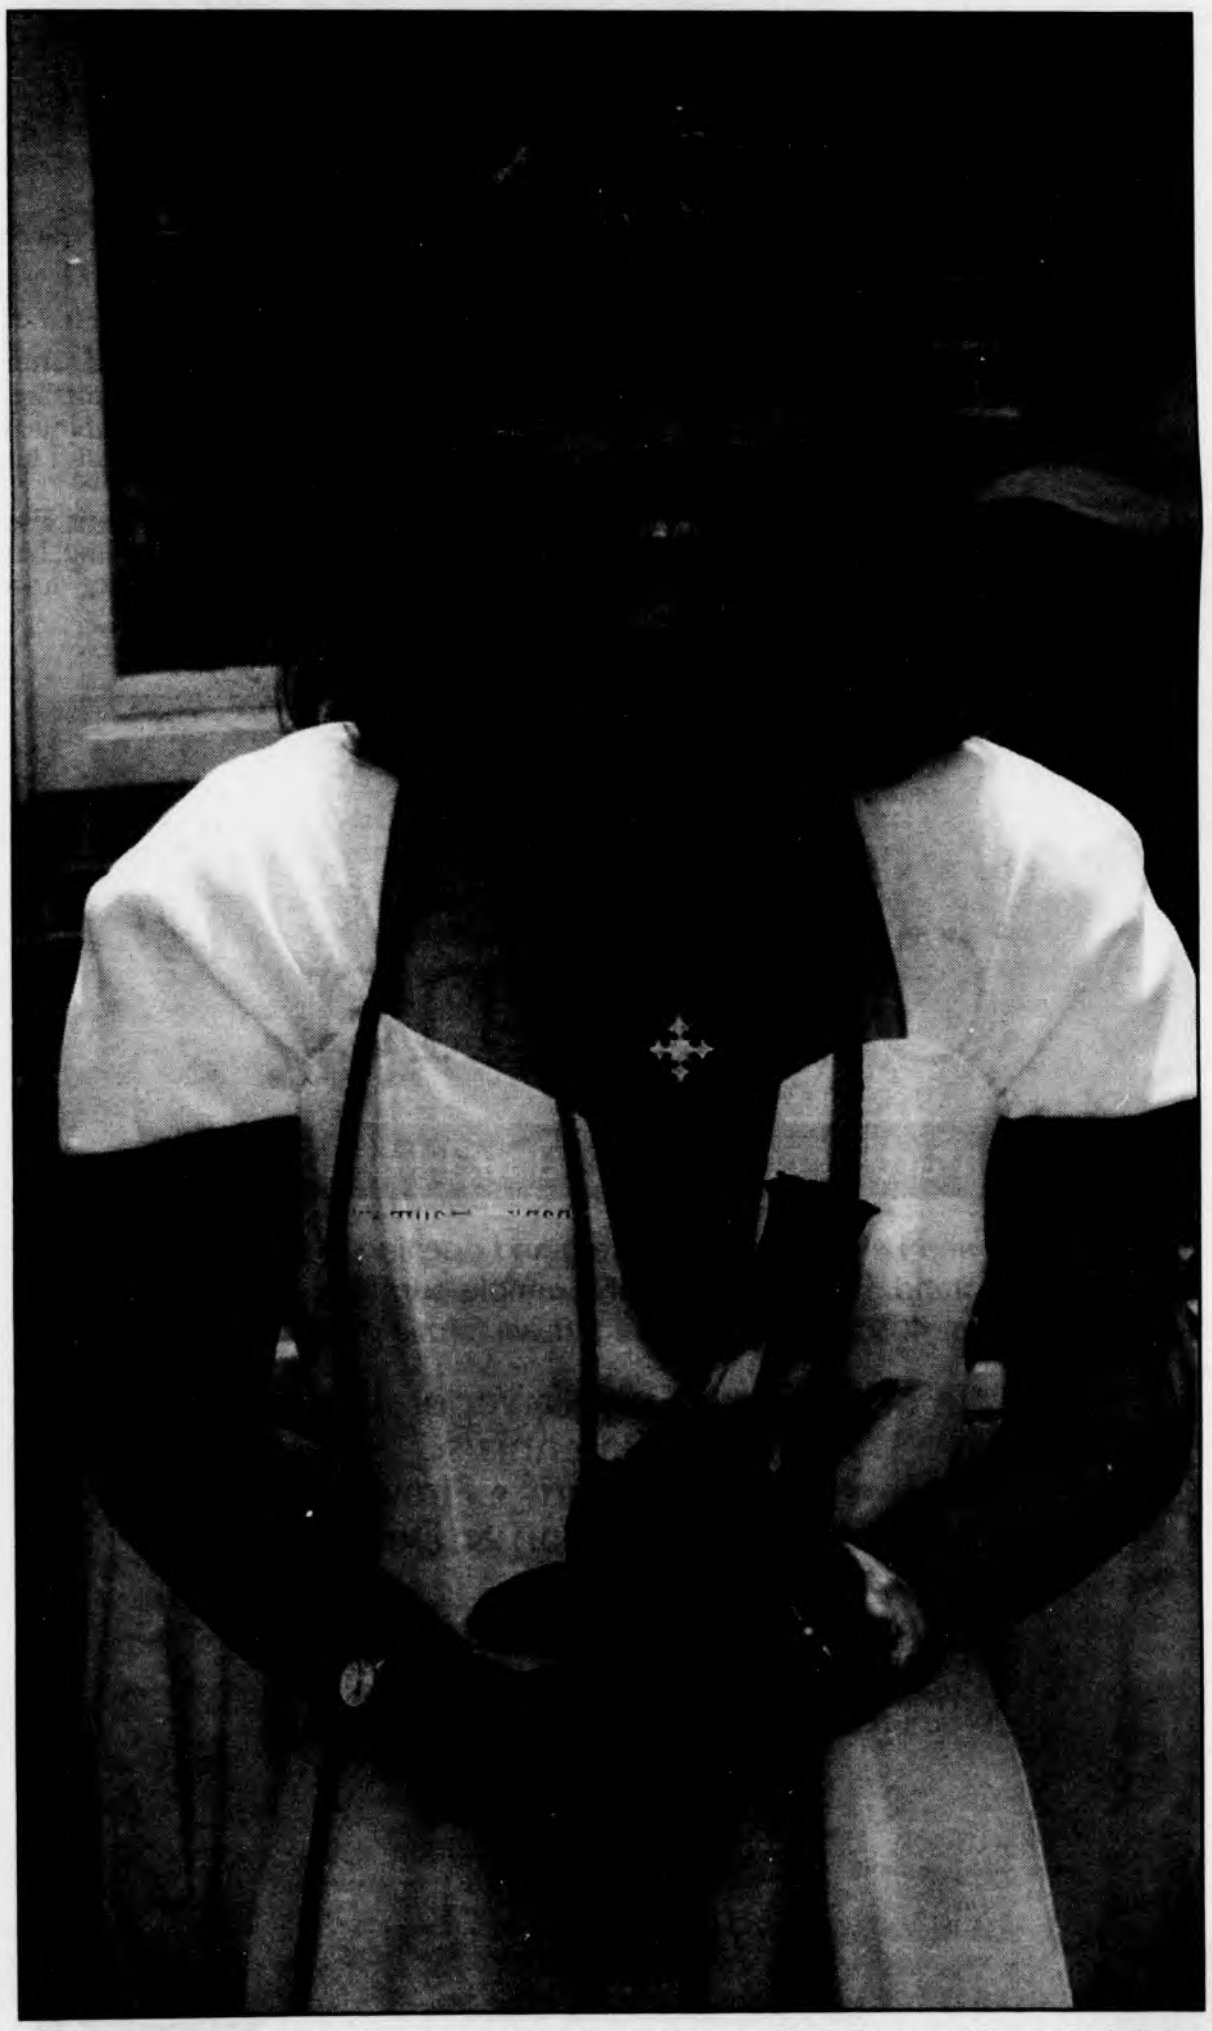
Finally the ceremony began and the Class of 1997, all clad in white dresses and the ceremonial Notre Dame medallion, marched down the aisles and to their seats amid a storm of flashbulbs and smiles. The ceremony was concise and elegant, featuring three speeches by the salutatorian, Allison Walsh; the valedictorian, Julie Catalano; and the chairwoman of the Social Studies department, Marie V. Hoy.

In Walsh's speech, she spoke of the importance of the future.

"Tomorrow we begin a new era in our lives," she said. "Cast off your former mistakes. Your slate is clean and you are ready to write your own destiny upon it."

Her classmate, the valedictorian, Catalano, spoke of the importance of the ability to deal with adversity.

The Class of '97 is fully prepared for the future, 99 percent of them planning to go on to higher education.



As the graduates were granted their diplomas, however, there were cheers of triumph as well as the tears of a bittersweet parting between these young women and the school they have called home for four memorable years.

Many must have been somewhat reluctant to leave NDA for, as Catalano put it, "it (NDA) is a safe environment in which we feel very comfortable."

Nothing can last forever, though, and the class of '97 has completed its time at Notre Dame. The best of luck to them in the future, and may they take the final words of their valedictorian to heart: "Never give up and never fear; God is on our side. Fly!"

Jen Cellucci, left, and Julie Smith, both of Cohasset, graduated from Notre Dame Academy on May 31.

NDA valedictorian Julie Catalano of Cohasset wears a Medallion necklace which links each graduate with the hundreds of Notre Dame women who have preceded her.

'Never Give Up and Never Fear'

By Julie Catalano
NDA CLASS OF '97
VALEDICTORIAN

Graduation day is a time to pause and reflect upon all that we have received and all we have achieved over the last four years. Today we must also look ahead and consider how our past will affect our futures. Writing this speech made me realize today is meaningful because of what it symbolizes, our new freedom. This freedom is best illustrated in the words of Maya Angelou

"The Caged Bird"
A free bird leaps on the back of the wind and floats downstream till the current ends and dips his wing in the orange sun rays and dares to claim the sky
But a bird that stalks down his narrow cage can seldom see through his bars of rage his wings are clipped and his feet are tied so he opens his throat to sing
The caged bird sings with a fearful trill of things unknown but longed for still and his tune is heard on the distant hill for the caged bird
sings of freedom

The freedom so greatly sought and cherished described in this poem is the same freedom Notre Dame Academy has bestowed upon us today. When we exit this auditorium one final time it will be as graduates. We will not leave as the timid freshmen we once were. But as women, confident in our abilities and strengthened in our values. For Notre Dame has given us the wings we will need to fly.

For many members of the senior class these new wings may seem ill-fitting or perhaps the responsibilities that come with our new freedom seem overwhelming. Others may not fully feel ready to move on or simply may not want to leave Notre Dame Academy and their friends behind. This is understandable. For Notre Dame is not a cage we wish to escape. Rather it is a safe environment in which we feel very comfortable. But it is time to leave and in doing so to dare, to risk, and to grow. For if we do not change then our past is a cage rather than a learning experience. It is my challenge to you to grow into the unique person that God created and my wish that in doing so you discover true happiness. Realize now that we will encounter obstacles and occasionally we will fail but that with each conquered obstacle and overcome failure we learn. Never give up and Never fear, for God is always at our side. FLY!

To our parents, thank you for all your support and love. We appreciate and realize all that you sacrificed on our behalf.

To the administration and faculty, thank you for your patience and understanding especially during senior year.

And finally to my fellow classmates: Dare to Claim the Sky!

Co-Valedictorian is MIT Bound

Finishes High School in Three Years

By Robert Ziff
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As a self-proclaimed "classic computer geek," Christopher Lesniewski-Laas, 16, wasted no time in graduating from Cohasset High School this past Saturday, not only as a co-valedictorian, but doing so in just three years.

In regard to his early departure, "It was a rather simple situation," Chris recounts. "I had pretty much completed all the curriculum that the school had to offer so there was no place left for me to go there. It was only a matter of requesting to graduate early."

Chris attributes his shortened high school career to a good work ethic, pushing himself from the onset and once he moved ahead, it was just a question of staying there. He also credits his family, especially his mother, for understanding him and allowing him room to develop in his own unique way.

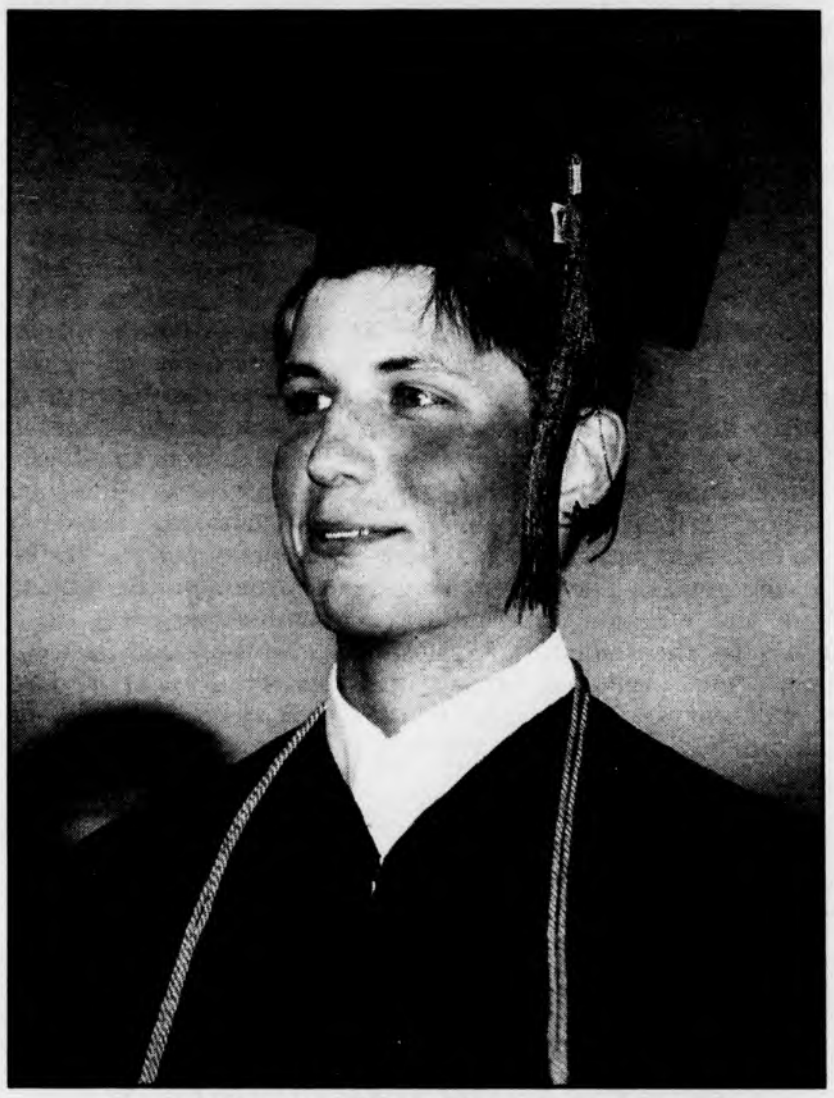
Everyone has heard of students that were left back a year because of their grades or their attendance and the problems that may cause, but skipping a grade also comes with its own set of problems like which prom to go to, this year's or next's, but furthermore what it is like being considered the "class brain," or a "computer weenie." To the former, Chris has elected to attend next year's prom for he feels a strong sense of loyalty and connection to the Class of '98 whom he has been attending classes with since kindergarten. And regards the latter, he is not concerned. Why should he be? It seems that to be a "computer geek" is no big deal anymore, in fact it's becoming sort of vogue or trendy.

According to Chris's mother, Elizabeth Lesniewski-Lass, she is very proud of her son and declined to take any of the credit for Chris's academic achievements.

"It was not a question of Marek (Mr. Lesniewski-Lass) or me pushing him. He took a strong interest in math early and moved ahead. He completed some A.P. programs and decided he wanted to take a couple of summer courses at UMass and Johns Hopkins which he completed."

With Chris's three younger siblings still at home, there will be no "empty nest syndrome" for Elizabeth. She added that she is happy that Chris is not going too far away from home, but, jokingly questioned whether or not he shared her sentiments.

Dennis Walsh, one of Chris's math teachers at Cohasset High recounts that Chris, as a freshman, in his calculus class with juniors and seniors, aced the final exam, scoring the highest possible score. He would compete in the math and computer science leagues but would never practice before a competition or a test, he would just wing it. The last time someone scored as high in the Math Olympiad, a competition that includes the entire state of Massachusetts, was 18 years ago. Walsh said that Chris is extremely "intelligent, interested, and has a lot of integrity" and that his mind was going all the time.



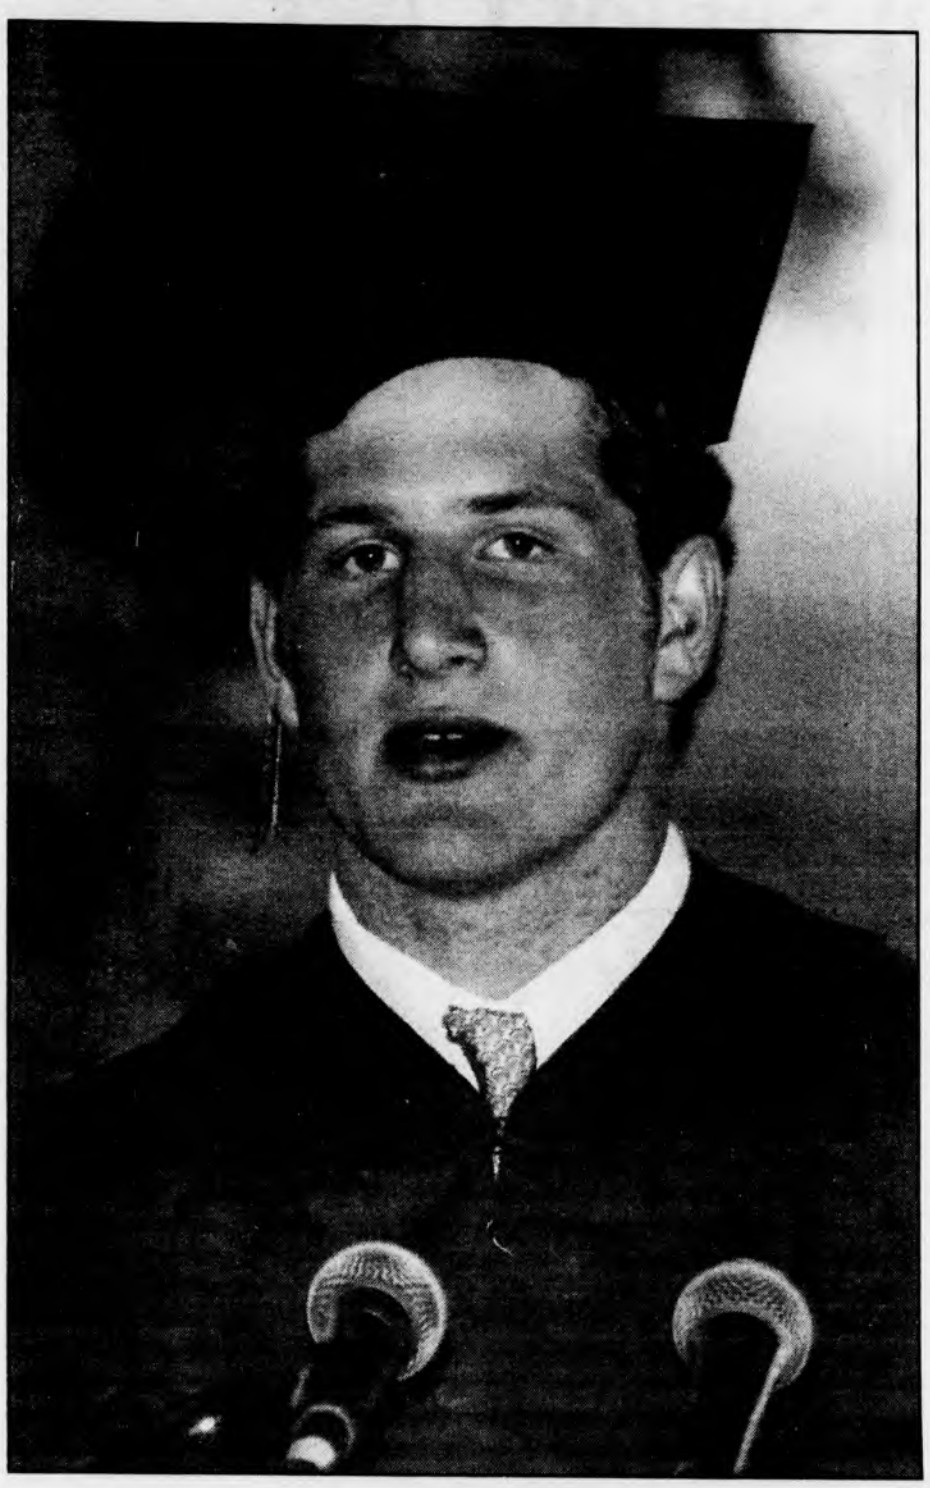
M.I.T. is expecting Chris next fall where he will begin his freshman year studying computer science. There, he has no plans in attempting to graduate early and now, looking back with 20/20 hindsight, he would not recommend graduating high school early to anyone. This is because of strains it put on his developmental and social life and activities.

Chris did not apply to Harvard because the work being done at M.I.T. is more suited to his goals, focusing more on understanding the machines rather than marketing them.

Chris has two younger brothers and a younger sister. His father works as a political consultant for a firm in Boston and his mother is an attorney. There are three, fully on line computer systems hooked up within the Lesniewski-Lass household. Receiving and sending E-mail, surfing the net, or simply working on a document are all run-of-the-mill activities.

As far as his long term goals are concerned after M.I.T. Chris can picture himself going on in school, possibly getting his doctorate in the field of computer science, and after that, a possible professorship, teaching as an absent-minded professor and continuing his research.

On another note, Chris also mentioned he "likes sailing, but being from Cohasset, how couldn't you?"



Co-valedictorian Christopher Lesniewski-Laas completed Cohasset High School in just three years.

Relay for Life Starts June 13

Beginning at 3 p.m., Friday, June 13, the track at Cohasset's Junior-Senior High School is being put to a new and innovative use. At present count, 19 teams of walkers and joggers will embark on their 24-hour trek encircling the track, in an effort to raise money for the American Cancer Society. This will be the first annual "Walk for Life" held in Cohasset, however Hanover has held similar events in the past, which have met with tremendous success, last year raising more than $57,000.

The honorary chairperson of the relay will be state representative and Cohasset resident, Mary Jeanette Murray.

The Relay for Life Committee hopes to raise more than $15,000 during the walk, which will help to support the American Cancer Society's programs of research, education and services to cancer patients and their families. The great majority of the funds brought in by the Relay For Life are not raised by corporate sponsors but rather by personal donations and pledges to the participants.

Every team, whose average number is about 10, must have one runner or walker on the track at all times. Throughout the 24-hour journey, there will be music, games, exhibits, demonstrations, food and more including a luminary walk at 9 p.m., Saturday. At this point the track is lined with incandescent containers and candles. There will also be three survivor walks to be held at 6 p.m. and one at 9 p.m., which kick off the luminary walk, and another one at the conclusion of the marathon at 3 p.m., Sunday. Everyone on the South Shore is invited to come and be a part of the festivities, the gratitude for survivorship, and the continual challenge of raising funds, which are all equally prominent features of the relay.

RVs and tents are welcome for those who are planning on staying through the evening. Teams may opt to have runners come in shifts.

The Relay for Life is an opportunity to become involved in a good cause, for example, St. Anthony's Church has entered three teams to participate.

All runners are asked to obtain a minimum of a $100 sponsorship.

There is still time to get your team together and participate in this event. For more information, please call the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society at (617) 741-9844.

dictorians and a salutatorian.

Matt Belson, the class' outgoing, energetic president, set the tone for the day in his welcoming address. He urged his classmates not to "turn cynical" and to resolve to be happy which he said was not an end in itself but something that must be gained along the way.

"The world always looks better behind the smile," he said.

Curtis Collins, a former Cohasset High teacher who returned to the school last year as principal, gave Belson a special tribute praising his leadership and enthusiasm.

Ryan McWilliams, salutatorian and National Merit Commended Scholar, will attend the University of Massachusetts Amherst where he was awarded the Chancellor's Scholarship.

McWilliams said the future will hold some uncertainty but expressed confidence in his classmates.

"We cannot assume our future years will be easy," he said, noting "whatever the obstacle and whatever the endeavor our class of 1997 will be up to it."

Co-valedictorian Ely Kahn, who is headed for Harvard, stressed individualism and urged his fellow graduates not to be afraid to make the first move.

"Never settle for mediocrity," he said, reminding everyone "to have fun in life."

And in a highly entertaining speech, co-valedictorian Christopher Lesniewski-Laas, who graduated from Cohasset High in three years and will attend MIT in the fall (see related story), said he's spent his whole life preparing for the future whether it be high school or college.

"Enough preparing for life, I'm ready to live it!" he said.

Lesniewski-Laas drew laughter when he talked about moving up last fall and "being the junior geek in the senior class."

"You welcomed as well as you can an impostor who threatened to push down most everyone's class rank by one," he said.

School Committee Chairman Maureen Jerz, who delivered the keynote address, said commencement is not an end but a beginning.

"It's a beginning...an opening up of life's vast array of opportunities," she said.

She urged the 67 members of the class to hold onto their youthful idealism.

"Hold onto your values, your ideals, they are the foundation with which to make the world a better place," she said.

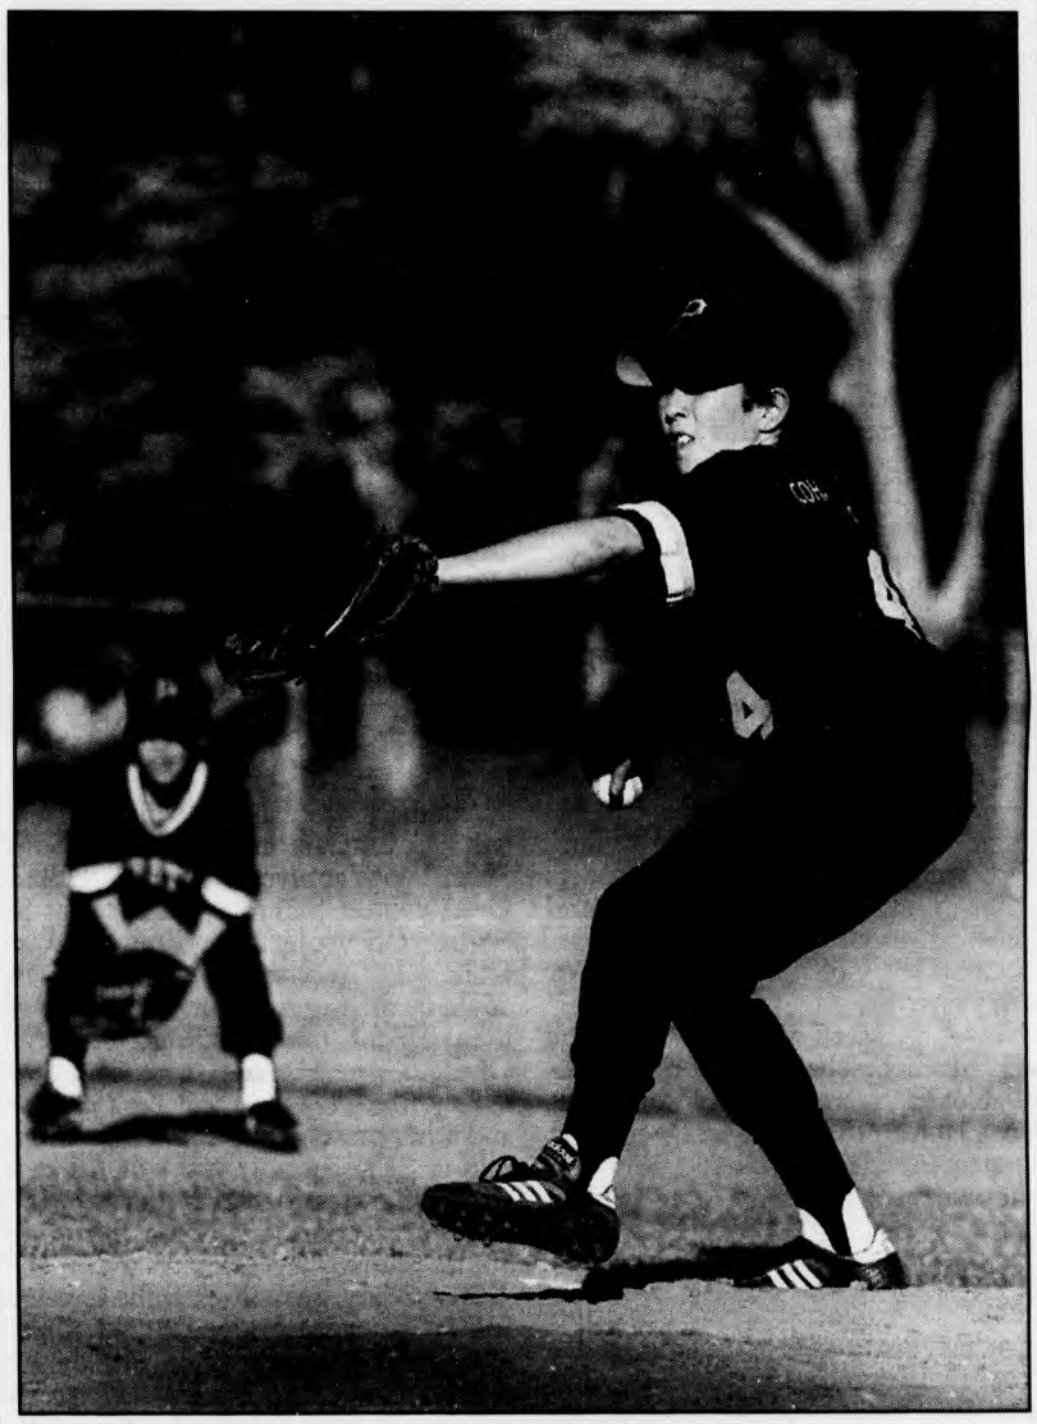
MARINER SPORTS

Skippers End Discouraging Season

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER



Finally. The Saturday Memorial Day weekend, the Cohasset Skippers boys varsity baseball team put an end to their agonizing, one month, eight game losing streak. Joe Pergola spun a masterful performance on the mound, hurling more than 130 pitches and fanning 13. The Boys in Blue battled a 7 a.m. departure and an hour-and-a-half delay due to lack of umpires, to emerge with a victory in extra innings over Provincetown.

The Skippers had held a 4-1 lead going into the bottom of the seventh after an offensively explosive sixth inning. However, faulty defense and some bad breaks forced extra innings. In the 10th inning, however, the Skippers pulled ahead with big hits from Greg Taylor and Al Schwerin and posted their first victory in too long.

Unfortunately, the P-Town win would be Cohasset's last, as they bowed to Scituate and Carver in the final week of the season. The Scituate game was hotly contested, and possibly one of the Skippers' best of the year. Coach Ford applied platoon pitching, alternately sending Ben "Yoda" Ketchum and Jim O'Sullivan to the hill. Solid defense by Grant Emde and Rob Buckley's work behind the dish helped keep the Skippers in the game, along with big hits from Kevin McKenna, Pat Hurley and Ketchum.

However, the Skippers ran out of outs, as they couldn't

THE FISH STORY/Mark Trask

Herrings are Running Wild

The waves marched in from the northeast in a never-ending line. Huge ocean rollers piled up every half minute, lit silver and blue under the changeable skies. The creaking of the hull gave testimony to the shifting watery stresses acting against it.

Ahead in the mist a craggy ledge loomed above the crashing waves. At the plotting table, Noah determined it was Mt. Ararat. Mt. Ararat? Whoa, wrong story!

Yet ask any captain venturing out of South Shore harbors this week and those were the conditions found. Everyone has been praying harder than Noah for a break in this insistent easterly weather, and I think it may finally be with us.

The weather does seem to be having some strange effects. The other morning as I left the One-Stop coffee shop in Marshfield with my jumbo, I came across a curious sight at the culvert spanning the South River's higher reaches. A small group watched a dripping-wet man scramble back up to road level with a five-gallon pail clutched in his grasp. I slowed to a stop and asked a couple in the group what was going on.

"He's catching herring," they replied. "The river is loaded with them."

Ronnie reports from Ferry Street that this is true for most of the South River above the Julian Street bridge. Many anglers are catching scores of schoolic stripers using herring chunks and small pearlescent Bombers. Occasionally she reports a keeper size is caught in the mix.

Mackerel are still roaming the offshore waters for those who have been able to get to them. Not too many days go by without a netter calling the shop with hundreds of pounds for sale. Those angling are finding Xmas tree rigs furnished with a diamond jig to be tops. Small Solvrokens, Kastmasters, Hopkins and Zing jigs are producing as well. Several anglers were stocking up on small silver lures like Lil Cleo's, Al's Goldfish, Needlefish and Deadly Dick's to take advantage of the mackerel runs at Pt. Pemberton in Hull. Pemberton is one of the only spots locally the mackerel visit regularly where shore bound anglers have a shot at this hard fighting fish. Outfit yourself with a 5'6" to 6' rod and light gear for a spectacular fight.

Paul Hansell has two "new keepers" so far this year. Mackerel chunks and careful observation of fish movements is Paul's formula for success.

Cohasset's Dave Barrow was credited with catching an early bluefish much to everyone's surprise. Another angler reports that Little Harbor is quiet so far but outside at the mouth is a different story. He bagged a keeper on a fresh pogie as the tide dropped.

With the outside conditions as miserable as they were, many boaters found action in Hingham Bay and the Weir River. Reports have Hingham's Wil Collins and crew off to a hot start. The Back River is a good shot for a day trip as well. Most shops have a good supply of fresh pogies on hand now.

Mike Kelley of Scituate was in this week dropping off a fresh batch of salt flies. He reports steady action in Cohasset Harbor by the falls. He also has made successful trips to the area

Junior Skippers Losing Streak Continues

A disappointing late-season slide has dropped the Cohasset junior lacrosse team under .500 for the first time all season, including losses to Duxbury and Norwell the weekend of June 6 to 8.

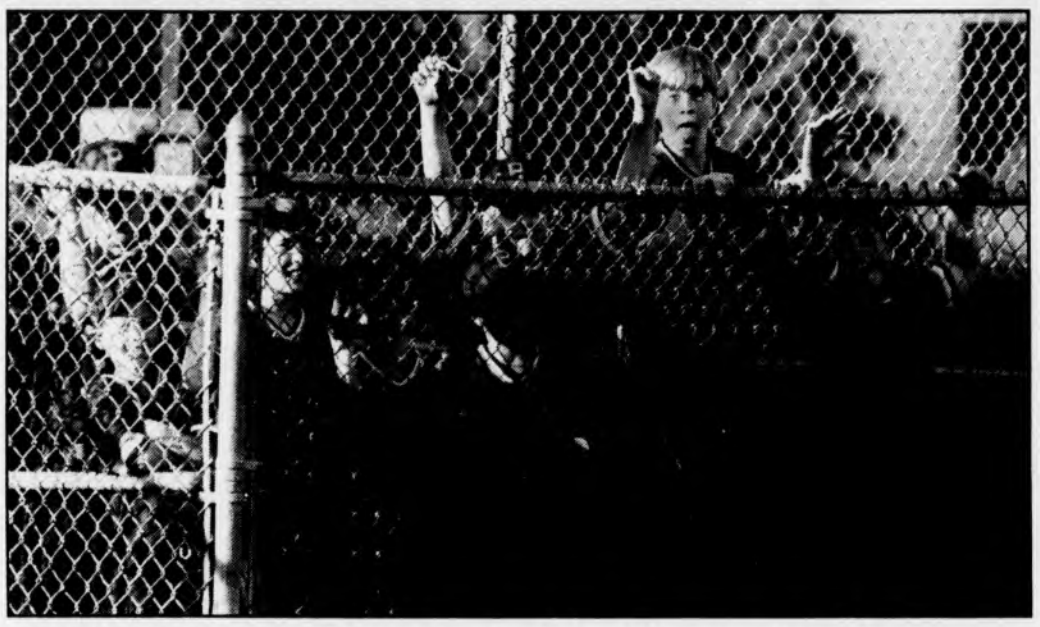
After starting the season with four wins in five games, the Junior Skippers have lost four straight to fall to 4-5.

Against Duxbury, Cohasset fell behind early and trailed 9-2 at the end of three quarters before scoring four times to cut the deficit to three with more than three minutes to play. From there on, however, the Skippers couldn't capitalize on several opportunities and the game ended at 9-6.

Matt Davis had two goals and an assist, Michael Devine scored twice during the comeback and Greg O'Connell had a goal and an assist for Cohasset. Goaltender Nick Murphy made 12 saves.

Two days later, Cohasset squared off with Norwell in a game that was a blowout almost from the start. Earlier in the season, Cohasset beat Norwell I — one of two Norwell 12-and-under teams — by a score of 16-5. Norwell II, the town's other 12-and-under squad, returned the favor, winning 16-4 in a game where too many penalties, fundamental breakdowns and missed opportunities cost the Skippers. Nick Murphy faced 34 shots on goal — the most allowed by Cohasset this year — and came up with 18 saves.

This is the second consecutive season that Cohasset's youth program has gotten off to a strong start, only to finish on a sour note. Coach Chuck Jaffe says that he must shoulder much of the blame, because his schedule makes it hard for the team to practice regularly.



"We beat the exact same Duxbury team 11-4 early in the season and it was no fluke," Jaffe said. "Between that game and the second one with them, we played five games, had three practices and a week off; Duxbury practiced twice a week, meaning six games and 12 practices.

"Our kids played as hard as ever — most are playing their best lacrosse now, even though we are losing — but they need the repetition. One of the biggest things coming out in practice is learning to capitalize on the mistakes of others. Duxbury did that. The things we got away or overcame early in the season are being picked on now, and we simply haven't had the instructional time to keep up."

Jaffe had an assistant coach lined up to help this year, "but his schedule and availability was even worse than my own." As a result, the team is looking for an assistant coach to help run the youth lacrosse program in 1998.

Despite the late season slump, a number of players on the Cohasset roster have been impressive. The team's top scorers are: Curt Kahn (20 goals-0 assists-20 points), Matt Davis (13-2-15), Evan Pestone (9-6-15), Robert Hickey (9-3-12), Greg O'Connell (5-3-8) and Michael Rasmussen and Michael Devine (both 7-0-7). Nick Murphy, a stalwart in the goal all season long, has stopped 118 of the 187 shots he has faced, for a save percentage of .631 .

Swimming and Diving Team Try-Outs

Calling all swimmers and divers! The Cohasset Swim and Diving Teams announce that Becky Golden and Allison Hughes are returning to coach the Cohasset Swim Team, and Dawn Meehan will return to the diving team for another terrific season. Last year's team members agree that the season was exciting and a lot of fun! Both teams welcome new members, and all are invited to try out.

This year's season starts June 30 (not June 23, as previously announced), and culminates in the championship finals, held at Wheaton College, Saturday, Aug. 16. Tryouts for new swim team members will be held Wednesday, June 18, and Thursday, June 19, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Swim Club. Diving team tryouts are Saturday, June 21, at 9 a.m. Tryouts for both teams are for new members only. Returning members do not have to try out.

On Tuesday, June 24. at 9 a.m., the Varsity Swim Shop will set up shop at the Cohasset Swim Club to sell team bathing suits. The team has a new bathing suit design this year.

Call 383-9482 with any questions.

South Shore Soccer Camp

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8 to 18. This is the South Shore Soccer Camp's sixth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering, it is suggested that you call the Cohasset recreation department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791, to be assured enrollment. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore Soccer will be offered to both boys and girls during the weeks of Monday through Friday, Aug. 4 to 8, and August 11 to 15. Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays through Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Miliken Field. The cost for camp is $175 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

Soccer Camp

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7 years old.

VIP soccer camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4- and 5-year-olds and meets from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 21 to 25. The cost is $50 per week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 21 through 25 for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $80 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School. For brochures and registration forms, come to the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor, Town Hall.

Lacrosse Lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a full-contact, full-equipment lacrosse clinic this summer under the direction of Mr. Chuck Jaffee of Cohasset, for youngsters entering grades five and six during the fall of 1997.Clinics will be held Monday evenings, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., beginning Monday, June 30, continuing for eight weeks through Aug. 18.

Participants will need a helmet, stick and pads for participation in this clinic. The fee for the eight-week opportunity is $35 per person.

Registration forms and details are available at the Cohasset Recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall. Early registration is advised due to a limitation in participation.

Charity Kick-A-Thon

Jade Forest Kung Fu/Tai Chi recently hosted a charity fund-raising event in collaboration with the Project Action Foundation.

The event, a Kick-A-Thon, netted nearly $1,200 for Project Action. The funds collected have been placed into an escrow account to be released back out into the local community as scholarship money for youths ages 6 to 18 who wish to pursue studies at Jade Forest and who meet the Project Action guidelines. For further information about qualifying for this unique program, call Jade Forest owner/instructor John Loupos at 383-6822. Jade Forest is located on Route 3A in Cohasset.

Summer Basketball Camp

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will sponsor a summer basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two camp sessions will be available this July. Boys and girls, ages 8 through 11, will have camp from Tuesday, July 8, through Friday, July 11, at Cohasset High School's Sullivan gymnasium. The fee for the four-day camp is $120. The full week camp, for boys and girls ages 12 through 15, will be held Monday, July 14, through Friday, July 18, at the Sullivan gymnasium. The fee for the five-day camp is $150.Registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall, Recreation Department office.

Baseball Camp

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 through 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Camp has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, to be held the week beginning Tuesday, June 24, through Saturday, June 28, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over, and a half-day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5- and 6-year-olds.

The week-long camp costs $130 per child for the full-day program, and $75 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Saturday, June 28.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, offers year-round baseball instruction and has had baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for seven years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for baseball camp on a space-available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall.

Adult Evening Tennis

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-6791.

bring in runners on second and third with two outs in the seventh.

The Carver game saw the Skippers fare less well. The second-place Crusaders wouldn't let Pergola make any mistakes, using the Skippers as a tune-up for the tournament. Meanwhile, the Cohasset bats were once again inactive and the gloves seemed to be faulty, as the Skippers played another game of uninspired baseball. A fitting end to a lackluster season.

The Skippers finished the season 5-14, with a 2-14 league record. A wrap-up article will appear next week.

RECREATION NOTES

Summer Employment

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting applications for playground program counselors for their seven-week day camp program.

Candidates should have demonstrated experience working with children in a structured setting. Employment is for seven weeks, from June 30 through Aug. 15 plus a one-day orientation during late June. CPR certification is mandatory and the recreation commission will conduct a course during late June for those who need CPR certification.

Openings exist for both the pre-school half-day program and the 5- to 12-year-old, full-day programs.

The recreation commission conducts a seven-week day camp structured program for children 3-1/2 through 12 years of age.

Should you be interested in applying, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 for an application or further information.

Pre-School Program Coordinator

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting applications for a pre-school program coordinator for their summer playground program for children ages 3-1/2 through 5.

Candidates should have experience working with pre-school age children and a degree in Early Childhood Education or related fields would be an asset. The pre-school program coordinator reports directly to the playground director and is responsible for program development and staff direction.

The position is for an eight-week period working 3-1/2 hours daily Mondays through Fridays. The rate of compensation is $8 per hour. Call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at (617) 383-6791 if interested.

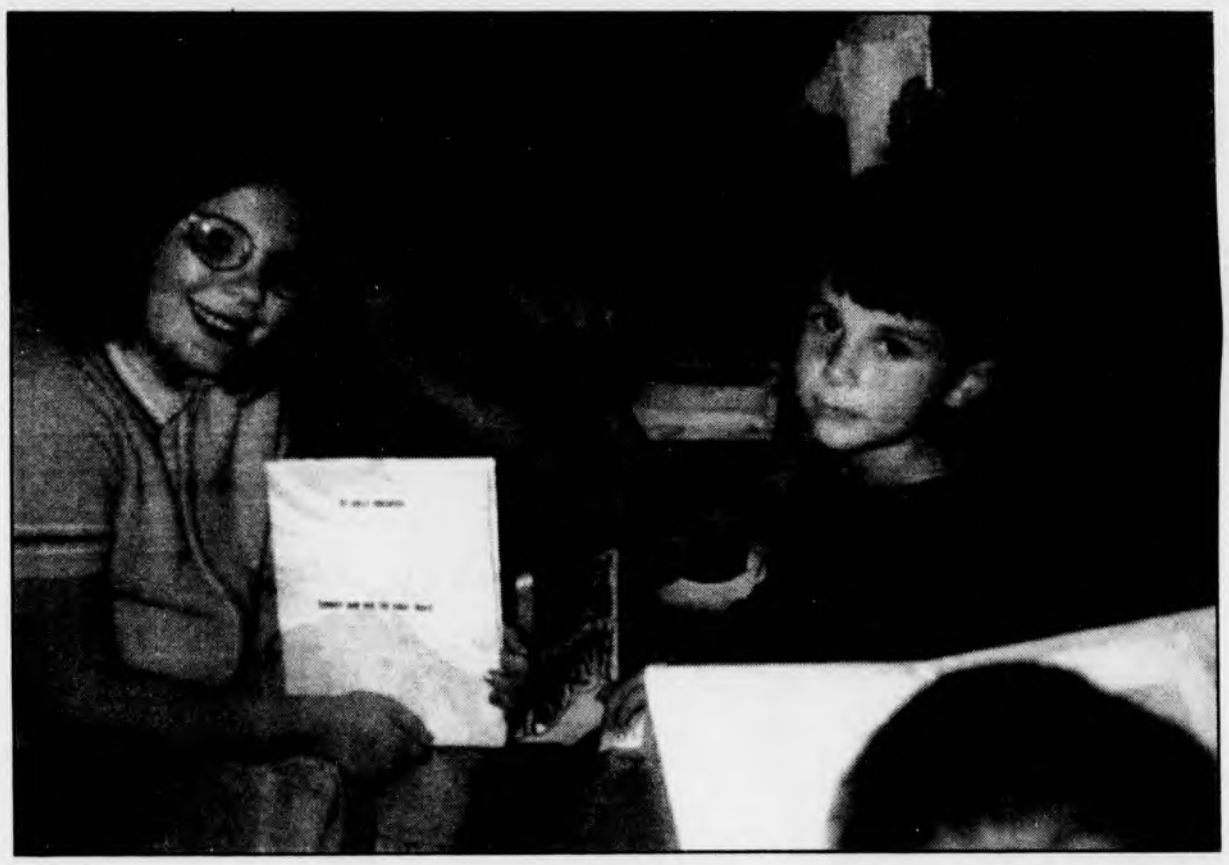
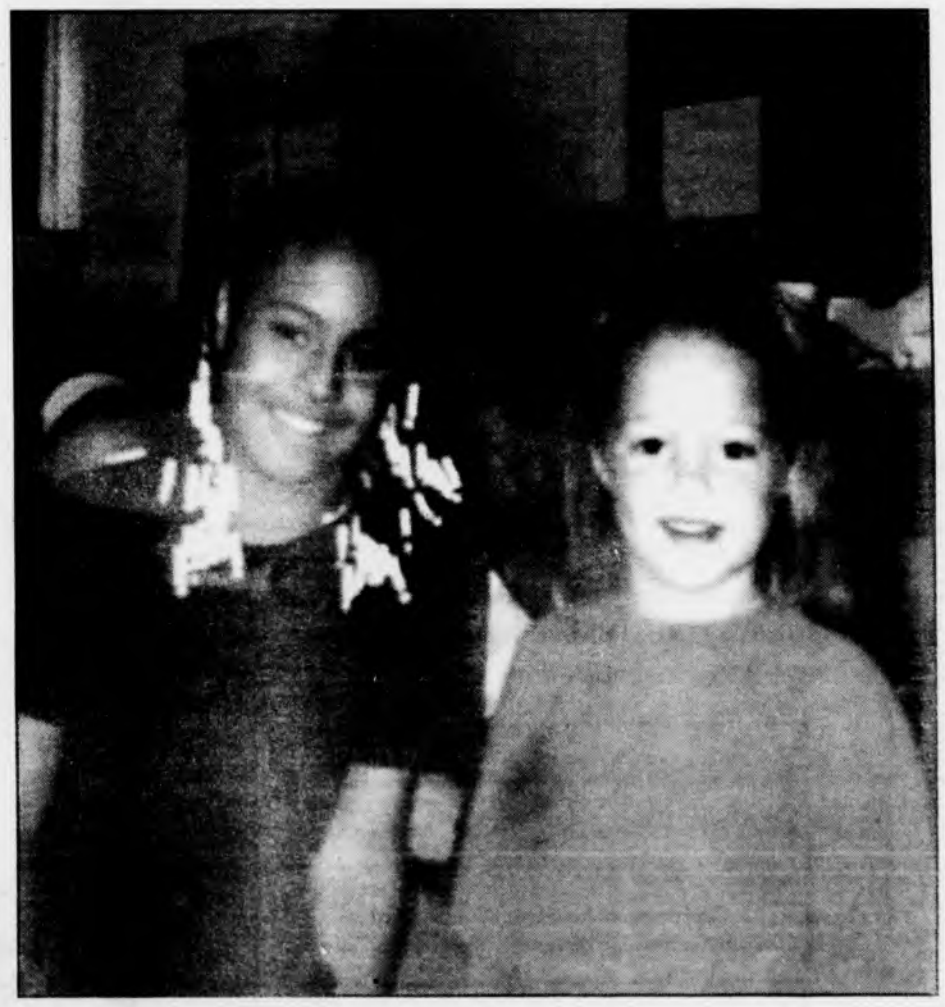
Kindergartners Receive Gift of Books



Mrs. Cisneros' sixth-grade class poses with their 'Surprise' books written for and about their kindergarten partners in Mrs. Price's class.

The kindergarten students in Mrs. Price's classes each received a book which was written especially for them by their sixth-grade "buddy." Throughout the year, the sixth-graders in Mrs. Cisneros' and Mr. Shultz's classes have been spending time with the kindergarteners, helping them with their reading and writing. As a special surprise, each sixth-grade student wrote and illustrated a book for their kindergarten partner using personal facts about their partner to create the book's characters, setting and plot.



Mrs. Price and her two classes were invited to visit the sixth-grade classrooms Tuesday, June 3, where they were presented with their surprise books. Students and parents shared the many beautiful books with each other and were treated to punch and cookies to celebrate the event.

Holly Dinsmore, who is in the sixth-grade, and her kindergarten partner Sammy Bilbo.

Black Rock Beach Hosts Spring Cleanup

By Robert Ziff
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For eons there have been things washing up on beaches all around the world, much of which has been sea weed, shells and an occasional board from a sunken ship. Over the last few decades this has changed.

If the Indians who originally named this area Quonahasset, meaning "a long, rocky place" had settled here on Saturday, they would have named it "a long rocky place littered with garbage."

Sunday afternoon, Black Rock Beach in Cohasset was the focus of concerned residents. Cooled by the ocean's breeze, about 50 came to lend a hand picking up everything from a railroad tie to a fishing knife. These items were either dragged or bagged, and brought to one of the two large green dump trucks on hand. Several tons of plastic material, wood, Styrofoam, rope, cans, cigarette butts, lighters, and everything under the sun, or in the ocean for that matter, were hauled away in the heaping trucks. About 20 stayed for the well-deserved barbecue of plump hot dogs, grilled chicken, and cold drinks that followed. The beach was left with a virtual face lift.

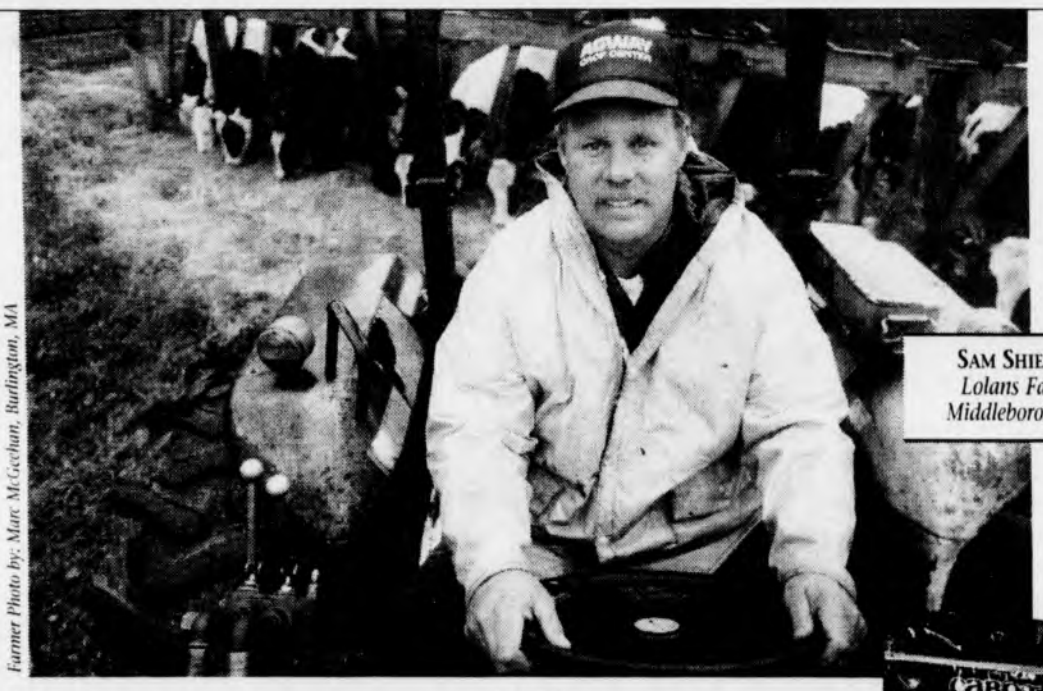
Trish Morse, a six-year resident of the area who co-coordinated this fourth annual event with Barbara Green, said that one of her concerns is for the safety of her two children. The rusty fragments of lobster traps washed up by storms, and other debris present potential for injury not only for her children but for all those who visit the beach. Trish also said, "It's a good time to get to know some of my neighbors, to put faces with names."

There is already talk of next year's cleanup with plans for a bonfire to boot.

According to the Environmental Studies Program at Cohasset High School, "Cigarette butts, one of the most common types of plastic debris, have been found in the stomachs of juvenile birds, sea turtles and countless other marine creatures. Sea animals become entangled in debris and eventually killed. It disrupts the balance in our delicate marine ecosystems such as coral reefs." The study program goes on to say that the best solution is simply, "Don't litter!"

Car Wash to Benefit Appalachian Families

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project organization sponsors a car wash on Saturday, June 14, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in front of the Second Congregational Church, next to town hall.



Now in their tenth year, this town-wide youth project will be traveling to Campbell County, Tennessee, to spend a week repairing and upgrading the homes of 12 impoverished families. Eight-four volunteers have signed on. They will board three coach buses at 6 a.m. Saturday, June 28, to head south. After picking up 12 vans en route and a stop overnight at two churches in Waynesboro, Virginia, the 12 vans will head on down to Tennessee and begin work on Monday morning under the direction of the Appalachia Service Project, Inc.

"HI, NEIGHBOR. HAVE YOU TRIED MY CHEESE?"
Cabot cheddar cheese, butter and other dairy foods are offered with pride by your nearby dairy farmers. The same farmers who, together, own the Cabot Creamery.
And what that means is, every time you buy a Cabot product, you're helping to support 192 family farms near you in Massachusetts and throughout the Northeast. You're helping to preserve a way of life that's been important here for generations. And you're getting some of the freshest, purest, best-tasting dairy products made anywhere.
JUNE Cheese to the Rescue IS DAIRY MONTH
Since 1919, your nearby farmers have been working this land, tending the herds and gathering milk. And as long as you keep buying, sharing and enjoying Cabot products, they'll keep right on doing it.

Managing your credit card debt can be a tough task

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

When her credit card debt reached $25,000 putting her required minimum payments at $850 a month - the police officer from Brooklyn, New York knew she was in over her head.

For the three years following her divorce, she had used 16 credit cards to fund her impulsive buying; purchasing clothing and home appliances for herself and her daughter, says Robert Espaillat, branch manager of Credit Counseling Service, a non-profit organization that helps consumers get out of debt.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

By sticking to the payment plan Espaillat has devised, she should be debt-free in six years.

Thankfully, that's not you, right? But, if you have debt on your cards that you can't pay off this month, you could be more like her than you think. Many Americans use credit cards to fund today by banking on tomorrow, only to have trouble paying off the debt.

At the beginning of this year they had some $470 billion in outstanding debt on their credit cards, according to the Credit Counseling Center.

Not only can credit card debt be inordinately expensive, subject to finance charges higher than those of other kinds of consumer loans, it can also lead you down a slippery slope into greater debt, while keeping you from saving for the future.

If you suspect you are headed for credit card trouble, ask yourself these questions: Do you make only the minimum payment required on your credit cards? Are you late making those payments? Do you regularly deplete your savings to cover living expenses? Do you have no real sense of where your pay check goes? If your answer to these questions is yes, "it may mean you're heading toward trouble," says Lynne Strang, a spokeswoman for the American Financial Services Association, a national trade association for small businesses and providers of consumer loans.

A good rule of thumb is to spend no more than 20 percent of your after-tax income on debt such as personal loans, credit card debt and car loans, says Charlotte Newton, vice president for consumer affairs at Mastercard. In theory, that kind of debt allotment will allow you to keep enough of your income available for necessary living expenses such as mortgage. rent. utilities. phone service, food, trips to the dentist, etc.

You don't have to be drowning in debt to need help. Even if you make the minimum payments on your balance each month, you should reassess your credit-card habits. If you can do so, definitely pay off more than the required minimum.

Why? Let's say you have a $2,000 balance-a far cry from the police officer's $25,000-on a card with a 21 percent interest rate. According to the Credit Counseling Service, if you only paid the minimum balance on that card, it would take 18 years to pay off and you'd end up paying $9,000 in interest alone-almost five times what you originally spent. What's more, if you invested that $9,000 instead, in something that appreciated 6 percent annually, in 18 years you would walk away with over $25,000.

On the other hand, if you are in dire straits and it's all you can do to make the minimum payment, be sure not to fall behind. Your credit card company will report any failure to pay, and any late payments, to the credit bureaus-a black mark that remains on your credit report for seven years.

Instead of becoming delinquent, call your card issuer and explain the situation. Ask if they can put you on a special payment program. "It's better to talk to your card company rather than pretend that the problem doesn't exist or to not pay your bills-that's the worst thing you can do," says Emily Porter, spokeswoman for American Express.

A good rule of thumb is to spend no more than 20 percent of your after-tax income on debt such as personal loans, credit card debt and car loans.

Charlotte Newton
Mastercard

The Credit Counseling Service can help by contacting the card companies for you to strike a payment deal-sometimes card companies will halt finance charges and late fees as well.

The service has 14,000 clients with some $109 million in card debt. For a fee that ranges from $3 to $65 a month, depending on the number of cards and the debt you have, the organization will pay your bills for you (with your money, of course) and act as your conscience if you fall behind.

Difficulty with paying off credit card purchases usually reflects an underlying problem with budgeting money.

Once you have set up a payment plan - stick to it. And then be sure to cut the plastic cards into pieces and say "hello" to cash.

You simply cannot do that? Well, Lynne Strang suggests that all cardholders buy a notebook to use solely to record credit card purchases. Every time you make a new purchase on your card, enter it as a debit in the book.

The point is to know exactly how much you've spent so that you'll have the cash on hand, when the bills come in.

Drama Workshop Movie to Premier

Members of the Cohasset Plays by the Sea Drama Club at the Deer Hill School have been hard at work and play these past few months. Under the direction of Sharon Weber, more than 40 Deer Hill students have participated in a movie-making workshop, in which the joys and heartaches, the successes and many tiny setbacks involved in the making of a movie are experienced. Using act one of the play based on the novel "Anne of Green Gables," the students and some adult volunteers have, since February, logged countless hours, and the product of the workshop is a movie which will be available for community viewing the weekend of June 13 to 15 at the Cohasset High School auditorium. Friday's showing will be 7 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 3 p.m.

Students were responsible for everything from acting in the children's parts, to make-up, set, camera, audio, lighting, and all aspects of technology. An invitation-only premiere showing was held Tuesday, June 10, followed by a reception at the Lightkeeper's House. The project was supported by the Cohasset PSO, the Deer Hill School faculty and staff, Country Way Radio, Cohasset Police Department, the Harbor Express in Quincy, local friends of the arts who loaned their kitchen, bedroom, porch, yard or landscape for movie sets, Media One — the South Shore's Cable TV Company, and especially the parents of the participating students, who consistently supported the work of this project.

Cohasset by the Sea Plays Drama Club produced the musical "Wizard of Oz," earlier this year for sell-out crowds. A talent show is the next project.

Emily Sullivan, Caroline Carr, Marissa Mello, Christopher Carr and Sera Genovese worked on the raspberry cordial scene in their movie based on the novel 'Anne of Green Cables.'

Festival on the Common is June 20-22

The South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common will take place on June 20, 21, 22 on the Cohasset Common and at the South Shore Art Center's galleries.

The planned festivities include five art exhibitions, 100 craft artisans from all over the U.S., an international food court, continuous entertainment, participatory sculpture, artist demonstrations and workshops.

Parking is free at the South Shore Music Circus and a trolley, courtesy of Sullivan Brothers/ Auto Mall will transport visitors on a delightful three minute ride to the common. Admission is free to all Art Center events, but the center encourages a $1 donation from visitors as they leave. Proceeds from Festival donations benefit the non-profit South Shore Art Center and its exhibitions, educational programs and scholarships.

Tents on the common will feature the Juried Show (all media), the Juried Photography Show, the Members and the Young Artists Exhibition sponsored by Garelick Farms. The featured exhibition, "Make a Still Life: Ten Variations" was organized by Virginia A. Allen who gathered ten artists associated with Massachusetts College of Art to exhibit their works.

Special attractions include "The Suspenders," a juggling troupe who will offer a free workshop on Friday afternoon, followed by a stage show on the common. There will be a local singer, Dave Crossland, who will perform from 7-9 p.m., with a brief stop at 8 p.m. for a Luminaria around the Cohasset duck pond sponsored by the Cohasset Clergy.

The international food court includes Middle Eastern fare, Asian food, British deserts, cinnamon buns, fried dough, french fries, Italian ice, lemonade, American barbecue, ice cream, the ever-popular strawberry shortcake and a special barbecue chicken and ribs pack from the Silver Spoon Cafe for families who want to picnic on the common while watching the entertainment.

The awards ceremony for the juried shows will be on center stage, Cohasset Common at 6:30 p.m. It will be followed by the opening reception from 7-9 p.m. at the Art Center for the featured exhibition.

Saturday will bring an array of workshops (try your hand at the pottery wheel, watercolor painting and more), artist demonstrations, "paint alongs," free art activities in a special children's tent, "masterpiece photo," and a special participatory sculpture. Entertainment will include the South Shore Bay Band, dance troupes, the bagpipes of Matthew Malloch and the P.B & J. Folk Trio.

Sunday will offer the Easy Swing Band, the World Rhythm Duo sponsored by the Cohasset Diversity Club, and the Harborfest Marching Parade.

In between, the event is full of carillon concerts, roaming bagpipe players and fun from the neighboring Strawberry Festival.

For a complete schedule, call the South Shore Art Center at (617) 383- ARTS (2787).

Police Status Report for May

Police Chief Brian Noonan said with 20 arrests, May was a very busy month for the police department. Six of the arrests were for protective custody, five for warrants, three were for assault and battery, he said. Two each were for motor vehicle violations and minors in possession of alcohol. The were also arrests for possession of Class D substance (marijuana) and indecent exposure.

During May, the emergency dispatch center received 100, 9-1-1 calls, Noonan said.

Also last month, all officers completed their mandatory in-service training required by the Criminal Justice Training Council. This course requires one week of in-service training at the Plymouth Police Academy. Officers also re qualified for firearms at the Scituate Rod and Gun Club under certified firearms instructor, Det. Rick Grassie.

Two officers also completed a specialized school in police mountain bike patrol training called COBWEB.

Friends of the Paragon Carousel Honors Volunteers

On May 31, "Opening Day", The Friends of the Paragon Carousel, Inc. hosted a festive breakfast, donated by Michael Aprea of Z Chef Catering,, to honor the many volunteers who were instrumental in the Friends' efforts to "save" the Carousel last Spring.

Susan Fleck, President of the Friends thanked those gathered, reminding them: "Without your incredible efforts we would have lost the Paragon Carousel. For that we will be forever thankful. But there is still much to be done. The, future of the Carousel is not secure and we need your continued help and support." Fleck was referring to the fact that the Friends must raise $450,000 by June, 1998 in order to meet the requirements of the Massachusetts Historical Commission's $100,000 challenge grant and retire all debt incurred in the purchase of the Carousel.

Fleck introduced the Carousel's new operations manager, Liz Ackerman, formerly of SKI New Hampshire. Ackerman outlined all the options for volunteerism including the new "Carousel Ambassador" program.

"What is your specialty? We need entertainers, greeters, historical guides, office help, restoration help and anyone who would like to be a part of this wonderful place. The Carousel is a valuable project and on a warm summer day, a very happy place. Come and contribute what you can," she said.

The entrance to the Carousel is now graced with large planters of annuals generously donated by Bruce and Joanne Reed of Reeds Country Nursery in Hingham.

Little Jesse Batts takes a nap amid all the excitement as CHS senior J. L. Williams is looking dapper in the background at the recent pre-prom gala at the Lightkeepers Residence.

THIS WEEK

Festival on Common This Weekend

The South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common will take place this weekend on the Cohasset Common and at the South Shore Art Center's galleries.

The planned festivities include five art exhibitions, 100 craft artisans from all over the U.S., an international food court, continuous entertainment, participatory sculpture, artist demonstrations and workshops.

Parking is free at the South Shore Music Circus and a trolley, courtesy of Sullivan Brothers/ Auto Mall, will transport visitors on a three-minute ride to the common. Admission is free to all Art Center events, but the center encourages a $1 donation from visitors as they leave. Proceeds from Festival donations benefit the non-profit South Shore Art Center and its exhibitions, educational programs and scholarships.

Tents on the common will feature the Juried Show (all media), the Juried Photography Show, the Members and the Young Artists Exhibition sponsored by Garelick Farms. The featured exhibition, "Make a Still Life: Ten Variations" was organized by Virginia A. Allen who gathered 10 artists associated with Massachusetts College of Art to exhibit their works.

For a complete schedule of events, see pages 12 and 13.

Two Merchants Sell to Minors in Compliance Check

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Two local merchants sold cigarettes to minors in the most recent tobacco compliance check, conducted by the South Shore Tobacco Collaborative on June 5.

Dawn Sibor of the Tobacco Collaborative said one business, Curtis Liquors, committed a first-time violation, and CVS in Tedeschi Plaza committed its second violation this year.

The collaborative conducts three compliance checks per year to ensure that businesses are not selling cigarettes to minors. The checks are conducted randomly to prevent mer-

Red Lion Inn Gets a New Lease on Life

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The Red Lion Inn got yet another lease on life last month when a Scituate businessman purchased the historic inn from its most recent owner.

Paul Logue, former owner of Pier 44 in Scituate and Hugo's Lighthouse in Cohasset, purchased the inn on May 29, although he would not disclose the purchase price.

The future of the historic Red Lion Inn has been uncertain for the last two years. In January 1996 a Florida businessman, Carl Ackerblom, bought the building for $300,000 at auction with promises to revitalize the ailing business. But the restaurant was closed for the winter, renovations proceeded at a slow pace and Ackerblom's promises seemed doomed to failure.

Published reports appeared last month saying that Ackerblom planned to sell the inn, but was having trouble transferring a liquor license. Ackerblom could not be reached for comment.

Logue said the inn's misfortunes can be attributed

Selectman Wants Town Tuned in To Better Government Coverage

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

Selectman Diane Sullivan wants the people of Cohasset to have better cable coverage of local government meetings.

Last month she asked MediaOne, Cohasset's cable provider, for some ideas about ways to improve local cable coverage. She expected MediaOne to have one or two good ideas, but what she got was a formal letter with 10 good ideas.

Sullivan said she hopes to meet with MediaOne representatives soon to discuss implementing at least one of the proposals.

Currently, the only televised meeting in town is a live broadcast of each selectmen's meeting. A camera posted in a high corner of the room transmits each meeting to Cohasset cable customers.

Approximately 50 town boards meet in Cohasset on a regular basis.

Sullivan said she would like to see all town boards receive regular cable coverage, even if it means opening up the selectmen's office for other meetings.

"It's important to let the public see what is happening

Recreation Department Presents Summer Production Workshop

The Cohasset Recreation Department announces that registrations will begin for the children's drama workshop's 10-year anniversary production of "Once Upon a Time" Monday, June 16.

"Once Upon a Time" will be a medley of shows starring the most memorable characters and moments from classics including "The Lion King," "The Little Mermaid," "Beauty and the Beast," "Aladdin," "The Wizard of Oz," "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," and many more of our favorite fairy tale characters. Children between the ages of 5 to 12 years old may join the cast of "Once upon a time."

Rehearsals are held at the Cohasset High School Auditorium from 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, beginning Tuesday, July 1. Parts will be assigned Tuesday, July 8. Children will learn to sing, dance, act and be involved in set and prop construction.

Past children's drama workshop productions include "Aladdin" (1996), "Beauty and the Beast" (1995) and "The Little Mermaid" (1994). The fee for the seven-week program is $145 per child. If the child is a participant in the Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Playground program, the fee is $130. There is a $12 discount per each additional child.

Founder of The Children's Drama Workshop eight summers ago, Elizabeth Deveney will be producing/directing the show again this year. Early registration is advised due to limitation in participation. It's first come, first serve, so even if your child has participated in past productions, register early as the number of cast members is limited.

For more information, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Liquor License Transferred

Selectmen voted to transfer the liquor license from Patrick Connelly, manager of the former Liquors Unlimited in the village to Clifford Chase, president of Chase Enterprises. Chase will open a new package store at 29-30 Main St. where Liquors Unlimited was located.

Packets Available

Packets containing basic information on Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE), and [illegible] measures for mosquito control are available at three Cohasset sites: Town Hall (in a receptacle mounted on the large billboard), the Community Center, and the Paul Pratt Library.

This information has been provided by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the Audubon Society, and the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee (CMCC). For further information call 383-9900, ext. 121, or leave a note in the CMCC mailbox in town hall.

Annual Summer Solstice Celebration Slated

The Trustees of Reservations has announced that its 14th annual summer solstice celebration will be held Saturday evening June 21, from 6 to 8 p.m. If weather is questionable, call the World's End ranger station at 749-8956 after 4 p.m. So pack a picnic supper, load the entire family into the car and join many of your friends and neighbors atop Planter's Hill for a most entertaining evening.

Tractor-drawn hayrides will be offered from 6 to 8 p.m. The night's festivities will be highlighted by the musical entertainment of the visiting Ecuadorian musical group Yarena that means "Remembrance." Yarena's members, who are descendants of the Incas, will perform a selection of colorful music on a pan pipe, wood flute, guitar and drum. In addition, local naturalist Phil Swanson will provide a captivating explanation of the planetary alignment that brings this wonderful solstice each summer. As always, soft drinks and popcorn will be available and cookies will be provided for dessert.

An admission fee of $3 for members of the Trustees of Reservations and $5 for non-members will be charged to cover expenses. Children 16 years and under will be admitted free. Sorry, no dogs.

For more information, call Mary Campbell at The Trustees' southeast regional office at (617) 821-2977.

Walkers Take Benefit in Stride

By Robert Ziff
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The rules were simple: at least one member of each of the 17 teamsparticipating in this year's Walk for Life, had to be on the track, either walking or jogging, at all times. This was to go on from 3 p.m. Friday to 3 p.m. Saturday. Every team member was to raise at least $100 in pledges before the event.

Elaine Corbett, who was diagnosed with cancer in January, was to walk as part of the 40-person team, Winged Victory. She was effervescent and full of life as she spoke of how the angels had come down from the heavens and saved her, hence the name Winged Victory. Accompanied by her husband, she was to walk the middle of the night shift.

At the start on Friday, honorary chairperson, State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, delivered a short but touching speech focusing on the remembrance of deceased family members and friends as well as others who have been touched by this disease.

Those present who had survived cancer were asked to come to the beginning of the track and accept a white balloon. As the American flag was being raised high above the field, 12-year-old Carolyn Carr delivered a stunning rendition of the National Anthem which, at its conclusion, set off the survivors walk, the one lap around the track by the dozen or so survivors of cancer holding their white balloons. The scene was emotional and was done so with pride, hope and a sense of victory.

Two of the leaders of team G-Force, Gary Garbor and his good friend, Gary Ritts, who has cancer, said they had been organizing their team and getting pledges for the past two months and at last count they had 12 members on their team, the youngest being 12 and the oldest being "whatever." They said that besides being a good cause, "The relay is a good time. It's a family oriented event. It's a good excuse for a camp-out and a barbecue and meeting new people who share the same values."

Mark Kowalski, who is on the Relay for Life Committee and has been involved for the past five years, said, "The beauty of this event is that the great majority of the money raised was done so before the relay even started."

"Most of the money goes straight to the causes rather than being eaten up by administrative overhead," he said. "The proceeds from the luminary walk and the sale of T-shirts and sweat shirts are just frosting on the cake."

Although Boston and other areas of Massachusetts had been doused, by 9 p.m. Friday the rain had still not yet moved into Cohasset and the luminary walk began. The track was lined with luminescent containers each one having the name of a cancer patient on it and was either in memory of, or in honor of that person.

Many tears were shed as the walkers made their way around the track stopping at the luminescence of their family members and friends to say a prayer, give thanks, or to share a moment of silence in remembrance.

Long after the music being played was turned off, the night air cooled, and the charcoal embers in the barbecues died out, there was always at least 17 walkers on the track. Others, snug in their sleeping bags, slept in their tents after finishing or awaiting their shift, and this continued throughout the night and wee hours of the morning.

On the quarter-mile track, from 3 to 9 a.m., 12-year-old Ross Lied-Lappen accomplished a personal victory completing 105 laps, the same distance as the New York Marathon.

The dawn broke with a stunning array of colors splashed across the sky as the early morning sun reflected off the few remaining clouds left over from the night before.

By 10:30 a.m. the fundraising goal of $15,000 had been smashed and the total money in at the time was more than $20,000, with a good chance of it breaking $25,000 by the day's end. People who were not affiliated with any team were stopping by to walk a few laps and to make a donation.

After the event concluded, Julie Carchedi, the regional director for the American Cancer Society, said she "Was extremely pleased with the turnout seeing that this was the first year this event was held in Cohasset. Everyone was already excited about next year's relay." As of Monday morning, the current total of funds raised was $24,832 and there was more money still expected.

Caitlin Connolly and Scott Newhirh circle the track.

From Physics to Divinity School

Pastor Answers Call in Cohasset

Rev. Robert Harlbut

By Mary Sheppard Earon

When Robert Hurlbut discussed his decision to turn down a full scholarship to Rennselaer Poly Technical School in New York and enter divinity school instead, he was asked first, "What did your mother say?"

"She knew I had my reasons," he smiled. "I had learned in my high school and college studies that science is considered to be man's best attempt to understand the world around them. Scientists will say 'we don't know the answers, we're trying to figure them out.' I began to feel that before physics, a creative being had begun it all."

The Rev. Robert Hurlbut is the pastor of the Cohasset Community Church, an organized Baptist church begun last November. Services are held on Sundays at 10:30 a.m., in the Deer Hill School cafeteria.

"Until the age of 16, I'd struggled with the idea that there was a personal god, who was there for us. I'd heard all the Bible stories, as we all have, and still wasn't sure. Most scientists, who spend a lot of time trying to figure out the world, will say they're agnostic or atheists. But they will also say that they are looking for something that started it all," he said. "The evidence points to something that began, then moved out. Einstein acknowledged that there was something out there. Finally, I was also able to acknowledge after studying the different theories proposed, that something, someone had to turn everything on, and if it was a creative god, then it was possibly a personal one also, one who was there for us."

That acknowledgment became a turning point for Hurlbut and his eventual desire to enter divinity school. His understanding and application of physics and math had been rewarded with many awards in high school. Even though he was presented with the scholarship to RPI, his plan had been to attend MIT in Cambridge.

While in college at Oklahoma State, Robert, religiously interested, taught Bible study classes with the campus ministry. He stated that he 'got the call' to serve in the ministry at that time, but ignored it.

"I felt at the time that I needed to enter the work force, which I did ultimately, as a computer programmer."

But the call to enter divinity school came again. This time, Hurlbut answered the call.

"There is a national trend of people today who are going, not from high school or college, but from the working world, after ten and 15 years, into the ministry. They are people, like myself, who are choosing to give up security and material status to enter seminaries and do God's work.

"My perception of the ministry was a pretty limited one up until then," he laughed. "I thought a minister was one person in a congregation in a parish who worked one hour a week, giving a sermon in that hour. I realized that wasn't the case. I then had to struggle with my personal place in the ministry. I didn't see myself as someone in a big church. I then studied where the possibilities were and mission work came to the forefront. But, now I see that every minister's work is mission work."

Although the idea of mission work in underdeveloped countries appeals to Hurlbut, he feels at the same time, his mission work is needed here in the United States just as much.

"The third most unChristianized nation in the world is America. There are more people here who don't profess anything than there were 30 years ago, and it's evident in the younger generations who aren't sure what to believe. Part of that affective loss is the lack of standards and a center to many's existence. An example is teenage suicide. It is sad that the attitude today is 'who cares, it's in your hands, do whatever you want.'"

Hurlbut acknowledged, in other evidence, that we have gained a stronger spiritual foundation than we've had in many years. We have only to look at the growth in the market for spiritual products.

According to the Forbes magazine article titled "Spiritual Reality," in the Jan. 27, 1997 issue, Christian music sales was at $550 million in 1996. Sales of religious publishers reached $1 billion, and fulltime religious radio stations now total 1,648, with more than 400 as Christian music stations. Nielsen's eighth ranked television show, after three seasons, is "Touched By An Angel" on CBS.

The tremendous market for spiritual products seems as remote as a distant star in the morning service led by Hurlbut in the Deer Hill cafeteria on a recent Sunday. On the battered metal chairs were copies of the Bible and Baptist Hymnal. The music was a cross between contemporary and traditional, some was taped, some was live. The message was inductive where questions were asked of the scripture and how they could be applied to one's life. Harlbut is happy to be here on the Soth Shore.

One personable and bright young man, Justin Johnson, who is entering North Carolina University at Chapel Hill in the fall, is planning on studying political science.

"I always liked the northeast part of the country. I like the history here and the sense of tradition. Most of my math professors trained at Harvard. Kim and I had seen videos of mission groups working in Boston's inner city. One was Beacon Hill. I was intrigued and thought then about coming here."

Hurlbut knew, because of the culture, that his work here would be difficult.

"I knew patience and endurance were key. If introducing something new in another place would take one week to catch on, here in New England it would take six weeks. It all has to do with cultural values," he said. "People here do not jump on quickly to anything. But people who jump on quickly, will jump off just as quickly, I've learned. It takes time to develop trust and relationships. We're new, Baptist, and from another part of the country. They're barriers and this will all take time."

Chiropractic for HEALTH
by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor
IMPORTANT FACETS OF THE SPINE
The wear-and-tear process associated with osteoarthritis involves degenerative changes in the discs and displacement between vertebrae, resulting in a loss of motion in the gliding joints of the spine. Found in pairs along the entire length of the spine, these "facet" joints allow for its movement and flexibility. As the discs undergo degenerative changes and the function of the facet joints becomes altered due to osteoarthritis, the spine becomes less flexible and more vulnerable to injury. Chiropractic addresses these effects with specific adjustments of the spine intended to unlock the facet joints. The goal is to improve spinal mobility, relieve the accompanying contractions of muscles, ligaments, and tendons and remove any irritation of the nerve that might cause pain.
At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we are trained to restore the health of your spine and joints. Special chiropractic methods, called adjustments, can help reduce swelling and irritation, relieve pain, and slow degeneration. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor, where we work to restore your health and guide you in a personalized approach to overall wellness. Please call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. Let us help you live life without pain.
P.S. When the facet joints endure repeated trauma from excessive athletic activity, the commonly experienced result is low back pain and/or leg pain.

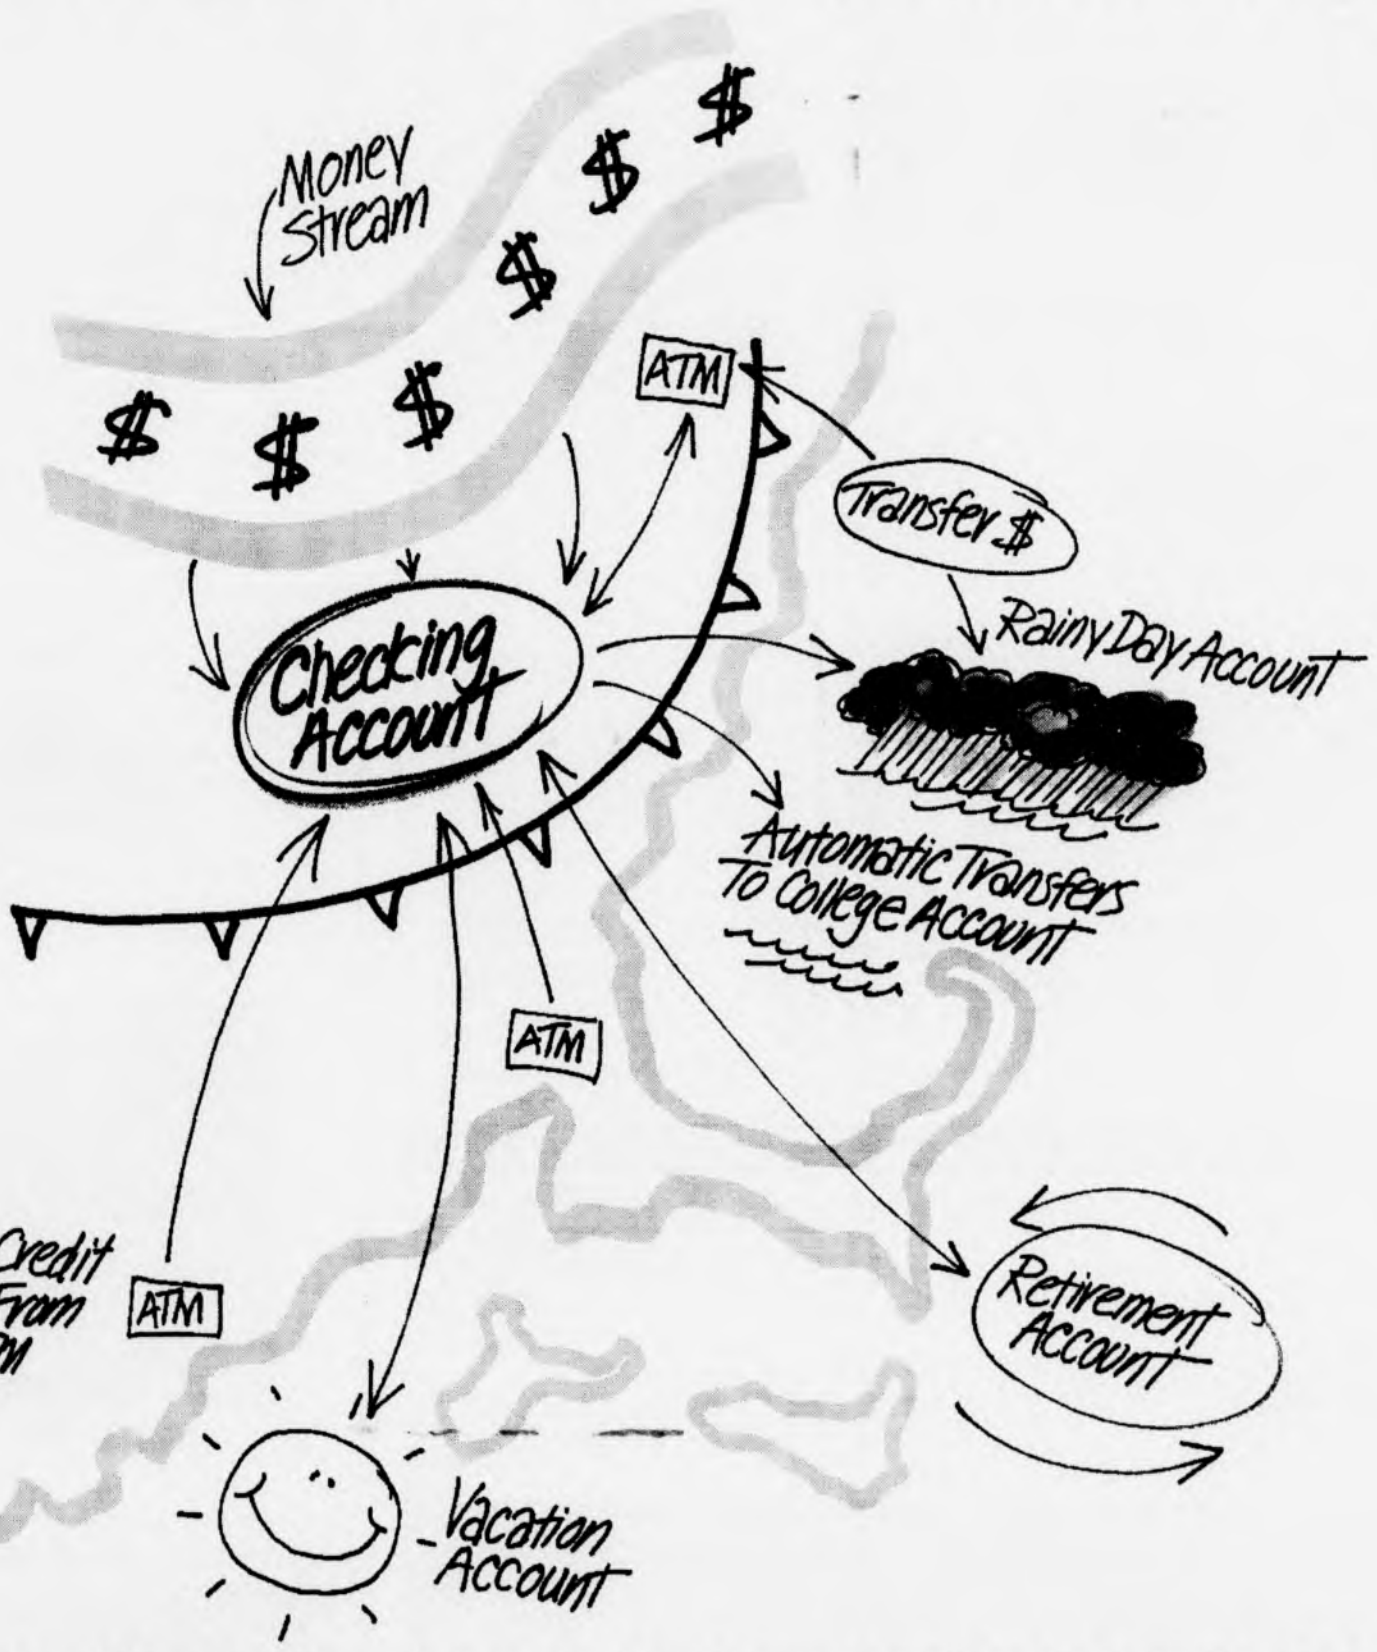
Mystery Night Set



Buttonwood Books and Toys will present its spring Mystery Night Wednesday, June 25, from 7 to 9 p.m. at its Cohasset store. Boston area mystery authors Susan Oleksiw, Barbara Shapiro, and Toni Kelner will speak and read from their books.

The three authors are members of the Sisters-in-Crime and will be informative sources with regard to writing and publishing. Oleksiw is the author of the Mellingham mystery series featuring Chief of Police Joe Silva; her latest book is "Family Album. She is currently working on the fourth in this series and a new series featuring a Hindu-American woman sleuth. Shapiro sets her novels in the Boston area. Her psychological thrillers, "Shattered Echoes," "Blameless" and "See No Evil" keep readers on the edge of their seats. Kelner's main character in her four mysteries, Laura Fleming, is a Southerner transplanted to Massachusetts. Her latest, "Country Comes to Town," crackles with the sharp, southern sass that is Kelner's trademark.

There is no charge, but reservations should be made by calling 383-2665 for seating and refreshments.

Turkey Hill Protected in Partnership

A five-way land conservation coalition concluded May 26 the purchase and protection of Turkey Hill, a South Shore coastal drumlin once used by the U.S. Defense Department as a Cold War radar control site.

The effort was spearheaded by The Trustees of Reservations and joined by the towns of Hingham and Cohasset and their local land trusts (the Hingham Land Conservation Trust and the Cohasset Conservation Trust).

Then, as now, Turkey Hill is one of the highest spots along the South Shore, offering a panoramic view of Boston Harbor and the Atlantic Ocean as well as providing access to a contiguous network of more than 5,000 acres of open space in the region.

The parcel's purchase strategy, hammered out in unprecedented fashion by the coalition's five partners, called for each town to acquire the land within its boundaries — Hingham acquired 30 acres, Cohasset 20 acres. The final five-acre hilltop parcel, site of the previous U. S. military installation, was transferred to The Trustees of Reservations. The Trustees of Reservations holds a conservation restriction over the entire 55-acre property, guaranteeing its protection from development forever.

A committee of representatives from the two towns and the three land trusts will oversee stewardship policy, while the Trustees of Reservations will supply staff to manage and maintain the property as part of its adjacent 813-acre Whitney and Thayer Woods Reservation, also spanning Hingham and Cohasset.

In 1995, the 55-acre Turkey Hill parcel was listed for sale for $1.6 million. Fearing that the parcel would be sold to developers, representatives from The Trustees of Reservations met with the landowner, Joseph Saponaro, to discuss options for purchasing the parcel at a below-market value with the objective of protecting it as open space for public enjoyment.

Mr. Saponaro agreed to a purchase price of $810,000 and, after transaction expenses, site stabilization work, and start-up costs were estimated, the project cost rose to $1,034,400. Each partner in the coalition has contributed a portion of the overall sum required.

The town of Hingham has contributed $165,000 and the town of Cohasset contributed $125,000. The Massachusetts Division of Conservation Services appropriated $437,400 through its Self Help grant program, while The Trustees of Reservations and the two local land trusts raised the final $307,000 through private donations from nearly 350 individuals.

Hingham Town Moderator Tom O'Donnell, who also serves as chairman of the Trustees of Reservations Land Conservation Committee, rejoiced in the purchase. "I knew that if the towns of Hingham and Cohasset, along with their local land trusts, joined forces with The Trustees of Reservations, Turkey Hill could be protected in perpetuity. This unique marriage of both public and private sector interests — so rarely seen these days — shows what can be achieved for land conservation against the greatest odds."

Fred Winthrop Jr., executive director of The Trustees of Reservations, echoed Mr. O'Donnell's sentiment. "For many years, Turkey Hill has remained a very high conservation priority for the towns of Hingham and Cohasset as well as for The Trustees of Reservations. We are absolutely delighted that the coalition was able to find the sort of creative, effective solution needed to protect this breathtaking site."

During the early 1950s, the U.S. Defense Department developed an advanced missile system which it named Nike after the Greek winged goddess of victory. From Washington to San Francisco, and in many cities in between, so-called Nike facilities were set up to thwart potential nuclear air attack by the Soviet Union. By 1955, a dozen Nike facilities ringed Boston, each manned by as many as 90 military personnel.

Each Nike facility had a radar control site paired with a missile launch site approximately one mile away. The radar control site was designed to pick up and track incoming Soviet bombers, and then to guide a U.S.-launched counterattack missile toward its air target. Turkey Hill served as a radar control site for one such Nike facility and consisted of nine crude concrete block and brick buildings. Three of the nine buildings on Turkey Hill were used as missile acquisition and tracking radar towers, with the remaining buildings used, for example, as administrative offices, soldier barracks and storage facilities.

On Scituate Hill in Cohasset, one mile from Turkey Hill, the paired missile launch site was constructed. Like other missile launch sites, the site on Scituate Hill probably contained three bunkers housing four rockets. Each rocket was equipped with four missiles, one in firing position, three ready for reloading. None of the Nike facilities which once surrounded Boston remain in military use; the Turkey Hill site was abandoned in 1965, after which time it was used briefly by a firm to store municipal Christmas decorations.

All but one of the buildings associated with Turkey Hill's Nike site have been demolished, leaving several scars on the landscape. If further funds can be raised, the single remaining building, previously a radar control tower, may be used to interpret for visitors the natural and cultural history of the property, including its military use during the Cold War.

Following preparations of a landscape design for the site, work will begin this summer to reshape and replant the area as well as construct two small parking areas to provide public access. The Trustees of Reservations hopes to open Turkey Hill to the public by September 1997, in time to capture the majestic autumn season and its colorful tree foliage. Once open to the public, Turkey Hill will provide further access to The Trustees of Reservations' adjacent 813-acre property to the east, Whitney and Thayer Woods Reservation.

Founded in 1891, The Trustees of Reservations is a private, member-supported, nonprofit conservation organization dedicated to preserving, for public use and enjoyment, properties of exceptional scenic, historic and ecological value.

Students Take a Ride Along Oregon Trail

By Mary Sheppard Earon
Special to the Mariner

The fifth grade presentation of the ambitious project, The Oregon Trail, went off with barely a hitch on Friday, June 6.

It included a five-act stage play in two performances, culminating in the fifth grade's history and literature study of the settling of America's West.

Outside the Deer Hill school cafeteria, where the five act play, complete with props and painted back drops, was staged, were tables of covered wagons displayed. On the school walls were posters signed to look effectively aged that advertised the sale of the wagons and encouraged people from the East to go West, a quilt of sewn together painted canvas squares, depicting the western movement, was displayed between acts.

The play consisted of play-acting, dance and music. The fifth grade students researched and wrote the original script during their classes, including computer and library time.

Teachers involved were Dayle Dickinson (Language Arts and History), Kathy Jordan (Language Arts), Frank Deakin (History), Linda Anderson (Computer Education), Marjorie Murphy (Librarian), Jack MacInnis (Music), Ann Berman (Art), and Torin Sweeney (Physical Education).

Government Coverage

at meetings," Sullivan said. "It keeps the board members sharper when they know they're on camera."

Wendy Copithorne, Cohasset Production and Programming Manager for MediaOne, has proposed 10 possible options:

•Town board could hold meetings in the selectmen's office for live cable broadcast. No additional cost.

•Town boards could hold meetings in the selectmen's office, and the proceedings could be recorded on videotape for re-broadcast on cable. Cost would be $175 per year for video tapes.

•Volunteers could record meetings with camcorders and bring the tape to the cable studio in Scituate for broadcast. No cost.

•A pre-taped "Week in Review" show with an anchor recapping the results of each week's meetings. No cost, but four or five volunteers would be necessary to run the program.

•Create a town of Cohasset web site to post meeting results, times, minutes and other information. Cost not yet determined.

•Create a videotape archive of meeting coverage. Cost of $175 per year for videotapes.

•Add a mobile camera to the selectmen's office for $6,000, or robotic cameras for $15,000 to provide better camera coverage.

•Install a camera in the town hall auditorium. Costs not yet determined.

•Solicit volunteers to implement some of the previous options or to develop new ones. No cost.

•Use digitized video to display select meeting clips on the web site. Cost not yet determined.

Sullivan said her own preference is for the Week in Review show.

"I am particularly interested in the 1/2-hour show, but we would need to find someone to anchor it," Sullivan said.

Sullivan added that she would volunteer to anchor the show if she wasn't already so busy with other commitments. Sullivan recently joined the Greenbush Mitigation Committee as a voting member, and also serves as the selectmen's liaison to many other boards.

There is still much work to be done before any of the proposals can be implemented, Sullivan said. She still needs to discuss the ideas with other town board members for their input and suggestions.

Sullivan has initiated several other policies to make public meeting information available to residents. Selectmen now post the minutes of their meetings on the bulletin board in town hall. She has urged other town boards to do the same.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

We have some Olympic news to report this week — you won't believe it! Everyone in town knows Ann Leonard, we think, if not, you will want to meet her after you read this! Ann competed recently in the Senior Olympic Games, held in Quincy (it is sponsored by the City of Quincy and Beechwood By The Bay), and she came home sporting five Gold Medals! That is not a misprint, she earned them all — in the javelin, shot put, running long jump, standing long jump and the softball throw. Ann is now "80-something," and is obviously still as fit as a fiddle — she is an inspiration to us all, and a wonderful woman on top of it all! We are so proud of you, Ann, keep up your good work!

On May 28 Peter Andrew Plante graduated from St. Coletta's Day School in Braintree. Peter is the son of Patrick and Maria Plante of Cohasset. It was a very happy occasion for Peter as all his family joined in the celebration of his commencement. Peter had just returned from a week-long trip to Disney World with his fellow graduated and the graduates from Cardinal Cushing School in Hanover. Peter and his fellow graduates send a special note of thanks to the most generous employees of the Abington Savings Bank who were responsible for making the trip a reality for 22 graduates, 22 chaperones and a nurse. Thank you!

Attention, gardeners! The South Shore Community Center is sprucing up just in time for Harborfest! They are seeking donations of any extra perennials you might have! Whatever you can donate will be appreciated! Join them in creating a friendship perennial border around the center — please bring your plants to the center at 3 North Main St. P.S. They will take care of all of the digging!

Pat and Bill Baird have had an exciting month heading south with Mike and Tim. First, Dan graduated from Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., with a bachelor of engineering degree in mechanical engineering. Dan is going to live and work in Nashville. A week later, Bill graduated from pilot training at Fort Rucker, Ala., where he earned his wings as a helicopter pilot and received his first lieutenant's bars. Bill and his wife, Angie, are looking forward to spending the next three years at Malstrom Air Force Base in Great Falls, Mont.

We have news that Caitlin Welby is one excited young lady, she is going to be a television star! Caitlin was selected by Disney to be on their television show, "Bug Juice." They are going to follow her around as she attends camp in Maine for the summer! Caitlin is 15 years old, and will be going to Newman Prep in Boston in the fall. So, be sure to watch the Cohasset Star on "Bug Juice!"

Larry and Linda Shultz are walking on air lately, and they certainly have a wonderful reason to do so — his name is John Lawrence Shultz, the brand new baby boy born to Bob and Jennifer June 7, at 7 p.m. John Lawrence weighed 6 lbs., 1 oz., and measured 19 inches long. He joins big sister, Anna, who is just thrilled by the whole thing. We will get to meet John when he and the rest of his family come to Larry and Linda's house in August for a visit. We cannot wait; just imagine how Larry and Linda feel!

As everyone knows by now, this weekend will be a grand one, the South Shore Art Center's 42nd Annual Festival on the Common, which also features the seventh annual Strawberry Festival and Harborfest. So much has already been written, the excitement is mounting — one thing that you may not have heard, Carol Runey and Ann Pompeo have donated something that is the hottest thing around — Beanie Babies! There are going to be both big ones and teeny ones, and they will all be up for a raffle that will be part of the Strawberry Festival. Plan to attend; have the yummiest ever strawberry shortcake, buy raffle tickets — then, stroll around the common, check out all of the festivities that are being put on by the Harborfest, then at the end, find out if you are a lucky beanie baby winner! And, be sure to thank Carol and Ann for their generosity! Oh, good luck — may the best collectors win!

Benjamin W. Manning, son of Mrs. Estey Manning of Cohasset and Mr. John P. Manning of Boston, graduated from Tabor Academy May 31, at the school's 121st commencement exercises held at Martin Field. While at Tabor Academy, Ben was an active member of the varsity football and lacrosse teams. This year he received the coaches' trophy for football and was named captain of the varsity lacrosse team. Next fall, Ben will attend Whittier College located in Whittier, Calif., will major in business and plans to pursue lacrosse and football at the college level.

Along with the summer weather that has finally arrived, plan to enjoy your "around town" news too — the best way to do that is to call me with your newsworthy event! Please make a note to call as soon as and/or yours do anything you want us to print!

Alzheimer's Support Group Offered

The next monthly meeting of the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore will be held Wednesday, June 25, at 7:30 p.m. at Thaxter Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham. Gay Hayden, mental health counselor and bereavement coordinator for Old Colony Hospice will address "Grieving with Alzheimers: the Living Wake." She will discuss the unique process of grieving that begins long before the patient dies but with an unpredictable timetable.

As part of its hospice services, Alzheimers families are included for care and counseling at home as well as in nursing home settings. Ms. Hayden will include information on coping styles, what is "normal" in the grief process as well as what families may expect as part of the Alzheimer hospice program.

As usual, free respite care is available for your family member at Harbor House Day Health Center, 11 Condito Road (behind the Talbot's warehouse), Hingham, while you attend the meeting. Simply call Gervaise Haley at (617) 749-4774 before 3 p.m. June 25 to make a reservation for your patient.

Family members are urged to attend this meeting in support of one another. The meeting is free and open to anyone wishing to learn more about Alzheimer's Disease. Call 749-5417, for more information.

Charter School Announces Summer Camp

The South Shore Charter School announces the third year of its summer camp. The camp is for interested area youth from grades K to 5. The camp is from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each weekday for the 6 weeks from July 7 through Aug. 15 at 2 A Street in Hull.

Camp Director Vicki Yeager, R.N. reports that the camp will include a library project, environmental science, sailing with Claire Overlee, language and arts, book making, swimming, Orton-Gillingham Reading (for an extra fee), art with Nancy Connolly, crafts, soccer, computers, fitness, science field trips to Wompatuck with Cyndie Connolly, and music field trips.

The rate for the camp is $25 per day ($15 for a half day) and $125 per week with a 10 percent reduction if paid ahead for two full weeks or more. The price is reduced 10 percent for a family sending more than one child and reduced $50 further when paying ahead for the full 6 weeks.

Hedlund Announces Safe Neighborhood Grant Program

BOSTON — Sen. Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) announced that the Federal Assistance Monitor has published the availability of safe neighborhood grants. The new $20 million dollar program is aimed at eliminating drug-related crime problems in and near low-income housing.

"This grant is very timely given the increase in drug-related crime in the state, especially in areas where low income housing is located," noted Hedlund.

Grant proposals are due by Aug. 21, and the grants are open to owners or operators of housing developments that receive some form of financial support a unit of government or private non-profit.

For further information to access this grant, call Sen. Hedlund at (617) 722-1646.

Unity Night Announcement

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce would like to invite all town officials, board and committee members, private organizations and residents within Cohasset to join us on Tuesday, June 24 from 5:30-7:00 at The Chart House for Unity night. We anticipate this to be an enjoyable evening to share thoughts and ideas to enhance each of our abilities to preserve in sustaining Cohasset on its course of growth, prosperity, and unity. We hope you will take advantage of this opportunity to meet the many members of the business community who, like yourselves, contribute greatly to the Town. The Cohasset Chamber will provide the hors d'oeuvres, all we ask in return is for you to bring your thoughts, ideas, and suggestions for a better Cohasset for all to enjoy. RSVP to 383-1010.

Summer Flute Symphony Program Gearing Up

Last summer South Shore Conservatory Flute instructor Donald Zook attracted over 75 students to participate in his Flute Symphony program. He's aiming to top that this summer.

The program, one of the largest flute ensembles in the United States, is a unique opportunity for flutists to sharpen their musical skills and meet others with the same enthusiasm for music.

Students joining the program this year will rehearse and perform in the conservatory's state-of-the-art Jane C. Carr Amphitheater. The final concert is Wednesday, Aug. 13.

Zook views the prospect of his flute symphony program nearing 100 participants as a welcomed challenge.

"The greater the number of students, the more varied the levels of expertise," explains Zook. To keep them all up to speed, he plans to encourage more advanced students to share, through teaching and coaching opportunities, their knowledge and talent with younger and less advanced ones.

This year's diverse music literature varies from classical to do-wop, with the solo piece being "Night Soliloquy" by Kent Kennan.

The soloist for the flute symphony final concert, and those chosen for the Honors Symphonetta, are selected by audition after the start of the program.

Flute symphony begins Wednesday, June 25 and runs for eight consecutive Wednesday nights.

For registration information, call (617) 749-7565.

"HI, NEIGHBOR. HAVE YOU TRIED MY CHEESE?"
Cabot cheddar cheese, butter and other dairy foods are offered with pride by your nearby dairy farmers. The same farmers who, together, own the Cabot Creamery.
And what that means is, every time you buy a Cabot product, you're helping to support 192 family farms near you in Massachusetts and throughout the Northeast. You're helping to preserve a way of life that's been important here for generations. And you're getting some of the freshest, purest, best-tasting dairy products made anywhere.
Since 1919, your nearby farmers have been working this land, tending the herds and gathering milk. And as long as you keep buying, sharing and enjoying Cabot products, they'll keep right on doing it.

A GREEK ODYSSEY
Ask anyone who has been to Greece to describe it and the word "light" is likely to come up. There is simply something extraordinary about the sun-dappled Greek Isles. The sun feels more sensuous, the light has a more golden hue, and it's easy to imagine the sunrises and sunsets as lavish sets for the larger-than-life gods and goddesses of the Greek mythology. The light also beckons visitors to linger outdoors. As the afternoon sun turns to bronze, travelers are tempted to pause in outdoor cafes over plates heaped with olives, salads, and cheese pies. At night, even the moon and stars take on a special glow, inviting all to hold onto the day a little longer.

Remembering Jack Hubbard

Cohasset, the South Shore and the world that loves and protects our environment, lost a faithful friend and supporter on June 9 when John F. "Jack" Hubbard suffered a heart attack while rowing out from Little Harbor.

A member of the Riverside Boat Club in Cambridge, he had rowed a single shell in the Head of the Charles and had placed fifth in 1988 when he was 64.

In a lot of ways, Jack would not have chosen to leave his cherished universe any other way. He was in his favorite boat, Cohasset Comet, when he suffered what officials would later call "a quiet heart attack." He died as he lived - one with nature. His family wrote in his obituary last week that "Jack Hubbard was truly happy when he was alone with just the currents, the sun, the wind, the ocean birds and his own vitality for companionship."

Jack's love for Cohasset blossomed when he summered here as a child. He developed an appreciation for the ocean, its wetlands and for the birds that wing their way overhead.

In his working life, Jack engineered oceanographic and sonar equipment for Massa Co. in Hingham. His retirement was hardly a time of leisure. He explored his many interests, helped start two organizations — the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham and the Manomet Observatory — to further research and educational opportunities for scientists and schoolchildren.

He served for many years on the Cohasset Conservation Commission and was chairman of the Cohasset Conservation Trust. He helped revitalize the Hull Lifesaving Museum and made so many other worthwhile contributions.

Jack worked very hard as a member of the Cohasset Conservation Trust to secure for perpetuity the 55-acre Turkey Hill parcel, a South Shore coastal drumlin once used by the U.S. Defense Department as a Cold War radar control site. It is a fitting tribute to his life of volunteerism that he saw this his final project reach successful fruition on May 26 when the land was purchased for future protection.

Jack's family and friends will miss him and Cohasset will miss him. He has left his mark on this town and on the world and he will never be forgotten.

Support the Festival

We're lucky here in Cohasset. We don't have to travel an inch farther than the Common to enjoy a stupendous show of art and photography at this weekend's 42nd Annual "Festival on the Common."

No doubt we all know what a tremendous resource the South Shore Art Center is to this area and how lucky we are to have that facility so handy. This weekend is the culmination of months of planning that results in a first rate juried art and photography show, an outstanding assortment of more than 100 vendors who sell all manner of interesting wares from jewelry to clothing and more and activities that run the gamut from folk music to kids' activities and craft demonstrations.

This is just one of great reason to live in Cohasset. If you haven't ever attended, stop by. The festival is free with complimentary parking at the South Shore Music Circus on June 20 (3 to 9 p.m.); June 21, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and June 22, noon to 6:30 p.m.

Discovering Cohasset's Treasures

Carved into the rocky coastline of the Atlantic Ocean, Cohasset offers the epitome of life in a small New England town.

Because it is such a small town it seems as though everyone knows each other and chance meetings, between friends and acquaintances, occur often. Cohasset is not only a town but a close-knit community as well.

Driving, biking, or walking along Jersusalem or Atlantic avenues it is impossible not to notice the sheer beauty of the rock formations that protrude out from the agitated dark waters and the waves crashing upon them. It is also impossible not to notice the homes, the estates, that hug this stretch of shoreline taking advantage of the majestic views that are one of a kind.

Probably everyone in town has noticed that someone has taken this concept one step further and built a gray house with red shutters on a rock about a thousand yards off the coast of Black Rock Beach. Only accessible by boat, the structure which looks like it could be washed away by one large wave during a Nor'easter or a hurricane, seems to remain vacant throughout the winter with its' shutters firmly closed. During the summer months, with an American flag flying, there is activity there, but it has been mentioned by local fishermen that the foul odor of seagull droppings make for a most undesirable location to spend time. Each to their own.

You may also notice the now -infamous Kennedy Estate that has recently been mentioned on the front page of the Boston Globe as well as in other newspapers and aired on TV tabloid programs. The question is whether Kennedy slept with his under-age baby sitter. The answer, you would think, would be that people would have better things to do with their time than to follow a story of this nature.

Even though the population of Cohasset is below 6,000 there are extremely active political parties that debate heartfelt issues that will affect the town and its' residents. "Stop the train," "Bring the train," "Build a new school," "Don't build a new school," "Taxes," "Water?", "Sewer?" Not to mention the progress that the "Sidewalk Committee" is making in its efforts to get the town to build sidewalks alongside designated roads throughout Cohasset. These are subjects debated openly in town meetings.

Picking up a copy of "The Boston Globe" or "The New York Times," the issues Cohasset faces may seem to pale in comparison to those of the state, the nation, or of the world, but you can be assured that they are no less real and controversial in the town.

Prior to the town's elections it seems as though every road is lined with signs sticking out of people's yards, for candidates trying to influence the passersby. This can be observed for several weeks until its culmination where voters run the gamut as enthusiastic signs wave declaring their choice of candidates and make their way around the town green to town hall. Here there are still more volunteers equipped with signs and balloons.

Cohasset is also home for other, more relaxed events such as The Memorial Day and Halloween parades, the festival on the coomon in the summer, and the autumn festival. The number of children, from infants to early teens, in proportion to the number of adults who attend these functions is quite high. It seems as though every car registered in Cohasset has at least one car seat strapped in the back seat, and every yard has some telltale sign of children, whether it be toys in the driveway or a swing set in the back yard.

It is safe to say that Cohasset has become a baby booming community. Why shouldn't it? It has everything a town has to offer, such as sailing, fishing, sandy beaches, walking trails, a tennis club, health club, golf club, and its own grocery store, soon to be rivaled by a second.

Young families that have moved from Boston, to get out of the city, say, "They Discovered Cohasset," as if it were some sort of treasure. To an extent it is a treasure. It's a very special place.

Festival on the Commons

Festival on the Common is June 20-22

The South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common will take place on June 20, 21, 22 on the Cohasset Common and at the South Shore Art Center's galleries.

The planned festivities include five art exhibitions, 100 craft artisans from all over the U.S., an international food court, continuous entertainment, participatory sculpture, artist demonstrations and workshops.

Parking is free at the South Shore Music Circus and a trolley, courtesy of Sullivan Brothers/ Auto Mall will transport visitors on a delightful three minute ride to the common. Admission is free to all Art Center events, but the center encourages a $1 donation from visitors as they leave. Proceeds from Festival donations benefit the non-profit South Shore Art Center and its exhibitions, educational programs and scholarships.

Tents on the common will feature the Juried Show (all media), the Juried Photography Show, the Members and the Young Artists Exhibition sponsored by Garelick Farms. The featured exhibition, "Make a Still Life: Ten Variations" was organized by Virginia A. Allen who gathered ten artists associated with Massachusetts College of Art to exhibit their works.

Special attractions include "The Suspenders," a juggling troupe who will offer a free workshop on Friday afternoon, followed by a stage show on the common. There will be a local singer, Dave Crossland, who will perform from 7-9 p.m., with a brief stop at 8 p.m. for a Luminaria around the Cohasset duck pond sponsored by the Cohasset Clergy.

The international food court includes Middle Eastern fare, Asian food, British deserts, cinnamon buns, fried dough, french fries, Italian ice, lemonade, American barbecue, ice cream, the ever-popular strawberry shortcake and a special barbecue chicken and ribs pack from the Silver Spoon Cafe for families who want to picnic on the common while watching the entertainment.

The awards ceremony for the juried shows will be on center stage, Cohasset Common at 6:30 p.m. It will be followed by the opening reception from 7-9 p.m. at the Art Center for the featured exhibition.

Saturday will bring an array of workshops (try your hand at the pottery wheel, watercolor painting and more), artist demonstrations, "paint alongs," free art activities in a special children's tent, "masterpiece photo," and a special participatory sculpture. Entertainment will include the South Shore Bay Band, dance troupes, the bagpipes of Matthew Malloch and the P.B & J. Folk Trio.

Sunday will offer the Easy Swing Band, the World Rhythm Duo sponsored by the Cohasset Diversity Club, and the Harborfest Marching Parade.

In between, the event is full of carillon concerts, roaming bagpipe players and fun from the neighboring Strawberry Festival.

For a complete schedule, call the South Shore Art Center at (617) 383- ARTS (2787).

Young Artists Display at Festival

The work of young artists of Cohasset will be shown in the village store windows for all to see this weekend as part of the South Shore Art Festival on the Common.

Anyone wishing to display their artowrk should bring it to Cards & Shards no later than June 19. Any questions, call Sue Staley at 383-6317.

Strawberries for Everyone!

People are coming from all over New England to Cohasset Friday, June 20, from 3 to 9 p.m., Saturday, June 21, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sunday, June 22, from noon to 6 p.m., where more than 2000 strawberry shortcakes will be served in the tree-shaded brick patio next to the Cohasset Second Congregational Church during Cohasset's Festival on the Common.

Dozens of families all over Cohasset are preparing sauce from fresh strawberries and copious quantities of real whipped cream and biscuits for a genuine gourmet treat at the forthcoming combined South Shore Art Center Festival on the Common and the Second Congregational Church Strawberry Festival. Strawberry shortcakes will be served to everyone for only $3.

The festival, larger than ever this year, has been a South Shore institution for more than four decades. The South Shore Arts Festival, with juried art and photography exhibitions, musical and dramatic performances, will feature a crafts and juried artisan's market.

An expanded country store in Bates Hall of the Second Congregational Church facing the common and a food court will offer snack bar staples such as hamburgers and soft drinks, as well as strawberry shortcake and other snacks. The church facilities will be open for all and will offer a wide assortment of hand-made craft items as well as preserves, jams and home-baked cakes and deserts.

Children's Sidewalk Sale and Art Display

The Village Revitalization Committee is sponsoring a children's sidewalk sale Saturday, June 21, in the Ship Cove Park, next to French Memories, in Cohasset Village. Children are invited to bring items for sale such as crafts, toys, housewares, or anything you would normally see at your neighborhood yard sale. There is no cost to have a table set up. Children are also invited to bring their artwork from school down to the village for the Arts Festival weekend. Village merchants will display the artwork in their windows for the weekend. If you would like more information, or would like to participate in any of these activities, please call Frank Smith at Flemings at 383-0684.

Gospel Concert at First Parish

First Parish of Cohasset, Main Street, Cohasset, will present the New Temple Singers, under the direction of David Coleman, in a gospel concert Saturday, June 21, at 8 p.m., as part of Cohasset's Arts Festival/Harborfest celebration. For this, the fifth of the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church of Cohasset's annual gospel concert, the well known gospel singer Ruth Hamilton will provide musical solos, in addition to the choir's repertoire.

Hamilton, who has been singing in the Boston area for more than 50 years, has performed in Symphony Hall with Arthur Fielder and the Boston Pops, in France with the Patterson Chorale, in Jordan Hall and at the Gardner Museum, but mostly, in church. She will be accompanied by Carolyn Curtis, music director, First Parish.

The New Temple Singers is a mixed chorus of singers who perform contemporary and original gospel music. The choir, which can also be heard in regular Sunday worship services at St. Paul AME Church (Rev. Dr. Leroy Attles, Pastor) in Cambridge, has two recordings among its achievements.

Director Coleman, a native of Tennessee, is a graduate of Boston University with degrees in composition and piano, and has composed and arranged several of the New Temple Singers musical selections.

Hamilton and the New Temple Singers will perform in the First Parish Meeting House on Cohasset Common.

Tickets are $7, (but only $5 with a Harborfest Button). Tickets, as well as buttons, are available at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church office, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Call 383-1100 for tickets or information.

Children's Yard Sale Planned

There will be a children's yard sale on Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. It will be held at Ships Cove Park, which is between the buildings of Tedeschi and French Memories. Bring a blanket and a table to display your wares (toys only).
Any questions on the children's yard sale, call Donna Green at 383-6317.

Festival Raffle Benefits Community Center

The South Shore Community Center, located in the heart of Cohasset Village, stirs excitement by sponsoring a 50/50 raffle in which some lucky person could win as much as $25,000. Tickets are $100 each with a goal of 500 tickets to be sold. The winner will be selected at Cohasset's Harborfest Sunday, June 22, in the center's gym. The winner does not need to be present to win. There are a limited number of tickets, which are tax-deductible.

The proceeds of the raffle benefit the center, a 54-year-old non-profit institution dedicated to personal development and entertainment of South Shore residents. The center is funded solely by the generosity of its patrons ranging in ages from three to 93.

The center's summer programs include: Pre-K & Kindergarteners' Circus Week, Summer Fun Week, and Coastal Exploration Camp. Grade schoolers can find enrichment and fun in Creative Adventures Camp, Coastal Exploration Camp, Summer Cabaret Dance Camp, Chefs in the Kitchen, Jewelry Design, Gymnastics and Wrestling Camp. Adults can learn the secrets of cooking bluefish and bass from Chef Tony Ambrose of Boston-based Ambrosia Restaurant.

Drop by the center, located near Cohasset's Common at 3 North Main St., to purchase a raffle ticket and get information on any of the summer programs. Call (617) 383-0088 for assistance.

Looking Back on the Spring Season

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The book has been shut on the Cohasset spring sports season, sticks have been hung-up, spikes traded in for bare feet, and sliding pants for swimming trunks. Perhaps no three teams exhibited a greater diversity than the softball, lacrosse and baseball teams.

With a roster of nine youthful athletes, the softball team played a junior varsity schedule.

The lacrosse players were classic overachievers, posting remarkably dramatic victories and earning respect throughout the state.

Baseball, on the other hand, was a team which was supposed to hit its stride, but, due to a bizarre series of bad breaks, wound up transforming this year into a rebuilding one.

The softball team was led by Kelly Tufts, Lauren Dooley and Megan Waal, two juniors and a sophomore, respectively, who, despite a losing record, displayed a solid potential and hinted at a bright future for the Lady Skippers. Stocked with three freshman, four sophomores, and two juniors, the team won't graduate any seniors this year. Valuable experience earned the hard way this season will make next year's edition a force to be reckoned with.

Lacrosse was captained by Matt Belson, Jon Lacks and Ely Kahn, all three of whom were named to the

Just Another Senseless Cheerleading Tragedy

There are some things in life that are a given.

Turmoil within the Kennedy family. You'll get a cramp if you swim right after you eat. It rains on your day off. Models only marry rock stars. And the Patriots are just on step away from moving to (insert name of large metropolitan Southern/Midwestern/Northeastern city here).

Add to that list one more of life's little truths: whenever you have people choosing All-Star teams, traveling teams, tourney teams or cheerleading squads, somebody is going to leave the party if a huff.

Recently, the "Sound Off" line in one of the Mariner towns has been crackling with parents perturbed over the way a youth squad was picked. Some calls have even gone so far as to intimate that "the fix was in."

What! Kids are being chosen for teams because they are friend of so-and-so or their parents hang out at the same country club? You don't say.

You know what the best part about youth sports is? The parents coming out to support their children as they grow both physically and emotionally through an act of recreation.

You know what the worst part about youth sports is? The parents coming out to support their children as they grow both physically and emotionally through an act of recreation. But take it a little too far.

Let's look at this honestly. There is no evidence that not making the squad has ruined the life of a child. There was the case of the Texas cheerleader mom, but I think she had some other issues before some poor fool left her daughter off the team.

And speaking of those who pick the teams, remember who you are dealing with here. This is not the Olympic team. There will be no book deal waiting for you once you win the coveted Minor League championship. These are young, impressionable kids. Rejection is hard enough for them at their age, don't compound it.

I've been lucky (and unlucky) enough to have seen both sides of the fence.

Playing in a town league basketball championship, the game was finally decided in an empty gymnasium with family members waiting in a packed hallway because some parents from both sides had gone over the edge and were planning to stage the initial Wrestlemania.

You haven't lived until you've actually seen grown adults screaming at the top of their lungs because their child had not fouled an opponent hard enough.

On the other side of the ledger, my dad was "lucky enough" to get to be the guest umpire at a farm league baseball game of mine a few million years back.

There are two strikes on me with the winning run on base. The pitcher rears back and fires. Dad rings me up with the backwards "K". The kid was caught looking.

My world had officially ended,

THE FISH STORY/Mark Trask

Bluefish Invade South Shore

"There are these fish all over the surface out there. They're just finning right on the surface like some kind of bait. I've never seen anything like it," said the inquiring angler. "What kind of fish are they?"

In closer to shore Dave and the gang were busy turning pogies into stripers when a bluefish got into the fray.

"Didn't land him," Dave said. "We are after stripers."

"Oh no!" Bill exclaimed as he rolled his eyes. "Bluefish already?" We counted out a dozen of his famous tube lures.

"What can you do Bill?" I asked. "They're here." They ought to go up to Maine was his retort.

What time is it, time for a new rod and reel. Bill Verge, Chris Kent and Mike Trowbridge were checking out the action near the Coast Guard Station Scituate. After awhile the rod was set down, giving the forearms a rest. Seconds later it zipped across the shingle beach and plunged into the black nighttime water. If only...

Murdoch is back from his honeymoon. Yeah he found a woman who likes to fish. Key West mahi-mahi were their quarry last week. Now it's stripers, yes, and bluefish from the shadow of Minot's Light.

Bill, my former jurymate stopped by the store. Been spending his time in the vicinity of the Brewsters and Boston Light with results much to his satisfaction. Constant striper action he reported. Mackerel are thin though. Went from Hardings Ledge out to the B-buoy and only trolled up one. Inside the Bay brought better luck with a fat keeper taken in the mouth of the Weir River.

Ronnie reports from Ferry Street that river anglers are starting to connect with some decent flounder in the mouth of the South River. Upstream is a veritable stew of herring, schoolies, and a few larger bass.

The Minot jetty was good to Jim Hearn this week. Five linesiders, including two "new" keepers fell to his mackerel chunks, all released. Walter bested Jim once again, stripping his spool empty.

Jamie Jackson tubed in a 40 incher at Sully's Point. Jim and Brian Conway and Brian Kimball topped a successful trip with a 34 incher from Lovell's Island on Father's Day. Fresh pogies were the key bait on that expedition. The Donovan brothers matched skills at the lighthouse. Adam weighed in with a 14 pound striper, and Mark brought in an early 10 1/2 pound bluefish. Further south along the coast Charlie Hunt nailed a 35 inch striper.

Fly fishermen John Barnett and Tom Noonan tried out John's new boat over the Grampuses. The boat worked fine as did the herring pattern flies. John caught the big one this week, 29 pounds 8 ounces. Tom's was slightly smaller.

Fishing has really exploded with the arrival of warmer temperatures. Make some time for yourself on the water.

Catch one that's hard to carry!

This Is the Season for These Gems

By Barbara Esposito
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset's Golden Girls, sponsored by King Jewelers, have really grown since last season! Their skills are improving daily. The girls are rallying together, encouraging one another. Fantastic teamwork has evolved. The girls are anticipating where the next play is. Stealing puts a new twist on things this year.

Catchers Frannie Noble, Kristen Watts and Kelly Holway have been instrumental in keeping the runs to a minimum. They really hustle up to retrieve the ball and stop the play. Pitchers Jenn Buckley, Julie Lorden and Kelly Holway are a great balance with first basemen Ashley Cook and Alanna Hughes. They definitely make it challenging for the opponents to reach first base.

Showing fantastic improvement in their arm strength are two second basemen, Carling Sterino and Emily Dean. They both are slick when running the bases, an all out effort that's usually rewarded with a "safe." Rounding the field to third base, we have Kim Ulmer, Alicia Sanchez and Kerri-Anne Esposito. All three are doing a fabulous job of getting the ball all the way over to first without over-throwing. They have what it takes to minimize the opponents' success.

Powerhouse Courtney McDonald playing shortstop is very versatile and a great asset to the team. Sarah Brady is fast becoming indispensable to the team; she's had a steadily improving season in the outfield. She's also been ripping them up at bat.

The Golden Girls are lucky girls. Their head coaches, Lottie Cook and Jim Watts are a wealth of information. They really want the girls to understand the game, be confident where the next play is and to have fun!

The score is unimportant. They want the girls to know the rules of the game so that it benefits them as they mature. The girls can't help but be successful when they know the moves and finally have the strength and the speed. We're looking forward to having a girls softball team in high school. Watch out world!

Recreation Dept. Sponsors Baseball

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 through 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Camp has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will be held the week beginning Tuesday, June 24, through Saturday, June 28, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full-day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over, and a half-day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5- and 6-year-olds.

The week-long camp costs $130 per child for the full-day program, and $75 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Saturday, June 28.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, offers year-round baseball instruction and has had baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for seven years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for baseball camp on a space-available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall.

Swimming and Diving Team Try-Outs

Calling all swimmers and divers! The Cohasset Swim and Diving Teams announce that Becky Golden and Allison Hughes are returning to coach the Cohasset Swim Team, and Dawn Meehan will return to the diving team for another terrific season. Last year's team members agree that the season was exciting and a lot of fun! Both teams welcome new members, and all are invited to try out.

This year's season starts June 30 (not June 23, as previously announced), and culminates in the championship finals, held at Wheaton College, Saturday, Aug. 16. Tryouts for new swim team members will be held Thursday, June 19, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Swim Club. Diving team tryouts are Saturday, June 21, at 9 a.m. Tryouts for both teams are for new members only. Returning members do not have to try out.

On Tuesday, June 24. at 9 a.m., the Varsity Swim Shop will set up shop at the Cohasset Swim Club to sell team bathing suits. The team has a new bathing suit design this year.

Get ready for another terrific season! Call 383-9482 with any questions.

Summer Basketball Camp

The Cohasset Recreation Department in conjunction with the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will sponsor a summer basketball camp, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two camp sessions will be available this July. Boys and girls, ages 8 through 11, will have camp from Tuesday, July 8, through Friday, July 11, at Cohasset High School's Sullivan gymnasium. The fee for the four-day camp is $120. The full week camp, for boys and girls ages 12 through 15, will be held Monday, July 14, through Friday, July 18, at the Sullivan gymnasium. The fee for the five-day camp is $150.

Registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall, Recreation Department office.

Youth Tennis Program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations at town hall the week of June 15 for youth tennis lessons for ages seven through 18. The fee for the seven-week program is $44 per player and a family discount of $5 is offered for each additional family member registering.

Classes meet for two one-hour classes weekly, on a Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday schedule. Friday's are left open for weekly clinics and tournament play.

Classes begin the week of June 30, and end Friday, Aug. 15.

South Shore League All-Star team. Seniors Doug Cameron, Ryan McWilliams, Dave Noble, Matt O'Connor and Bob Stansell all contributed to Cohasset's journey into the state tournament.

Junior Jamie Buick tallied more than 100 points this season with his phenomenal stick-handling and dazzling array of acrobatic moves. With sterling sophomore and junior classes, the Boys in Blue appear to be loaded for two more years.

Cohasset's hardball team was also led by three seniors: Rob Buckley, Grant Emde and Kevin McKenna. McKenna was also named to the SSL All-Stars and completed a spectacular career at first base for the Skippers. Buckley was a brick wall behind the plate this year and Emde patrolled centerfield like Mays.

Unfortunately, the club couldn't overcome the combination of injuries and other miscellaneous pitfalls. However, a core group of sophomores was tested under fire this season and should be primed for next year.

In summary, the spring season was a bittersweet one for the sports-watching citizens of SkipperNation. A young softball team began to blossom while the lacrosse squad bloomed fully, and the baseball team struggled, but showed promise for next year. Next year should be a fun one for Cohasset fans and athletes alike.

Have a great summer. Go Sox.

but I was about to get a pearl of wisdom that I still carry today. My father looked down at my hysterical self and uttered these words- "Get over it."

For those parents who take this crazy youth sports thing to the extreme I offer you the same advice. Let the children have their fun without ruining it for them. You'll both be better for it.

Get out and support the kids, but remember that's what they are, kids, in need of recognition and your encouragement.

You want to hear a radical idea. Who needs an All-Star team? You throw a couple balls, a bat and some gloves on a sandlot and I can almost guarantee you that any child would be happy as a clam. Maybe even a couple of adults, too.

By the way, Dad. The ball was a foot off the plate. But I got over it.

Compliance Check

chants from alerting each other.

Sibor said the collaborative sends a certified letter to merchants the next day informing them of the violation if an employee sells cigarettes to a minor.

Five merchants sold cigarettes to minors in a Jan. 24 compliance check.

In the latest compliance check, one 16-year-old girl tried to buy cigarettes at the 14 Cohasset stores that sell tobacco products. The collaborative's underage confederate was instructed to give an ID showing her real date of birth to merchants if asked to provide proof of age.

Two Cohasset police officers and a collaborative representative waited outside to document the results of the compliance check.

In both cases, clerks asked for the girls' ID, which was provided, then sold her cigarettes anyway.

Merchants that commit first-time violations are subject to up to a $100 fine, a warning, and participation in a mandatory merchant education program for all employees. Merchants that commit a second violation are subject to a $200 fine, a suspension of their license to sell tobacco products for up to seven days, and participation in the education program.

A CVS representative would not comment on the sale and requested anonymity.

A CVS employee sold cigarettes to a 16-year-old collaborative agent in the January compliance check. On Feb. 4 the health board waived a $100 fine and ordered CVS to participate in a merchant tobacco education program.

Joe Gagni, one of two managers at Curtis Liquors, said the clerk who sold the cigarettes to the girl made a mistake.

"The cashier was busy, but the minute she sold the cigarettes she realized the girl was underage," Gagni said. "She quickly followed the girl out to the parking lot to retrieve the cigarettes, but the girl was already climbing into a car with her supervisor."

Health Agent Joseph Godzik said both merchants will be asked to send a representative to a public hearing with the health board to explain the reasons for the violation. Godzik said a hearing would probably be conducted on July 15, but no date has been set.

Godzik was encouraged by the fact that only two merchants sold cigarettes to minors in the latest compliance check.

"Five merchants sold cigarettes to minors in January, but now it's down to two," Godzik said. "We try to emphasize the positives. The collaborative's merchant education program gives them more motivation to check IDs and avoid potential fines and license penalties."

Sibor said the June compliance check was part of a one-day sweep of 13 communities in the 14-community collaborative. Duxbury does not allow the collaborative to perform compliance checks.

Sibor said the collaborative checked 319 businesses and 39, about 12 percent, did not comply.

"The first time we conducted a compliance check in 1994, 53 percent of the merchants we checked sold cigarettes to our underage agent," Sibor said. "We've made great progress."

The collaborative is funded by a 25-cent per pack cigarette tax and offers an on-going program of education. Merchant training sessions have been held throughout the South Shore to update retailers on the law and how to comply with it. Correct signage and information about methods to identify teens are also provided.

The organization shares a statewide tobacco control goal of decreasing tobacco use 50 percent by 1999.

Red Lion Inn

to a series of recent owners with limited investment capital and a lack of experience running an inn and restaurant. Logue said he has both the capital and the experience to revitalize the old business.

"The place has really been run into the ground over the last two years," Logue said. "I've been in this business for more than 20 years. What this place needs is money and resources, and we have that."

Logue was attracted to the inn because of its inherent charm. He said it could be a place where anyone can go in for a meal and to sit by the fireplace.

Logue is the managing partner for the inn along with Gerd Ordelheide, who will run the restaurant.

He said his goal is to restore the inn to what it should be — a quaint old inn with rooms for rent.

Logue added that he hopes to make the inn a landmark that will be a source of pride for the people of Cohasset.

"I know a lot of people in Cohasset and they smile when I tell them what we're going to do with the inn," Logue said. "This will be a nice place for the locals to go for a meal whether they're 22 on a first date or 85."

To achieve his goal, Logue plans to change the way the business is managed. He said traditionally, dinner patrons have been forced to wait in the tavern for a table. But, he said, the tavern is dark and small, not the type of place for two 50-year-old women or a family with small children.

The first order of business will be to completely renovate the entire building. Logue wanted to assure people not to worry when the entire operation shuts down at some point in the next few months.

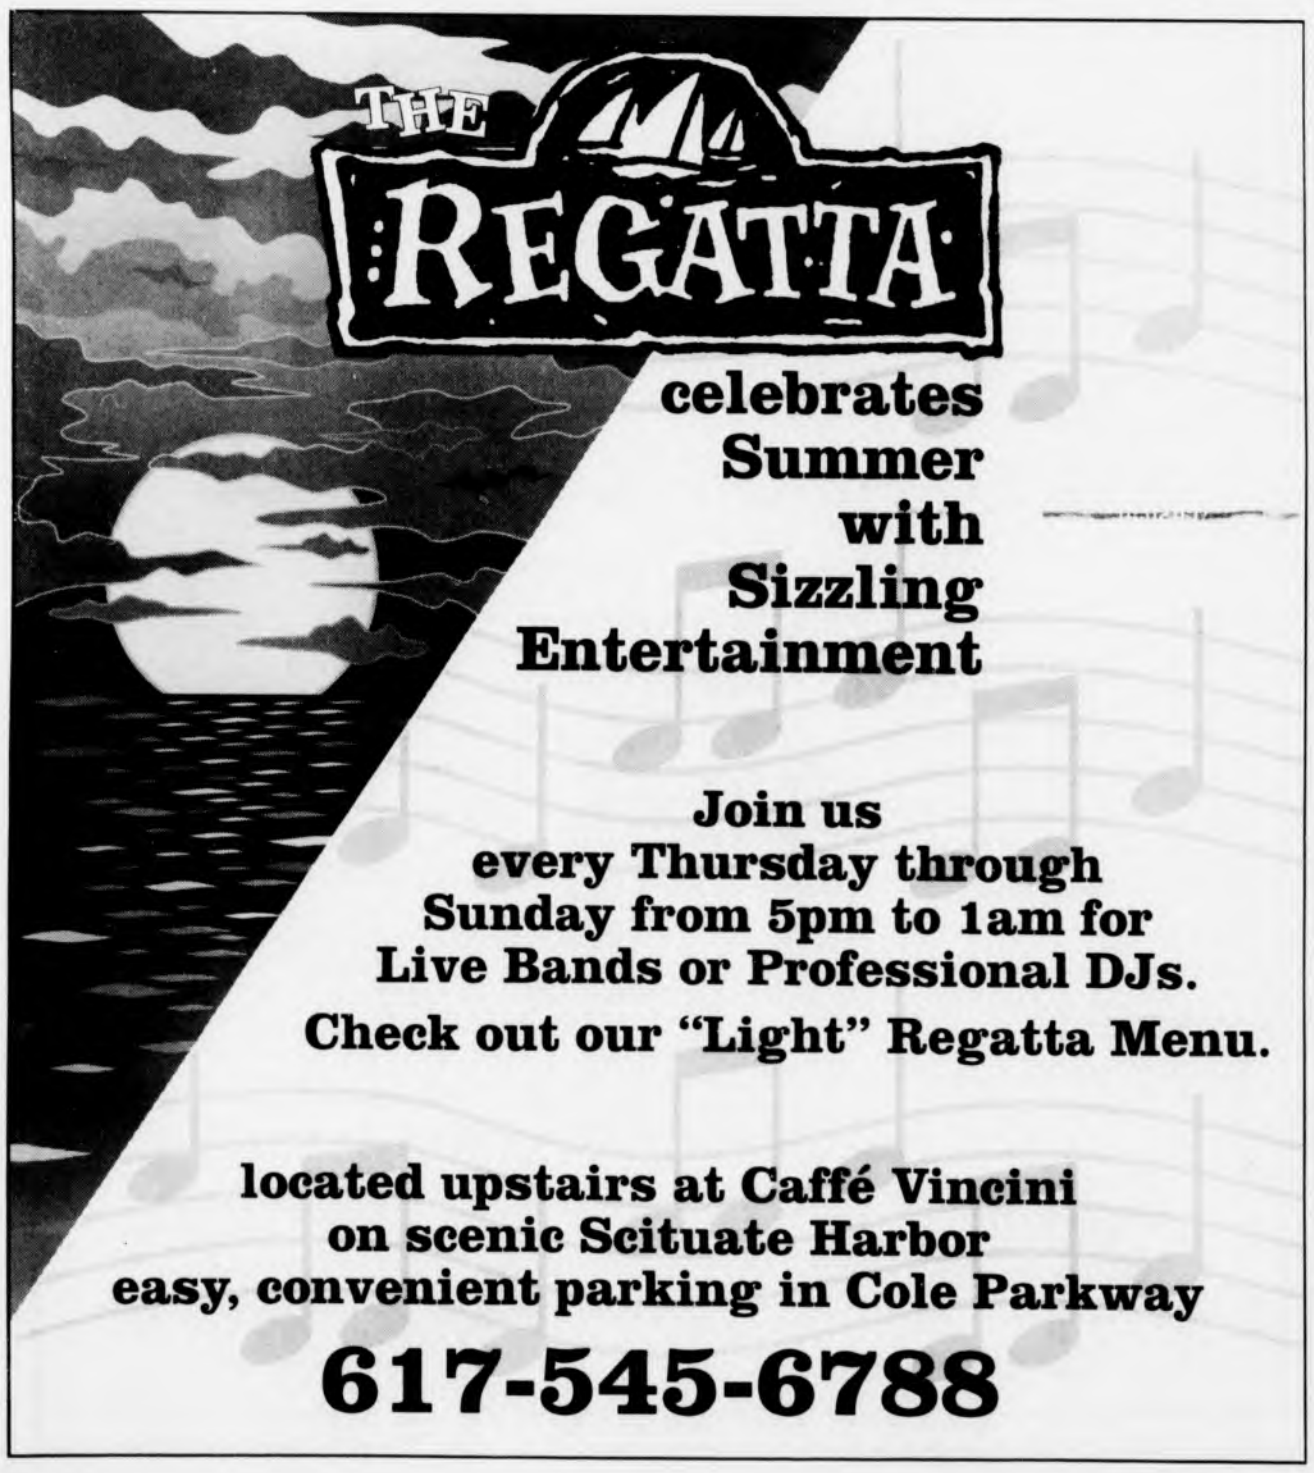
"The restaurant will not reopen for the summer and the tavern will stay open until the heavy work begins," Logue said. "We'll keep it open as long as we can based on safety issues."

Logue said the entire interior of the building will have to be redone from floors to ceilings. The list of necessary renovations reads like a laundry list. The building needs new furniture, wiring, air conditioners, sprinklers, plumbing, a modern telephone system, cable television in the rooms, new kitchen equipment and many other items.

"The third floor is an absolute rat trap," Logue said. "We want to restore the rooms to a quaint, old inn look with things like four-poster beds and four-claw bath tubs."

There are eight rooms on the third floor which are inhabited by six permanent, weekly residents.

"We're working on the timing with the tenants on the third floor so they can find new homes," Logue said. "They have been given notice. For the money they're paying, they could do a lot better. They're all fine with it."



Once the tenants are out, Logue plans to call in a professional contractor who should be able to complete all the renovations by November.

"We don't want to do the work in a rush just to get the job done," Logue said. "The people of Cohasset are very particular, and the worst reputation you can get here is to start the work and not complete it."

When the inn reopens, all the rooms on the second and third floor — 15 in all — will be used for overnight rentals.

"When we're done, the rooms will be cleaner and much nicer," Logue said. "Every room will have air conditioning, telephones, cable television. We even plan to start a shuttle to the beach. We'll be more service oriented."

Logue said the inn will not only be a source of community pride, but it could serve as a catalyst to rejuvenate the downtown business area.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Going Once, Going Twice

Quality items offered at government auctions

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Where can you shop for a Mercedes Benz, gold jewelry and last year's stereo model--a veritable smorgasbord of luxury--under one roof? I'll give you a hint: I'm not referring to a superstore chain. Would you believe Uncle Sam is having a sale?

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Unbeknownst to many people, the U.S. federal government auctions off everything from cars to computers and chairs that have been discarded by government agencies or in some cases confiscated for legal reasons. These garage sales have brought in hundreds of millions of dollars in proceeds for the U.S. Treasury. They can be financially worthwhile for you as well; the items are often sold for below-market prices.

While you are likely to find some good bargains, especially on a steady supply of cars and trucks, don't expect to drive off in a $100 BMW or pick up a $10 Gucci watch. "Auction items are not steals, they're deals," says Stephen De Blasio, director of personal property for the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA).

The GSA conducts sales of airplanes, boats, cars, trucks, furniture, computers and office equipment, etc. on behalf of a handful of government agencies.

To ensure it gets a fair price, the GSA sets an undisclosed minimum price for each item which the bidding must reach for the item to be sold.

Yet prices rarely reach the retail level. At a GSA auction "you can expect to pay the trade-in value for the vehicle" as opposed to what you would have to pay right off a used car lot, says De Blasio. Indeed, the auctions are frequented, he says, by used-car buyers who buy and then hike up the price for their customers.

Among the best deals are the sedans with only three to four years of use and the trucks put on the auction block when they have more than 60,000 miles on them or when they reach their sixth year. De Blasio says that since the cars have been treated as government property, they are usually in tip-top shape.

For upcoming GSA car auctions in Massachusetts, call 617-565-7326 to get a free list of the vehicles to be auctioned and the time and the place of the sale. For the most part auctions in every state occur when enough property has accumulated. You can also call 703-305-7814 or visit GSA's web site (http://www.gsa.gov) for information on the sale of other merchandise.

The Treasury Department holds its own auctions, every nine weeks, of boats, planes, real estate, carpets, jewelry, clothing and electronics that have been abandoned or seized by Customs and other Treasury officials while enforcing the law.

On the East Coast, auctions are held in Edison, New Jersey (that's exit 10 off the New Jersey Turnpike).

On June 12, for example, the Treasury auctioned off a 1995 Mercedes Benz convertible E320, a 1995 Nissan 300SX and a 1993 Mercedes 300SE along with electronics, jewelry and apparel (one caveat: clothing and electronic equipment are often sold in bulk, commercial quantities but individual items do pop up from time to time).

You can get more information by calling the Public Auction Line (703-273-7373) and can sign up to receive the eastern region mailing list for a $25 fee.

There can be a lot of requirements or conditions involved in a sale--remember, you're dealing with the government. You shouldn't attend a federal auction and bid nonchalantly, as if shopping for groceries or a sweater. Once the auctioneer yells "sold," it's yours for keeps--no returns. For that reason, prospective bidders are encouraged to thoroughly inspect the goods before auction day to make sure they are acceptable in "as is" condition. Items to be auctioned are usually displayed for a couple of days during a preview period.

It is equally important to research the specific terms of sale for each item. The conditions will be listed in a flyer or catalog. If, for example, you are eyeing a motor boat that comes with a "for export only" label (it's former owner failed to get permission for legal entry into the U.S.), you will have to figure out how to get the boat out of the country immediately after you've purchased it.

You should be prepared to pay for an item on the spot. The Treasury Department typically requires that you pay in full for purchases of $5,000 or less on the day of the sale.

For more expensive items you might be allowed to put down a deposit at the end of the auction and to pay the balance the following day.

Unfortunately, there is no government financing available for any of the items--not even for cars or planes.

Payment can be made with cash, traveler's checks, cashier's checks (but have checks in small denominations because the auction cashier cannot make change for more than 10 percent of a cashier's check.), and often with Visa and Mastercard. Once you've paid for the item it is yours; you can drive that 1995 Mercedes Benz convertible home.

Registering for auctions is a breeze--plus it's free. Simply bring identification with a photograph to the auction site and you'll receive your bidder number and catalog.

If you find yourself catching the federal-auction bug, you may want to check out other auctions around the country.

The U.S. Postal Service sells goods found in undeliverable packages at auctions in Saint Paul, Atlanta and San Francisco (check out http://www.usps.gov/ consumer/auctions.htm).

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. sells assets for failed banks, including land, hotels, shopping malls, condominiums and homes. Proceeds are funneled back to creditors of failed institutions. For a free information packet call the regional office in Connecticut (800-873-7785).

And if that's not enough to satiate the shopper in you, buy The U.S. General Services Administration Guide to Federal Government Sales (202-512-1800 at $1.75) that provides detailed information about all of the government agencies that hold auctions.

'Healthy Bites' Make a Splash at Sandy Beach

By Jennifer R. Horan
SCITUATE MARINER

Scituate resident and entrepreneur Doug Bennett has found his place in the sun and on the sand.

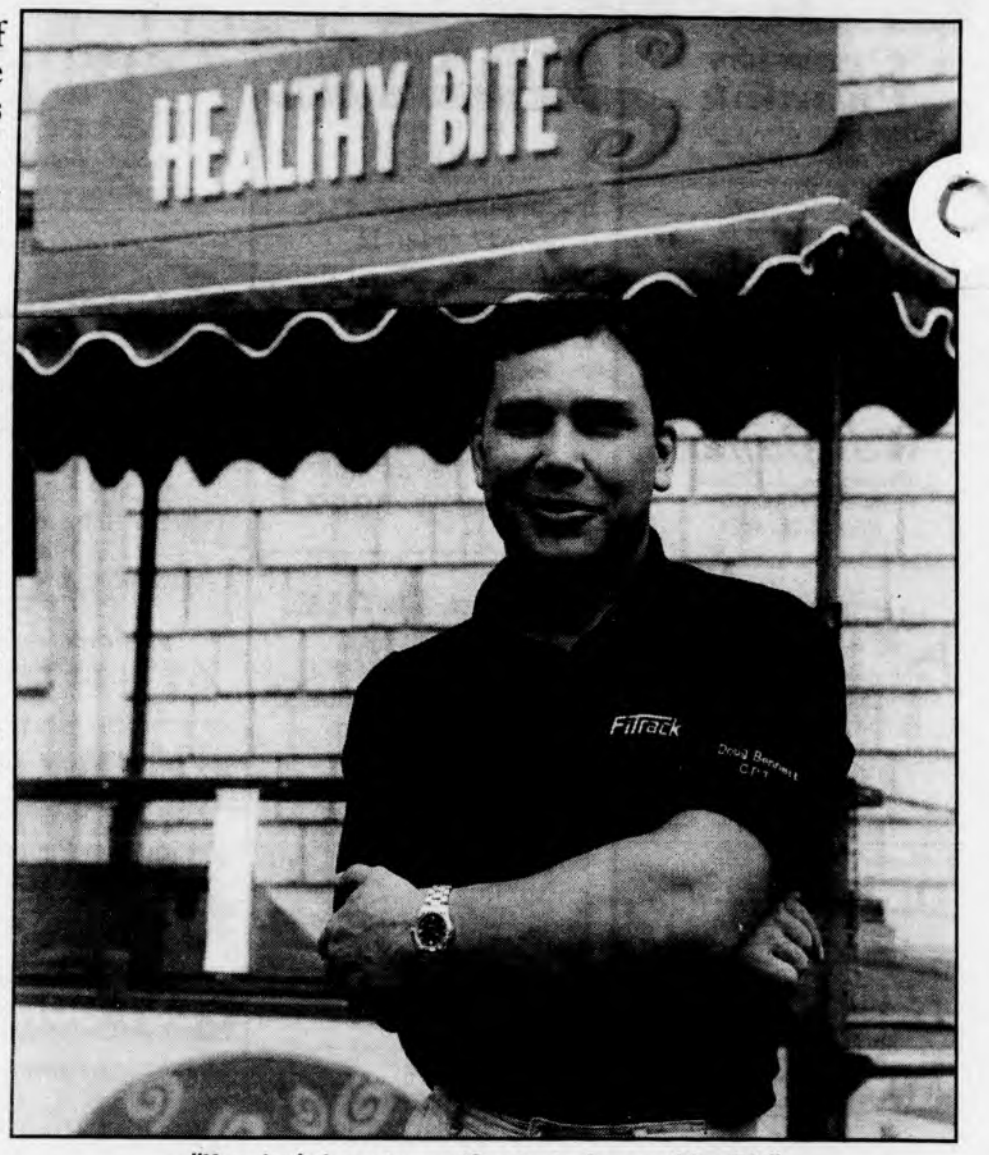
One of Cohasset's three food push-cart bid winners this summer, Bennett has cooked up something never-before-seen at Sandy Beach for his mobile a la carte dining service.

"The cart looks like a mini-cafe. You can't miss it," he said.

Instead of the traditional hot dog and ice cream offerings, Bennett will be peddling a healthier and lighter batch of beach cuisine, including fruit smoothies, freshly-squeezed juices, gourmet roll-ups and his very own all natural fitness cookies.

"You don't have to sacrifice taste for good health," said Bennett, 27, whose "Healthy Bites" are low in fat and fat-free. "The menu goes along with what I think people should eat. This is the way I've eaten my whole life."

A personal fitness trainer with his own business of five years, FiTrack, Bennett lives, breathes and pushes a nutritious diet. He prepares the cart's fare — which is made with herbs and spices, no added oil, fat or salt — at the Borrowed Butler catering company in Scituate. Thursday through Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., Bennett can be found at Sandy Beach in Cohasset with a cart full of health foods for sale until Labor Day.



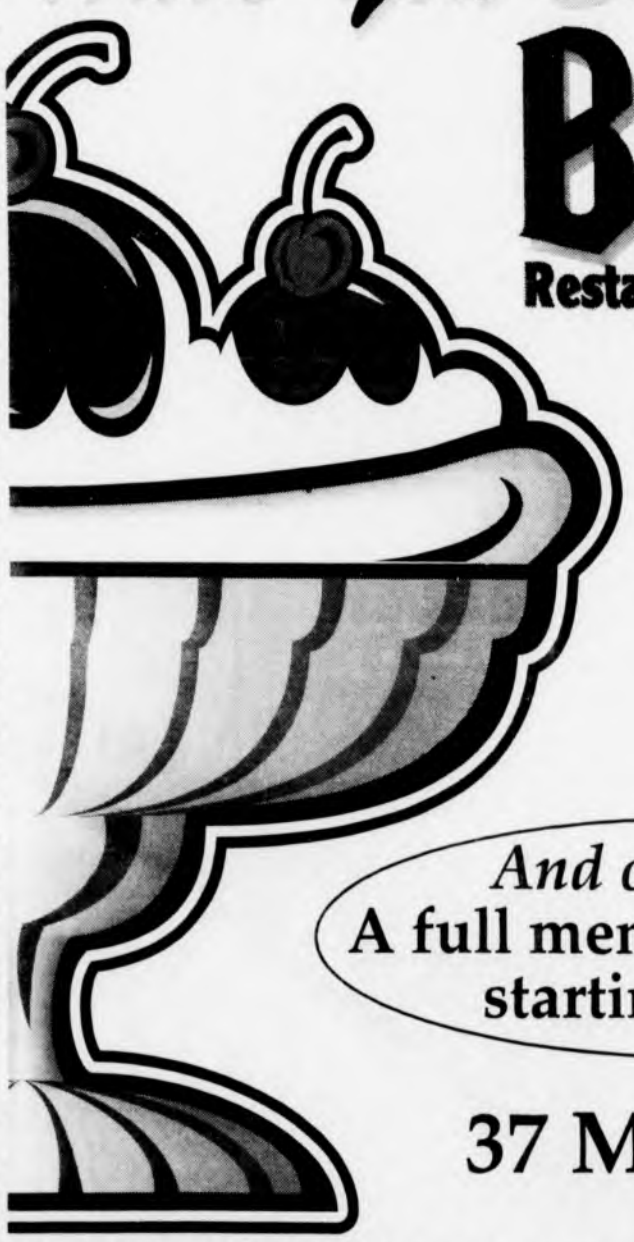
"People don't like to be in a bathing suit eating a hot dog," he said. "This is much better for them. Hot dogs are high in nitrate."

Bennett's body-building clients got the first taste of "Healthy Bites" when he introduced them to his "Bennett's All Naturals" cookies, which come in peanut butter or oatmeal raisin.

"They're more of a fitness cookie. They're like a Power Bar, only they're better tasting and better for you," he said. "There are no sugars."

Their response to his home-spun recipe prompted him to start a his second business and take it to the beach to see what people think.

"So far, the response has been great. I'm really excited," said Bennett, who studied biology and nutrition at U-Mass/Amherst. "It's something that will grow with time. I hope to sell the cookies in stores some time down the road."



"You don't have to sacrifice taste for good health."
— Doug Bennett, entrepreneur.

Almost everyone seems to have a cellular telephone these days. People have them in their cars, their purses and their pockets. Cellular telephones allow users to make calls from almost anywhere, but this technology comes with a price: communications antennas and equipment sheds.

The zoning board was scheduled to make a decision Wednesday, June 25 (just after the Mariner went to press) on an application by Sprint Spectrum L.P. to erect a 123-foot telecommunications antenna near Foreign Auto Repair on Route 3A, just 200-feet back from the road..

Building commissioner Robert Egan said Sprint wants to erect the tower on land owned by Ken Eaves of King Street.

Egan said the land is in a light industrial zone with a 45-foot restriction on the height of any structure. Egan added that the antenna is allowed in that zone with a special permit.

The zoning board discussed the antenna at its June 5 hearing.

Zoning board Chairman Mark DeGiacomo said he was concerned about the proliferation of towers in Cohasset.

"I don't want to allow Cohasset to look like a pin cushion," DeGiacomo said. "The applicant has asked us to treat them like the other tower on 3A, which is a fair request, but this one is substantially closer to the road."

'I don't want to allow Cohasset to look like a pin cushion.'

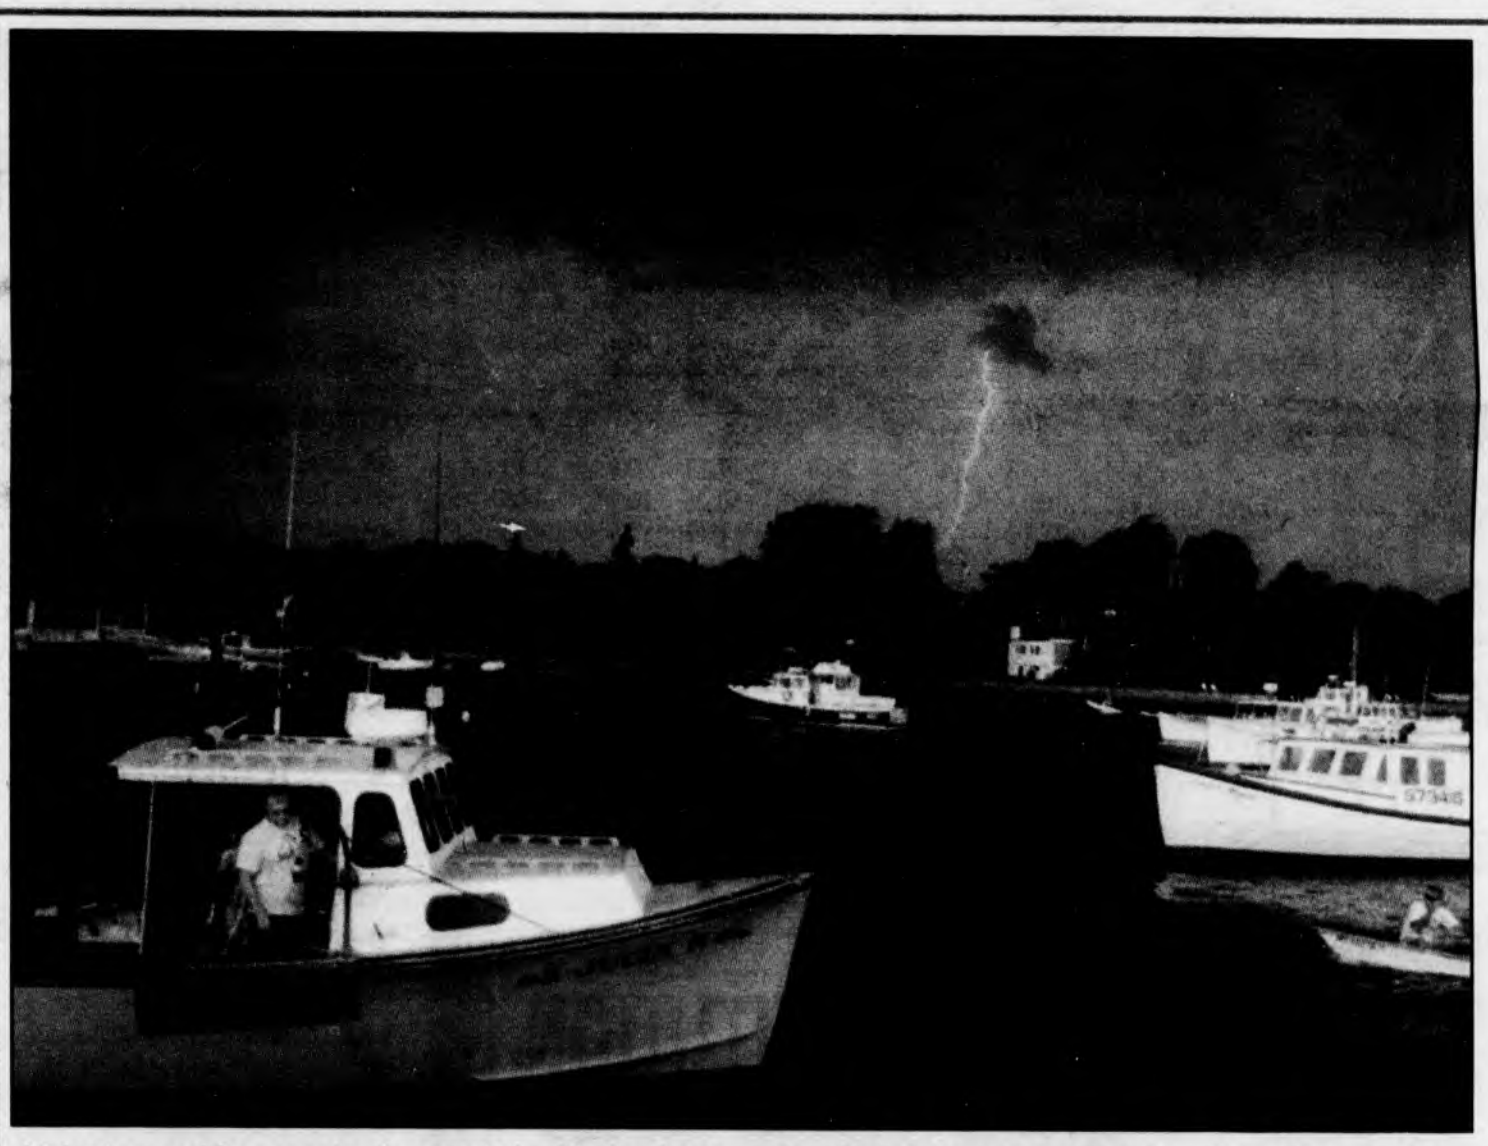
MARK DeGIACOMO

J. Anson Whealler said he thought antennas were unsightly.

"Aesthetically, if you drive down Route 128 in Waltham by the Polaroid plant, you'll see a proliferation of antennas there that are not particularly attractive," Whealler said.

DeGiacomo said an existing tower off Route 3A is in an isolated spot on Turkey Hill and not really visible from residential areas.

"We take each application on its own merits," DeGiacomo said. "I don't think this latest request is in a good location."



Barbara Powers said she was concerned about the apparent lack of a coherent plan from companies seeking antennas.

"There doesn't seem to be any plan," Powers said. "I don't want them popping up on a willy, nilly basis."

But representatives from Sprint Spectrum L.P. said they have a very specific plan.

"This is a consumer driven process," said Jim Aber, director of Northeast operations for Sprint. "We're not building towers and antennas because we have extra money laying around. Consumers

Small-Town Feeling Draws Large Crowd to Festival

By Robert Ziff
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Mike Kerr of Boston summed up what it is that had thousands of people flocking to Cohasset on one of the hottest days of the year to date.

"Boston has a lot to offer," he said, "but it has nothing which compares to the small-town feeling and fun that I get in Cohasset during this festival."

He drove out from Boston with his girlfriend Claire Gladstone to escape the city's oppressing heat. Kerr, who made his third trip to town, was pleased to find the 42nd annual Festival on the Common, has gotten better and better.

Festival-goers congregated on the town's common, bringing droves of children. The ones too young to fend for themselves could be found in baby backpacks, in traditional four-wheeled strollers, or in state-of-the-art three-wheeled buggies that looked like they belonged on the moon. There were prams to fit one, two and even three children. People brought their dogs along, ranging from Lhasa apsos to Doberman pinschers.

Parking proved not to be a problem because free trolley shuttle service was provided from the large parking lot at the South Shore Music Circus to the town's green and back.

Developer Still Seeks To Remove Quonset Huts

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

A series of Quonset huts and buildings at 430 South Main St. have been called the ugliest structures in Cohasset by residents living near the facility. An attempt by the planning board to rezone the site so the owner could build 10 condominiums was rejected by voters at the 1997 spring town meeting. Members of the conservation commission said the change in bylaws would have stripped them of their jurisdiction over the flood plain.

Now the owner of the property, Noel Collins, is back with a revised plan to tear down the Quonset huts and build four condominiums instead of 10. Collins visited the conservation commission at their June 19 meeting to see if they would support his latest plan.

Commission members said they supported the idea in principle with some modifications.

Collins bought the 54,000 sq. ft. lot in 1996 with the intention of converting it from a commercial site to a residential site for condominiums. The property has hosted many commercial businesses in past decades.

"As much as this is an eyesore, it's also an obnoxious use," Collins said. "It's an obnoxious use, the tenants change over a lot and produce fumes and noise, and the entire thing is in a flood plain."

The zoning board of appeals rejected the plan in Nov., 1996, and Collins appealed the decision to Norfolk Superior Court.

Collins said he is now in discussions with the ZBA to reach an out of court settlement allowing four condominiums instead of the original request for 10. He added that the agreement was informal at this time.

"My point in being before the conservation commission is to lay the groundwork for the agreement," Collins said. "Do you believe four units however placed within the existing footprint and removal of the septic tank from the flood plain is better than what we have there now? If you don't agree, I will fold my tent right now."

Vice-chairman Jeff Waal said he liked the principle behind the plan.

"I think the town could benefit from something like this," Waal said.

Waal added that he would like to see Collins construct a public walkway along the edge of the property.

Tom Callahan also supported the plan in principle.

Cohasset's Week

Pleasure craft receive the Harborfest blessing during the Blessing of the Fleet on Sunday. Within an hour, a thunderstorm hit Cohasset cutting short the annual Harborfest parade.

Correction

A story in last week's Mariner about the Relay for Life cancer benefit at the Cohasset High School track incorrectly said Gary Ritts has cancer. The Rev. Ritts does not have cancer. The Mariner regrets the error.

Plante Reappointed as Constable

Selectmen reappointed Maria Plante, 798 Jerusalem Rd., as town constable. Term for the position is three years, selectmen said.

New Face on Elders Board

Selectmen appointed John Coe, 23 Pond St., Monday to the Cohasset Elders Affairs board. Coe will replace Linda McCarthy, who stepped down recently after serving seven years. Selectmen said they would send McCarthy, who is now the outreach worker at the senior center, a thank you letter for her years of service.

In her letter of resignation, McCarthy said she was "proud to have been associated with this fine group."

Taverna Gets Liquor License, Parking Concerns Aired

Selectmen approved issuing three one-day liquor licenses to the Nativity-Assumption of Virgin Mary Church on Jerusalem Road for the annual Taverna, July 4-6.

Beer and wine will be available at Taverna as well as pastries, food stuffs, soda and coffee.

Selectman Diane Sullivan offered the field next to her house at 708 Jerusalem Rd. for additional parking for about 12 cars.

She expressed concerns about vehicles parking along both sides of the road, which she said is a safety issue.

"I'm concerned about people exiting their cars with the doors open and kids on bikes," she said about the narrow road.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan recommended the police chief and safety officer assess the parking situation at Taverna and make a recommendation.

Red Lion Liquor License Transferred

This week, selectmen authorized the transfer of the liquor license from 1704 Red Lion Inn, doing business as the Red Lion Inn, Carl E. Ackerblom, manager, to Sarro Co., LLC, doing business as the Red Lion Inn, Paul F. Logue, manager.

Logue used to own Hugo's and Pier 44 before that, Logue said.

He told selectmen the Inn would be turned back into the dining house it once was.

Logue and attorney Michael Hayes of Scituate said they will ask permission to close the inn for about three months during renovations.

They will also be back for food and Sunday licenses at a later date, Hayes said.

Library to Remain Under Town Manager Umbrella

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Don't tinker with the town manager position, yet.

That was the word from the government structure committee which met last week to discuss concerns town boards may have with the new position.

The message is not popular with the nine-member board of library trustees who want the library exempted from the town manager act passed at town meeting.

Cohasset currently has a town administrator who does not have the authority that a town manager would have such as the ability to hire and fire.

The town manager will run the day to day activities of the town and will report to selectmen, who will set policy.

Library trustees chairman Patience Towle said trustees want control over selection of the head librarian and exclusive authority to select library books, materials, services, events and exhibits.

"We continue to feel our nine minds are a better group to run the library than a town manager," she said.

But the GSC said any amendments to the town manager act — which would have to go before town meeting and the legislature — should wait until next spring.

Committee members said, at this point, no board or department should be excluded from the town manager act.

They worry that by exempting one department or board, others would follow, effectively undermining the town manager position.

Waiting until the annual town meeting will give the town manager six to nine months to get up and running, the committee said, explaining that some changes, perceived as necessary now, by that time in fact may not be needed.

In an attempt to assuage Towle, interim town administrator Ed McCann said as a practical matter, a town manager wouldn't interfere with a well-run library.

"I don't see the library as a target for town manager," he said. "The town manager doesn't need to generate brush fires. He needs to address the issues and policies the board of selectmen set."

'I don't see the library as a target for town manager. The town manager doesn't need to generate brush fires. He needs to address the issues and policies the board of selectmen set.'

— ED MCCANN, INTERIM TOWN ADMINISTRATOR

McCann said the town manager would rely on department heads and can't be an expert in everything from books to septic systems.

GSC committee member Ann Swanborg said the committee hoped to allay fears by noting there are "checks and balances" in place with selectmen overseeing the town manager.

In a related matter, for the third consecutive week, selectmen have met behind closed doors to interview candidates for the town manager position. Finalists for the post will be interviewed in open session as required by the open meeting law. They hope to have the new town manager on board by August.

McCann told selectmen Monday the town manager act had passed both houses of the legislature and has gone to the governor's desk for his signature.

The switch to town manager was approved at the annual town meeting over objections from a majority of selectmen and the advisory committee. The GSC worked with citizen petitioners on drafting the text of the article.

Elm Street to Stay Two-Way for Now

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Elm Street, from Brook to South Main in the village, will remain at two-way street for the time being.

Selectmen rejected a proposal this week to try a one-way traffic pattern on the street for 60 days.

They are worried that while creating a one way street may help alleviate some safety concerns on Elm, it would create problems in other parts of the village.

Specifically, they think more cars will attempt illegal U-turns or cross the double-yellow line to park on South Main Street. They are also concerned that the town parking lot will become a thoroughfare for cars making the loop to get to Elm Street.

Selectmen asked Safety Officer Cliff Jones to look at the parking issue on Elm Street which forces cars onto the sidewalk prohibiting pedestrians from using the sidewalk. They asked for some painted lines delineating no parking areas and more enforcement of parking rules.

School Year for Seniors Lengthens

High school principal, Curtis Collins, asked on behalf of the administration and the senior faculty for the school committee's blessing to instate a longer school year for the seniors than currently exists.

With the upcoming changes with the block schedule, fourth-quarter classes will begin around April 7 next year. The schedule in the past has held senior exams during the week approximately of May 18, with graduation being the first weekend in June. This leaves little time for learning during the fourth quarter for the seniors.

The proposed schedule would increase the length of class time by having seniors attend 35 of the 45 days in the quarter and it would push back graduation to the second weekend of June. This makes the last day of school June 3 and graduation June 13. Final exams will be held in class and will cover only the fourth quarter.

School committee members agreed with the new schedule for the seniors.

Supt. Stephen Hart said, "A gray area still exists on this issue in education reform because as it currently states, all students must receive 990 hours of instruction in order to graduate. Seniors fall short of that. There may be some clarification of that in the future but until then I agree that this move is one in the right direction."

Ritterhaus Retires from Elder Council

After 10 yezrs as a volunteer and staff member at the Cohasset Council of Elder Affairs, Marguerite Ritterhaus of Hignahm has retired.

"She's a very warm-spirited person with a lot of energy and a wonderful way about her," council Director Kathy Bryanton said of Ritterhaus. "She is a very loving person."

The council held a luncheon in Ritterhaus' honor June 12 at the Cohasset Light Keepers' Cottage, attended by about 125 people from the community. Ritterhaus received proclamations from the state Senate, the state House of Representatives, the South Shore Elder Services and the Cohasset Board of Selectmen for her decade of dedication to the senior citizens of Cohasset.

Ritterhaus, a Hingham resident, celebrated her 80th birthday Saturday and will have an opportunity to spend more time with her family in her retirement, Bryanton said.

"She will be missed. She is a person that can't be replaced," she said.

During her tenure with the council, Ritterhaus worked with three different boards, 130 volunteers, eight staff members as well as the staff at town hall. Prior to joining the Cohasset Council of Elder Affairs staff, Ritterhaus worked in Milton Hospital's admissions office for 15 years. While her children were growing up, she served as secretary and bookkeeper of her husband's business, Ritterhaus Plumbing.

"She was always willing to learn new skills," Bryanton said. "And she always had a good word to say to everyone."

Marguerite Ritterhaus is congratulated by her daughter, Janet Ross, and granddaughter, Lorri Mayer, at a reception in her honor at the Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island.

Puzzle Club and Story Hour Debut

Deer Hill School librarian, Marge Murphy, will be conducting the very popular Puzzle Club Monday and Tuesday nights from 7 to 8:45 p.m., beginning July 7 and 8 and continuing until the last week of August. Children from grades two through six are welcome. They should be sure to bring their library cards. Popsicles, courtesy of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, will be served at 8 p.m. Parents must pick up their children no later than 8:45 p.m.

An informal story time for preschool children will take place every Friday throughout the summer, from 10 to 10:30 a.m., July 11 and continuing through Aug. 22 in the Children's room of the Paul Pratt Library. Children must be 3 1/2 years of age. There is no registration required.

Library Notes

A mural featuring scenes of Cohasset and children reading books will be painted by award-winning artist, Becky Haletky. Cohasset children are invited to vote for three favorite book titles to be included in the mural. Pick up a ballot from Children's librarian, Suzanne Terry. The winners will be announced Aug. 1.

A photo exhibit by former Cohasset resident Susan Mullally Clark, including portraits of the late Sheldon Sladen and other local fishermen of the lobster fleet, will continue through the end of June.

Please note that the library will be closed Sundays during the months of June, July and August.

Two beautiful young dogwood trees were planted in front of the library on Arbor Day. There trees were donated by Genevieve Good, Polly Logan and the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library.

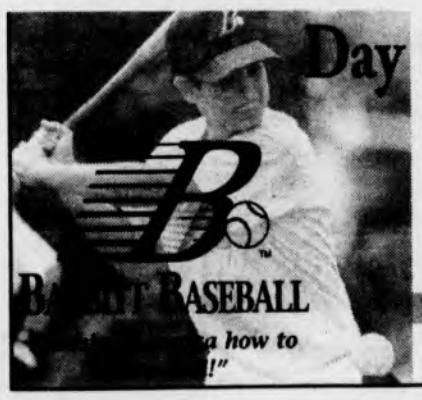
Old Beach, RTF Permits Have Expired

Your permits have expired. Beach and recycling transfer facility permits are now available at the town hall Monday to Thursday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Thursday evening 4:30 to 7 p.m., and Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle and $3 per vehicle for elders over 60. RTF stickers are $65, $25 for second vehicle, if application made at a different time, and $33 for a sole resident. You will need vehicle registrations or if not, a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease). You are encouraged to purchase both stickers through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope. RTF stickers may be purchased at the RTF.

Permits now being issued will expire May 31, 1998, which reflects the bylaw change at town meeting March 25, 1995.

Prices Go Up for School Lunches

For the first time in four years, Jean Pierce, director of food service, recommended to the school committee that the costs for school lunches rise to cover the costs. The state provides funding to the towns who serve free and reduced lunches to eligible students. Cohasset has very few eligible students and therefore receives minimal reimbursement from the state. This is why Cohasset, as opposed to other towns, is faced with the decision to raise the prices.



The cost of a lunch at the Deer Hill School will increase from $1.40 to $1.50. The costs at the Osgood, the middle, and the high schools will increase from $1.60 to $1.75. The cost of milk will increase from $.35 to $.40.

School Board Mulls Goals

At last Thursday night's meeting, the school committee discussed possible goals for the upcoming school year. In addition to adopting the previous goals from this past year's strategic plans, the school committee plans to incorporate new goal sections for next year.

With each goal, there are continuous needs. Rick Shea, vice-chairman of the school committee, would like the strategic plans expanded to encompass an ongoing process. The sections of curriculum, school facilities, community awareness, and technology are all fluid goals that need both short-term and long-term plans.

All board members agreed with Shea's mention of the need for a financial goal planning session that would include a historical analysis of school finances. Board members also expressed the need to get more involved in performance measures of the faculty by creating formalized standards and expectations.

Cellular Towers Could Change Landscape

want better and cleaner service, and that's what we're trying to deliver."

Aber said two factors are behind the proliferation of antenna construction requests in all South Shore communities: population density and topography.

A cellular telephone works on a radio signal. Radio signals travel in a straight line, and cannot travel over or around objects. If a radio signal hits a hill, it will be deflected in the direction of the hill's plane.

Aber said to picture a radio signal as an emission that travels along a line of vision. You can't see over or around a hill, and a radio signal can't travel over or around a hill.

The craggy, hilly terrain of Northeastern Massachusetts requires more antennas than a flat plain in Texas.

Aber said antennas in New England need to be erected every 2.5-5 miles apart for maximum signal coverage. In the plains of Texas, antennas can be placed every 10 miles apart.

Population density also dictates how far apart antennas must be placed, because each antenna and equipment shed can handle only so many calls. In a moderately populated area, antennas can be up to five-miles apart. In a densely populated metropolis like New York City, antennas must be placed on buildings every two blocks apart.

Many companies are also trying to upgrade their service from analog signals to digital signals. Analog signals are not as clear as digital signals. Analog signals are also prone to theft from thieves with special equipment, but digital signals cannot be stolen.

"The difference between analog and digital is like the difference between a phonograph record and a compact disc," Aber said. "Also, so many people have cellular phones that the analog channels are becoming clogged. Digital has better capacity."

Aber said Sprint is aware that communities feel they are being inundated with requests or singled out for antennas. He said the demand is huge and telecommunications companies are scrambling to meet that demand.

"This is a mobile society," Aber said. "We're not singling out any one community. Cohasset is a very nice town, but people travel through Cohasset on their way to the Cape and they want to be able to use their cellular phones."

Aber said there are other benefits to cellular service, including better communications capacity for emergency workers.

"If there's a bad accident, a driver with a mobile phone can call 911 seconds after the accident happens," Aber said. "But the need for more coverage has even started to affect fire and police departments. During the April 1 blizzard, emergency workers in Boston had difficulty communicating with their radios because so many people were using cellular phones."

Aber said Sprint has tried to respond to community concerns. He said Sprint first tries to find existing structures for antennas: water towers, existing antennas, high buildings.

Building a new tower from scratch is always a last resort because they are so unpopular, Aber said.

He said many companies, including Sprint, have offered to disguise antennas as flagpoles, church steeples, even artificial trees.

Another approach gaining popularity with South Shore communities is requiring new antennas to provide capacity for more than one cellular provider. Aber said Sprint tries to build towers that can accommodate at least three competing providers.

Aber said as long as consumers demand more and better service, telecommunications companies will try to find ways to provide that service at a profit. And towns will be inundated with requests for communications antennas doesn't have a problem with the site being changed— it's horrendous," Callahan said. "I would like to see whatever plan comes out include a return to open space and nature."

Collins pointed out that his plan would add 30-40 percent more open space to the property and decrease the roof site-line by 10-15 feet.

Collins is proposing tearing down the Quonset huts and replacing them with four, two-to-three bedroom luxury condominiums. He would also convert the large, rectangular building on the site into one large condo.

The Quonset huts sit on 20,000 square feet of the site.

'Do you believe four units however placed within the existing footprint and removal of the septic tank from the flood plain is better than what we have there now? If you don't agree, I will fold my tent right now.'

— NOEL COLLINS, PROPERTY OWNER.

Collins said the plan could benefit everyone. He added that the neighbors support any plan that will replace the Quonset huts with residential structures.

"This property is a disaster," Collins said. "The neighbors wanted me to build 10 units there. I'm sure you can imagine their enthusiasm for four."

Collins said he would go forward with the settlement process only if he could be assured that the conservation commission would not adopt an adversarial stance. He added that he had potential buyers interested in the site.

"The ZBA has offered four units, but I can tell you absolutely that four units is not a money maker," Collins said. "But I have a strong desire to see the Quonset huts and even the whole structure disappear."

Collins said he expects to reach an agreement with the zoning board in 90-180 days. He added that an agreement would settle the Superior Court case.

SUSPENSION CHECK

▶While there are two basic front-suspension designs, both include ball joints. Theses ball-in-socket designs allow the suspension to be flexible and are critical to its well-being. As for the rear-suspension systems, their design varies with the type of car. Regardless of which system is used, it is essential that the wear points (such as ball joints and control-arm and strut-rod bushings) be checked often. These components are subjected to great amounts of stress that lead to wear and tear. If they should fail, it could lead to road-handling problems that could well endanger the safety of the car's occupants. Thus it is a good idea to have your car's steering and suspension systems checked on a routine basis as part of its regular maintenance schedule.

▶When you bring your car in for a routine maintenance, ask us for answers to your questions about what we check for and what it means for your safety. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO (383-9090), we make you feel at home--no high pressure tactics here. Not all automotive shops are alike--we're proud of our high-quality service, our swift, accurate repair, and our persistent follow-through. Stop in at 828 C.J. Yacht Club Donates $500 to ExCel Program

Jim Hamilton, chairman of Cohasset Yacht Club's Cruising Committee, donated proceeds of the second annual cruising lecture to Jack Buckley, director of the ExCel Alternative School Program at Cohasset High School. The April 5 lecture, featuring Cohasset yachtsman Bim Holt presenting his inland fresh water cruise starting at the Hudson River and ending in Lake Champlain, was open to the public as well as club members. $500 was raised to help fund the ExCel Program.

The ExCel (Experimental Center for Learning) Program is an interdisciplinary accredited program for students in grades 10-12 offering unique marine experimental activities and traditional course work in science, social studies and English. Students my enroll in the program for one, two or three years. Course work includes field studies and lab work in fundamental principles of oceanography, physical science, navigation, aquatic environmental science and nautical science. Outdoor activities include learning to crew and care of a traditional pulling boat. Students also learn the fundamentals of boat building by working on current wooden boat projects.

Overall, organizers were pleased with the success of this year's event, orchestrated and carried off by more than 200 volunteers.

"...It was a true show of community effort and what is possible when everyone works together," noted Rhonda Corey Myers, festival coordinator for the South Shore Art Center.

Much of the green grass on the town's common was covered by a conglomeration of white tents that housed the array of arts and crafts, entertainment, and cuisine that was being offered to the thousands who were at the Festival on the Common.

People strolled from one tent to the next, either browsing or purchasing the scarves and clothes, handcrafted jewelry, hats, artwork, ceramics, hand-painted bird houses, homemade gourmet vinegars packaged in fancy bottles, and virtually every other art or craft you could imagine.

John Norton could be found under his tent selling a contraption called an "Indian Towel," a device developed by the American Indian. Made from steamed, bent and carved maple, it resembles a boomerang, but is concave and is used to scrape the water off one's body after a shower or bath.

He said sales had been a bit slower than last year, his first at the festival. He attributed this to the fact that the festival fell on Father's Day last year and his merchandise made perfect gifts.

For $20, Jean Comerford with unique skill and a pair of sharp scissors cut a paper silhouette portrait of her customer, or in most cases her customer's child or children. The sign in front of her tent declared, "Wrigglers Welcome."

In addition to vendors, there was food galore. You could have everything from fired dough to Middle Eastern cuisine to the traditional and mouth-water strawberry shortcake.

You could also just relax on the grass in front of the stage and listen to the music and watch the performers.

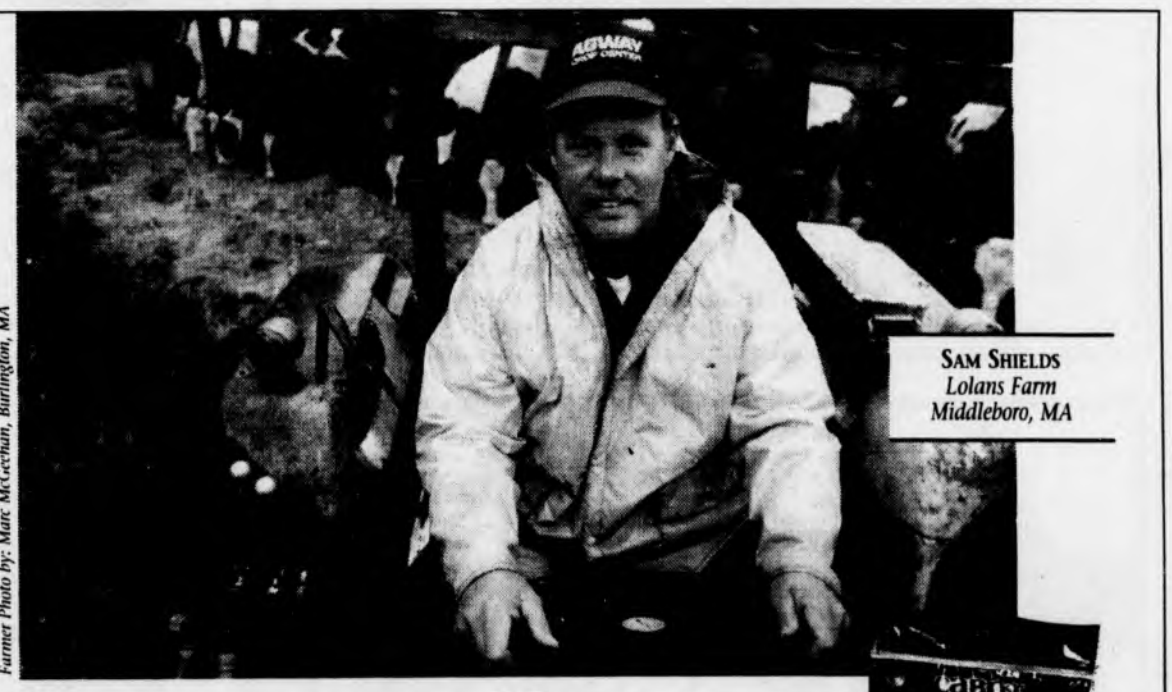
Starting Friday afternoon and continuing all day Saturday and Sunday, there were continuous performances by local musicians such as Mathew Malloch who played the bagpipes, Frank's Big Band, The Dave Crossland Band, P.B. & J. Folk Trio and many others. There was also dance and gymnastics.

The Suspenders juggling duo delighted the crowd with their antics, plucking young volunteers from the audience to participate in their routines.

Throughout the weekend, the Strawberry Festival, sponsored by the Second Congregational Church, was in full swing. Five hundred quarts of strawberries were consumed by the end of the weekend, which made for literally thousands of strawberry shortcakes eaten.

The weather continued to cooperate throughout the weekend. However at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, just after the Blessing of the Fleet, which consisted of all the lobster, fishing and sailing boats down at Cohasset Harbor, had concluded, the skies rapidly grew dark. At 3 p.m., just as the Harborfest Parade got under way, as if on cue, the skies opened up.

Amidst the forked lightning, booming thunder, and torrential rain, the participants were soon as wet as the youths who had been previously jumping off the bridge to cool off in the cold rapids below.



Led by a police car, a fire truck and an ambulance, the parade included the American Legion Marching Band playing "Yankee Doodle Dandy," a juggler on a unicycle, the Cohasset Historical Society, some antique cars and an antique fire engine (Engine 4), the Scituate Band, and a huge snowplow sporting a sign reading "Remember April 1, 1997."

There were also floats depicting Beacon Beach and a number of other local landmarks as well as other organizations waving banners and signs. Clowns pretending to do the backstroke and the breaststroke made their way toward the town green through the pouring rain that was by then coming down in sheets. The Harborfest Festival Band brought up the rear.

The weather did not dampen the spirits of the parade's supporters who could be found under umbrellas, in their cars, or standing in the rain getting as soaked as the marchers, clapping and cheering as the procession passed.

As the parade progressed there were many deserters who found shelter at Kimball's by the Sea, the fire station, or anywhere else they could find protection from the weather. Those that made it to the common, drenched from head to toe, found roads around it completely jammed by the vendors and festival-goers who were attempting to make a hasty departure.

Even though there were some other events scheduled to take place at the center stage, this essentially put an end to the three-day event.

"HI, NEIGHBOR. HAVE YOU TRIED MY CHEESE?"

Cabot cheddar cheese, butter and other dairy foods are offered with pride by your nearby dairy farmers. The same farmers who, together, own the Cabot Creamery.

And what that means is, every time you buy a Cabot product, you're helping to support 192 family farms near you in Massachusetts and throughout the Northeast. You're helping to preserve a way of life that's been important here for generations. And you're getting some of the freshest, purest, best-tasting dairy products made anywhere.

Since 1919, your nearby farmers have been working this land, tending the herds and gathering milk. And as long as you keep buying, sharing and enjoying Cabot products, they'll keep right on doing it.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

New Babies and College Kids Abound in Town

Let us begin by giving a huge Cohasset welcome to Timothy Hayes, born March 22 to Meredith Baker-Hayes and Brion Hayes. Timothy joins two siblings, Christopher (five) and Lauren (three). His paternal grandparents are James and Florence Hayes. What a big happy family Timothy is welcomed into! We all welcome you, too, and cannot wait to see you as you stroll around town!

Congratulations to Becky Golden who made dean's list at Colby College this spring. Becky was also voted captain of Colby's varsity swim team for the upcoming year. In her third year qualifying for the Women's New England Championships, she got personal best times in all four of her events. Her 50-yard butterfly time moved her into third place in Colby's all time records! For the summer, Becky will be coaching the Cohasset swim team — she can't wait to be back at the pool with all the kids for another year!

Two news items came to us from the Brown University news bureau this week — Colin Studds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Colin A. Studds of Cohasset, received a bachelor of arts degree from that university May 26. Colin completed a double concentration in English and American Literature.

Kathleen Mary O'Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah F. O'Sullivan, received a bachelor of arts degree from Brown University, completing a double concentration in history and Hispanic literature and culture. Congratulations go out to both of you from all of us!

Tammy Maitland, a CHS Grad, class of 1996, is spending a week in Phelps, Ky., with the Jimmy Carter Work Project. She is there as a part of the Habitant for Humanity Chapter at Boston University. Hard work, but what a feeling of pride she will have upon completing her week!

We applaud Lauren P. Almeida, she achieved dean's list status for the spring semester at the University of Rhode Island!

Some more news from URI, Charles E. Shields and Erik Waal both earned bachelor of arts degrees this May, and both majored in marine affairs! Congrats to you!

Benjamin R. Sparks, a radio major at Emerson College in Boston, was one of more than 600 undergraduates who participated in the College's 117th Commencement, held at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts in Boston May 19. Sparks graduated with a bachelor of science degree.

Phillips Academy has announced the names of the students on the honor roll for the winter term, and Patrick Gaughen (Class of '99), the son of Robert and Margaret Gaughen, "made the grades." Congratulations!

Selectmen Merle Brown, Ronnie McMorris, Nan Roth and Diane Sullivan brave torrential rain to view the Harborfest parade as it passed the community center Sunday afternoon.

Harold Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. William Adams of North Main Street, has received a bachelor's of arts degree from Hamilton College in commencement exercises May 25. Adams majored in government, and is a graduate of CHS.

Judy C. H. Carey of Cohasset was awarded the degree of bachelor of science (magna cum laude) at the May 25 commencement exercises of Suffolk University, held at the Fleet Center in Boston. She is the daughter of Cheng-Zhou and Yue-Li Nin Lo of Taiwan, Republic of China, and she is married to E. Carson Carey.

The Cohasset High School class of 1972 is planning their 25th reunion! If there are parents or friends in town and you know someone from that class who has moved during the last five years, their committee would like to hear from you! Please call Fred Huntwork at 925-4788, Nancy Bilodeau Roach at 383-0802 or Kevin and Pamela Prendergast at 383-1496.

Evan Cutler of Cohasset, an eighth-grade student at the Fessenden School in West Newton, and the son of The Rev. Clifford and Amy Cutler, recently received the award for most improved player in varsity track during the Fessenden spring sports season. Congratulations!

Seven Cohasset students were among 2,385 graduates awarded degrees at the 29th Commencement of UMass/Boston, held May 31 at the Bayside Exposition Center: Linda M. Farrag, bachelor of science; Kelli A. Gildea, bachelor of science; Judith Brennan, master of science; Amanda V. Church, master of education; Karin L. Cunnie, master of science; Michael E. Doherty, master of business administration; and Hamish M. Munro, master of science. Great work, folks!

Alright, everybody, now that school is out, real newsy things happen "around town," so be sure to call me with yours, okay? Thank you!

Obituaries

Richard J. Quinlan

Richard J. Quinlan, 69, of Cohasset, retired assistant director of the Drug Enforcement Administration, died Thursday, June 12, at home.

One of the original members of the newly formed DEA in 1974, Mr. Quinlan set up most of the agency's New England regional offices. He retired in 1978.

He was formerly a U.S. Customs agent for more than 24 years.

Mr. Quinlan was a member of the Association of Former Federal Narcotics Agents, the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, the Association of Former Customs Special Agents and the Fraternal Order of Border Agents.

Born and educated in Weymouth, he played football and baseball at Weymouth High School. He moved to California with his family during his junior year and graduated from John Dewey High School in Long Beach, Calif. in 1945.

A veteran of World War II, he served in the Navy. He served in the Air Force during the Korean War.

Mr. Quinlan was an avid golfer.

He leaves his wife, Ruth G. (Friesen) Quinlan; a son, Michael E. Quinlan of Rockland; a brother, Edward R. Quinlan of Marshfield; and two grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church.

Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate, handled arrangements.

Donations may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, VNA Foundation, P.O. Box 9060, Braintree, 02184 or Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston, 02115.

Paolina Rosano

Paolina (Barbuto) Rosano, 86, of Hingham, died June 8 at Queen Anne Nursing Home after a brief illness.

Her son, Guiseppe Rosano, died June 4.

Mrs. Rosano was born in Palermiti, Italy and lived in Italy until 1966, when she immigrated to Cohasset. She was a Hingham resident for more than 30 years.

Wife of the late Pasquale F. Rosano, she leaves five sons; Frank Rosano and Antonio Rosano, both of Canada, James V. Rosano, Vito Rosano and Mario R. Rosano of Cohasset; a brother, Anthony Barbuto of Hingham; a sister, Frances Emanuello of Cohasset; 14 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. She was also the mother of the late Antonietta Rosano and Tony Rosano.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Burial will be in St. Paul's Cemetery, Hingham.

Donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 1115 W. Chestnut St., Brockton, 02401; or to Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, 02043.

Norman F. James

A graveside service was held Saturday, May 31, at Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset. Mr. James, 77, died after a brief illness at The Colonial Nursing Rehabilitation Center May 15. He was born Jan. 22, 1920. He was the son of the late Percival N. James of Cohasset, and Ida M. Campbell, born in P.E.I. Canada. Mr. James was born and raised in Cohasset and attended Cohasset schools. He was later employed by Bethlehem Steel, and the Fore River Shipyard as a boilermaker. After 28 years he retired in 1962.

After his retirement, he founded a limousine and taxi service serving Cohasset and the South Shore for the next 20 years. Active in Cohasset politics, Norman served on the Cohasset Planning Board for a number of years and was also a member of the Longshore Men's Club.

His wife, Mary B. (O'Brien) pre-deceased him. Mr. James leaves Laurence James and Brian James, both of Cohasset, and the late Norman F. Jr., formerly of Scituate. He was the brother of Douglas C. James of Richmond, Va.; Jeannette Moulton of Franklin; Carol Warren of Marianna, Fla.; and the late Vera M., Charles E., and Eustis A. James. He also leaves eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Donations may be made to the Hingham Visiting Nurses Association, 10 Downer Ave., Hingham, 02043, or Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Baystate Dr., Braintree, 02184. Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Thanks, Wig

To so many of us, Wigmore Pierson started out as a face on the TV screen and then became our friend in the broadest sense of the word.

Just like Peter Jennings or Tom Brokaw, Wig beamed into our living rooms with the latest news and commentary. As we tuned at 8 p.m. every Thursday over the past ten years, we grew comfortable with his presence and his style.

Of course, there's a huge difference between Wig and all those other guys and gals on ABC, NBC, CNN or CBS. They deal with either national or state news. Although Wig didn't shy away from the "big" topics at the statehouse evidenced by frequent guests such as former senate president William Bulger and speaker of the house Charles Flaherty to name a few, Wig's focus was primarily local.

Whether it was Title V, Greenbush or a candidates' debate for the town election — Wig commentated as he lives his life, with passion and boundless energy.

While his show was telecast in dozens of South Shore communities, here in Cohasset, we always knew Wig really belonged to us.

Few realize the amount of homework he had to do to prepare for the show or the amount of work behind the scenes by his director Bob Belliveau of Media One and the host of volunteers over the years.

We owe them all a debt of gratitude.

While his show was telecast in dozens of South Shore communities, here in Cohasset, we always knew Wig really belonged to us.

We can only hope that Wig will continue to provide commentary at town meeting and live coverage on election night in Cohasset.

Here at the Mariner, Wig has invited us to be on his program and in front of the cameras at election time. We're grateful to have had the opportunity.

Over the years, we're happy to have become a friend as well as media colleague. We can't think of anyone with more dash and verve than Wig. Simply stated, he's fun to know.

So as Pierson to Person signs off tonight, the Mariner wishes Wig all the best. We know whatever he does — whether it be something quiet with his family or something public like serving the town he loves — he'll do it with contagious enthusiasm.

Nevertheless, we're sad for ourselves because Thursday night just won't be the same. He'll be missed.

Family Appreciates Outpouring

To the Editor:

The family of Jack Hubbard thank the Mariner for sharing our loss with your readers. We have been so touched by the outpourings of sympathy and affection for this "gentle man." We have also been moved by the number of people who say they were inspired by Jack's example and will in their own ways help to take care of our environment. Jack would be very pleased.

The Hubbard Family

Editor's note: The Hubbard family asked us to tell readers that Jack did not die of a heart attack as initially believed. According to the coroner's office, the cause of death was drowning.

Allegra Appreciates Support

To The Editor:

The members of "Allegra" wish to extend our thanks to the community for its warm appreciation of our efforts this year. "Allegra" was formed in 1995 to promote small ensemble singing amongst teenage young women in grades 8 through 12 and to provide opportunities for community service. We have performed for the Rotary Club, local churches and schools.

Our final concert of the season in May at Second Congregational Church raised $550 in free will donations for Breast Cancer Research. We were delighted that our music and this health issue could form such a beneficial partnership.

Many thanks to those who so generously supported us, both in spirit and through their pocket books!

Band Ready For Next Year

To the Editor:

My Harborfest marching band T-shirt is still wet but I have already received a number of calls from band members enthusiastic about their experience in the parade today (rain notwithstanding) and ready for next year! I wish to publicly thank all of the band members and two other people who helped our effort. First is Steve Biagini, director of instrumental music at Deer Hill School, for his musical leadership in preparing the band this year and each of the three years the band has been in existence. The second is Bob Martin, Harborfest chairman, for providing us with the great T-shirts and for inviting The Globe reporter to our rehearsal. I am only sorry that the reporter did not see our performance today; if she had, she would not have called us a Ragtag band!

P.S. To band members: keep practicing — same three songs next year!

Hingham Commuter Boat Operator Seeks Court Action

Says Bidding Process Was Unfair

By Mary Ford
COHASSET MARINER

Dana Goodell has provided commuter boat service from Hingham to Rowes Wharf and back for 13 years.

So the owner of Boston Harbor Commuter Service, which recently lost its contract with the MBTA to provide the boat service, isn't giving up without a fight.

At 9:30 a.m.. Monday a Suffolk Superior Court Judge will hear Goodell's claims that the bid process was unfair, said Goodell's attorney, Kevin Moloney of the Boston law firm Barron & Stadfeld, P.C.

The lawsuit, launched Tuesday, asks the court to nullify the T's contract with Harbor Cruises and to extend the existing contract with Boston Harbor Commuter Service until a final trial on the merits of the case can be held, Moloney said.

Earlier this month, the MBTA awarded the contract to Harbor Cruises, a joint venture of Modern Continental Construction, Alternative Concepts and Nolan Associates, whose bid was about 50 percent less than Boston Harbor Commuter Service.

The MBTA, which denied Goodell's bid protest, says its only issue is to provide the best service for the least cost.

"Everything was done above board, fair and square," said MBTA spokesman Brian Pedro.

He said the MBTA had no problem with the bid or vendor and even took some of the leaders, of what he described as the "commuter rebellion," to see the boats to relieve any doubts.

Hundreds of the commuters who make the daily round trip from Hingham's Hewitt's Cove Marina signed a recent letter to MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan with concerns about loss of the current provider. Pedro dismissed allegations that the new service will be substandard and said Boston Harbor Cruises, which comes on board July 1, should be given a chance.

"I'm glad people are happy with the old service. But providing the same service for less money is important to the MBTA," he said.

Pedro said the $4 boat fare won't change but the new contract will save taxpayers money.

Goodell contends Harbor Cruises did not submit a reasonable bid because it did not satisfy the minimum vessel requirements set forth in the first phase of the bidding process. Several of the boats proposed by Harbor Cruises do not meet the minimum speed and capacity qualifications, he said.

"Our position is Boston Harbor Commuter Service is the lowest responsive and responsible bidder within the meaning of the bid invitation," Moloney said. "The T violated its own bid invitation and specifications by awarding the contract to Harbor Cruises."

Rick Nolan, a partner in Harbor Cruises, the new provider, said the company has the resources to get all the necessary vessels together and have them ready for service July 1.

He explained that Harbor Cruises provides a myriad of water transportation services. Those include the water shuttle for 1/4 million people annually from the Charlestown Navy Yard, the East Boston Water Shuttle for 30,000 annual riders, and the water transportation systems for the MWRA to Deer Island which runs five ferries year-round, six-days a week, 24-hours a day.

"Claims that we are inexperienced and untried are erroneous. We are the most experienced operator in the harbor," Nolan said.

Senator's Office inundated with calls

The brouhaha over the switch in commuter boat carriers is biggest issue to hit state Sen. Robert Hedlund's office this year.

The Weymouth Republican has long been a proponent of better commuter boat service from the Hingham shipyard to Rowes Wharf in Boston.

So when 700-plus constituents bombarded his office with phone calls, letters and petitions over the past two weeks objecting to a change in the commuter boat service provider — Hedlund went right to the top.

The LuLu E is one of the boats Harbor Cruises plans to use for commuter service from Hingham to Boston.

"I just met with Gov. Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci and told them we have an issue on our hands down there and made them aware of the problem," Hedlund said Monday.

What Hedlund suggested is that the administration address the concerns of commuters and use the opportunity to release money — which was earmarked for commuter boat parking and docking improvements at the Hingham facility — in recent bond bills.

But those who commute from Hingham say it will take more than promises of something better to allay their fears.

Nancy Ristuccia, a legal secretary from Marshfield, has taken the commuter boat for 12 years — nearly the entire time the service has been operated by Boston Harbor Commuter Services, which lost the contract in the recent bid round.

"It's the best part of my work day," said Ristuccia of the commute which she described as "flawless" in all weather conditions.

Scituate's Melissa Boynton, who works at a Boston investment firm, said the Red Line is no alternative.

"The T is always crowded and you can't sit down and sometimes there is no parking," she said. "I can get two hours of work done going back and forth on the boat and that's worth a lot to me."

Hedlund said he hears his constituents' concerns and said if there are significant issues relating to availability and performance of boats then the MBTA should consider holding off implementing the new contract.

"People who ride the boats believe in Goodell and in his ability to get them to work on time and in relative comfort," Hedlund said.

"But as long as (Harbor Cruises) meets conditions set forth in the contract, they have every right to successfully compete," he said.

Hedlund said he is urging the administration to put commuter boat improvements at the top of the priority list so money earmarked for the work will be included within the bond cap.

He explained that the bond bills have gone through the legislative process and are now in the governor's hands but money for the commuter dock and boats has to compete with other projects in the state.

To Hedlund, boats are a priority and he admits turning others onto the transportation system is an educational process.

"The MBTA does not focus on boats," he said. "They operate busses and trains, they contract out for boats.

"The administration hasn't always paid attention to commuter boats."

Hedlund said he wants to get Lt. Gov. Cellucci down to the Hingham commuter dock to make a strong statement about the administration's commitment to commuter boat service.

"If he's a shrewd politician, he ought to come down," he said.

Hedlund said with improved parking, docking and addition of restroom facilities — the numbers who enjoy commuting to work on the water from Hingham could easily double from its current ridership of about 1,500 individuals.

"Boat service has long prospered when no one has paid attention — it's proved to be successful.

"On my watch, I guarantee boat service won't diminish," he said. "You'll only see improvements down there."

Simple Apology Needed

To the Editor:

I feel compelled to respond to your publishing the factually evasive letter from Ronnie McMorris regarding the Gazette's report of her wearing jeans while marching in the Memorial Day parade in 1996.

It was witnessed fact that Selectman McMorris marched in the 1996 Memorial Day parade in jeans. It is also fact that veterans and other onlookers were disturbed by her choice of dress. Her comment that the Gazette story was about what she wore at "recent Memorial day events," and her "not only was I not so attired" assertion, are self-elevations and distortions regarding the original story. They both most certainly refer to her dress in the 1997 parade, after the Gazette article was published.

A simple apology to those who may have been offended by her marching in the 1996 parade in jeans would have been sufficient, and a show of respect and class. Instead we are subjected to the verbiage of the self-serving "smoke and mirrors" invective presented, demonstrating that acknowledgment of the feelings of those offended on that particular occasion is beyond her consideration.

In the absence of any such apology, perhaps people will be satisfied with the fact that Selectman McMorris' dress in the 1997 parade was more appropriate for the occasion, and it is unlikely she'll march in a Memorial Day parade wearing jeans again in view of her well noted feelings about respect.

Community Center Garden Looks Good

To the Editor:

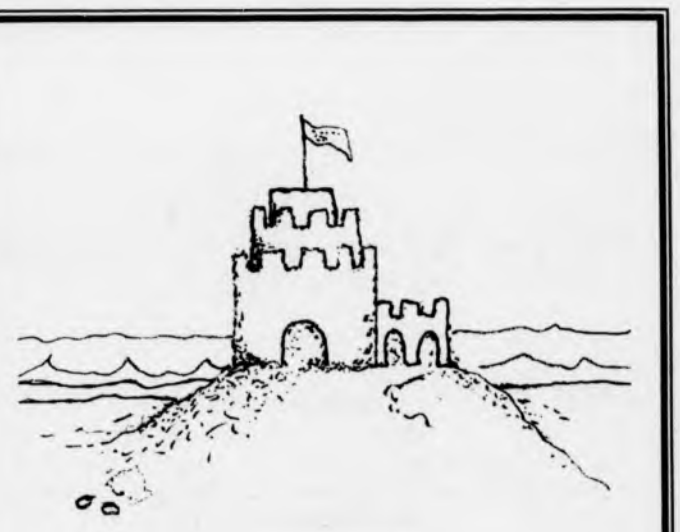
This is the latest update on our progress with the landscaping project at the center. The gardens are beginning to bloom and the fence is up and painted. We owe thanks to the following individuals:

Barbara Anglin for her many hours and talents overseeing the project.

Mrs. Cundall-Stenbeck for her donation of hostas and iris.

Andrea and Roger Wade for their generous donation of perennials.

Glenn Pratt for the new fence.



Karen Kirkendall for the contribution of many shrubs and her assistance with coordinating the tree pruning, giving many hours of her time.

Mark Picot, our arborist, for a great job.

The center would also like to extend special thanks to the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Pearce for their gift of peonies; Mr. and Mrs. Long for their gift of various perennials; Mr. Whipple for the gift of lovely clematis plants; Ms. Charles for lots of goodies from her garden; Earla Esposito from Esposito's Nursery for all she has done; Glenn Pratt for his very generous contribution; Mike Bleakie for the compost and mulch.The community center never looked better. Stop by and see how great we're doing!

Festival Volunteers Made It Happen

To the Editor:

What a weekend! To all those who participated and visited the South Shore Art Center's 42nd annual Festival on the Common, we thank you. To the more than 200 volunteers who made it happen, we are forever grateful. Strawberry Festival — perfect and delicious as always. We can only imagine the months of preparation that made it all look so easy. In this year's heat, a reprise at one of your shaded tables was an extra plus. Harborfest — your parade participants deserve an award for perseverance and give a new twist to the saying "rain on our parade." Perhaps you couldn't hear us, but hundreds were cheering and enjoying the parade from inside the tents and churches along the route.

No wonder the vendors and crafters always comment on the camaraderie and community feeling in Cohasset. Once again, the majority of participants made a point of commenting, unsolicited, about the behavior of the children and the friendliness of all visitors.

Special thanks to the nameless visitors who became instant volunteers when the rains came on Sunday. Without being asked, you offered "What can I do to help?" In record time the tent flaps were down, art work protected, children and visitors escorted into safe buildings, it was something to see and a treasured memory.

Please join us in acknowledging our committee chairs who organized core groups of volunteers for each division: Patricia Leahy, activities coordinator; Margot Cheel, craft artisans and food vendor coordinator; Michelle Laney, juried exhibitions; Chuck Lathrop, exhibition installation; Michele Meister, members show; Mary Foley, young artists exhibition; Esther Maschio, festival artwork; Susan Kilmartin, festival banner; Carole and Eliot Siegal, opening reception; Linda Bolster, creativity tent; Claffy Williams, artists demonstrations; Chris Hidell, community sculpture; Linda Keating, masterpiece photo; Mary Kennedy and Marilyn Clark, carillonneurs; Chris Draves and Scituate Boy Scouts, panel installation; Meg Moore, artist sign out; Chris Whoriskey, art transportation; Dorothy Corey, festival guides; Wig Pierson and Bob Belliveau, cable; Glenn Pratt, electrical and wiring; South Shore Music Circus, parking.

One of our new additions this year was our operation crew, who started in the early morning, opened the tent flaps, set up tables, chairs, easels, equipment, operated the stage sound system and worked to keep the festival running smoothly all day and then closed up at night by securing all tents and equipment and making sure our common looked as beautiful as when we started. Their energy was incredible. Our appreciation to Greg Bilton, Ryan Freeman, Justin Golden, Pat Leahy, Tom Leahy, Matt Lewis, Morgan Sandell and Kyle Whiteley. Great job!

As always, it wouldn't happen without the guidance of: Cohasset Police and Fire Departments, tree and park department, highway department, health board, building inspector, selectmen's office and wire department. Wayne Sawchuk and Gary Ritts, we don't have a title for you, but if we could think of one it would encompass "friend, supporter, fixer of last minute problems, incredible resource."

To our more than 50 sponsors and four principle corporate sponsors: BankBoston, Garelick Farms, The Patriot Ledger and Sullivan Brothers/Auto Mall, Kingston, thanks for letting it happen again.

To all who made the festival possible, it was a true show of community effort and what is possible when everyone works together. Please don't wait until next June to visit us. We have plenty of great activities planned between now and then.

Resident Seeks To Raise House By Three Feet

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

When Carolyn Sammon purchased her house at 84 Summer St., she received assurances from previous owners that it didn't flood during heavy rain storms. Two weeks after she bought the property there were 18-inches of rain in her tenant's basement apartment.

Sammon believes the only way to stop the flooding is to raise her house by three feet so the water will flow under the house instead of into the basement. She is currently awaiting a decision by the zoning board giving her permission to raise the house. The zoning board was scheduled to vote on the request last night (Wednesday), after this paper went to press.

Zoning board members said Sammon did not need a permit or variance because the house would still be within the permitted height limit after it is raised. Zoning board Chairman Mark DeGiacomo said he wasn't aware of any objections by other members and he expected the project to receive its approval.

Sammon visited the planning board and the conservation commission last month, but was told her project did not fall under their jurisdiction.

"It's a hideous situation when it floods," Sammon said. "We need relief. When the brook overflows, we have to disinfect the house."

ConCom Still Considering Rose Hill

The conservation commission continued to consider the Rose Hill subdivision plan at its June 19 meeting. Conservation commission members had requested additional information on the potential impacts of the subdivision on fish populations and James Brook. Conservation agent Paul Shea said he was satisfied with the study, but Michael Dick complained that the study didn't consider the impacts of the project on invertebrates. The meeting was interrupted when the fire alarm at town hall went off, forcing everyone in the building to evacuate. Jeff Waal decided to continue the meeting on the hood of a dark green Toyota Camry in the town hall parking lot. When the owner of the Camry arrived, commission members transferred their documents to the hood of Dick's car. Commission members continued the hearing until July 10, with the expectation of closing the hearing at that time.

Sammon property during heavy rain storms and other flood events.

Sammon plans to hire a contractor to raise the house by three feet on hydraulic jacks and place cross-beams under the house to increase its height from 31-feet to 34-feet.

Sammon assured the conservation commission that she would take measures to make sure the work did not affect James Brook.

"I want no impact on the James Brook embankment or flood plain," said conservation commission member Michael Dick.

Some neighbors have complained that Sammon never completed renovation work to the house that she started several years ago.

Sammon said she was unable to complete renovations for financial reasons, but she now has the money to finish the work.

Peggy Soltesz of Border Street complained that Sammon planned to turn the house into condominiums. She feared that converting the house into condos would exacerbate congested street parking.

But zoning board member Barbara Powers told Soltesz that ownership was not a zoning issue.

DeGiacomo pointed out that there would probably be the same number of cars at the building whether it was condominiums or rentals.

Sandra and Jack Noble sent a letter to selectmen expressing similar concerns. The Nobles were also concerned that the property would decline if Sammon became an absentee landlord.

Don't Miss the Annual Greek Taverna July 4-6

The Greeks have a word for it: Taverna. Taverna, a word which means a cafe where you go and sit and philosophize. Taverna, a place where you go for good snacks and food. Taverna, a place to sit, nurse some wine, eat some appetizers and chat. Taverna, a spot to listen to foot tapping music. And we have it in the South Shore, courtesy of the Greek Orthodox Community of Cohasset.

Each year, on the July 4 weekend, (this year, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 4, 5 and 6) Taverna is held on the Nativity of the Virgin Greek Orthodox church grounds with tents, food, Greek pastries and music.

The parishioners of the church gather weeks before in the planning, preparing and cooking of the pastries and hope they make enough for all who come. People have come from the North Shore, from the Cape, they see it advertised on their vacations and come; it is listed with the Massachusetts Department of Tourism as the July 4 weekend attraction on the South Shore. From Texas and California, from Maine and Florida, they tell the parishioners how much they like coming and enjoying a family festival.

The parishioners themselves cover a number of local towns. And they come before, during and after Taverna, offering their stewardship of time and talent to make it a success. It is truly a labor of love for them. Fr. John and the Taverna Committee work and talk and plan months in advance reshaping, and changing things to the people will enjoy the food, the music and the pastries.

The ladies organization Philoptochos, led by Mrs. J. Cara Donna, takes change of all the pastries. The ladies gather weeks before making pastry. But it does not stop there. They also come on the days of the Taverna and stand and serve and explain what the pastries are and how they are made.

The crew for the barbecue works in what we might say is a labor intensive environment. The shish kabob must be cooked just right to retain the flavor. The other food products, prepared under the watchful eye of Chef Paul, South Shore Catering in Hull, must also be at its peak of flavor. And the servers behind the line must know what's in each item: the pastitsio, the moussaka, the rolled grape leaves, the roast lamb, the salad, the spanakopita (spinach pie), and a plethora of pastry. There is an awareness of the foods people might be allergic to and so they try to be informed.

And the servers behind the line must know what's in each item: the pastitsio, the moussaka, the rolled grape leaves, the roast lamb, the salad, the spanakopita (spinach pie), and a plethora of pastry.

The music, toe tapping Greek music, has people getting up and dancing, even in the aisles. The children's dance troupe under the aegis of Mrs. M. Pappas has developed a repertoire of dances with intricate steps and movements.

The raffle, a trip for two anywhere in the continental United States, chaired by Mrs. H. Panesis has other prizes with it.

The boards of stewards of the church has been anxiously watching all facets of the Taverna planning and Mr. M. McNamara, president of the board, has served as chief motivator and planner for the detail schedule.

The dates are always around July 4, joining together the festivities and jubilation of July 4 and the American heritage along with the Greek. Taverna. Days of celebration. Days of honoring two legacies.

Newcomers Club Plans its Summer Activities

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club announces its activities for the months of June, July and August.

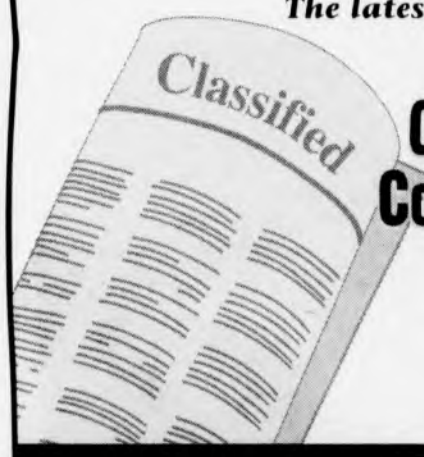
The Newcomers Club Book Group will meet Thursday, June 26 to discuss "The Idiot" by Fyodor Dostoevsky. Those interested in attending may call Shelly at 383-9734 for the meeting time and place.

The men's Poker Group will be holding monthly meetings in June, July and August. Call Rick at 383-0959, if you would like to attend.

Sip-N-Stitch welcomes all Newcomer members to join its group. If you have a craft project that is portable or you just want to socialize, come out for a glass of wine and a relaxing evening. The next meeting is June 30. Call Mary at 383-6757 for time and place.

Moms and Tots play groups are forming for the fall. Anyone interested should call Heidi at 383-8016 or Kelly at 383-0025 by June 30. All participants must be members of the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club. The membership fee is $23. A membership application can be obtained by calling the membership chairperson or writing to the club.

The Galloping Gourmet will be holding a barbecue and tropical drink party for its next gathering Sunday, July 12 at 7 p.m. Attendees are asked to bring meats and vegetables already skewered and ready to grill. In addition, bring Bacardi frozen mixers and $2 per person 'cover charge'. RSVP to Nancy at 383-1463 no later than July 10.



A Beach Party for adults and children is scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 3, from 4 to 6 p.m. at Sandy Beach in Cohasset. Plan to bring your own 'ready to consume' picnic food and non-alcoholic beverage, (no cooking facilities) as well as beach toys for children. Parking is available for both Cohasset and Scituate residents. For information, call Ruthanne at 383-8120.

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club is always open to new members. For more information, call 545-4614 or 383-6963 or write to the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club, Box 623, Cohasset, Mass. 02025.

Parents asked to commit to C.A.S.A.

The Drug and Alcohol Awareness Committee with the support of the police, the Cohasset schools and the selectmen will mail an informational brochure to the parents of children in grades 6 through 12 entitled C.A.S.A. (Cohasset Against Substance Abuse).

C.A.S.A. was formerly entitled Safe Homes. In the past Safe Homes helped parents network a safe home environment. The need to reinstate a support network has become evident because of the presence of alcohol and drugs among our youth. Parents are concerned about the alarming increase in alcohol and drug use among our youth, and social acceptability of this use. Communicating and networking among parents has been proven to be effective in the past under Safe Homes. All parents of children in grades 6 through 12 are asked to participate in this program by taking a stand and by showing your concern for the health and well-being of young people.

Please read and fill out the form which is reprinted here and which will be enclosed in the C.A.S.A. mailing. Be sure to check off the box at the bottom and mail it back before August 31. A booklet with the names of the participants will be mailed out in the fall to all parents with children in grades 6 through 12. Signing this form will be our first stand in making a commitment against substance abuse.

DRUG FACTS

Marijuana contains more than 400 chemicals. When smoked, it produces more than 2,000 chemicals that enter the body through the lungs. The drug interferes with a person's judgment and coordination. Driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of marijuana is particularly dangerous. Among males, prolonged use of marijuana can reduce the production of sperm and of the male sex hormone testosterone. Among females, it can cause menstrual irregularity and reduced fertility. Extended use of marijuana has a long-term psychological effect. Some individuals lose interest in school, their job and social activities. Most people who use marijuana begin to do so between the ages of 12 and 18.

Too Hot to Skate? Not A Chance

By David Wolcott
COHASSET MARINER

Just like clockwork, they arrive each day after school at the rink for their training.

Practicing the leaps, spins, compulsory figure eight's and other elements to their routine, you might think there were a little bit off the wall.

It's all true, and some of best and brightest from the New England amateur ice skating pool will converge on the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham later this month (June 27-June 29) for the International Skating Institute's New England District Championships.

Leading the charge to the event will be more than 80 members of the Rockland Skating Rink's Winterland Skating Club.

Local nine-year-old Jessica Bilbo is representing Cohasset in the competition

"They'll be about 600 skaters involved in the competition from all ages (as young as 2, old as 81) and experience levels," said Winterland director Katy Hayden, competing in such events as the individual freestyle, artistic, spotlight, ice dancing, and the team compulsory and team precision events.

"You could see as little as one skater or as many as 16 kids during team events out on the ice at any time," she explained

Hayden and her skaters also has another competition on their mind, this one a little more global in scale, as Hayden is helping coordinate the arrival in August of more than 2,000 skaters from across the world at the New England Sports Arena in Marlboro for the ISI World Championships.

"The kids are just off the walls with excitement" about both of the tournaments, said Hayden. "It's going to be a great experience for everyone.

"This is the first time that the World Championships have even been held in the Northeast," she added. The competition will include teams from the Far East, Canada, Phillipeans, South America and all over the United States.

Former U.S. champion Todd Eldridge is scheduled to be a featured performer at a special ice show during the week-long event, along with some other special guests to be announced.

Rather than the athletes you see in competition or on the various ice skating tours, Hayden said the boys and girls of the ISI "are more of the recreational ice skaters. These are people who love to compete, but they are also out there to have fun."

Instead of their counterparts who may eat, sleep, breathe and basically set up a campsite at their home rink, Hayden said, on the average, the kids at Winterland were more likely to practice all through the year a couple of days each week after school as well as take a private lesson or two along the way.

Above – Cohasset's Jessica Bilbo, second from the left, will be competing in the International Skating Institute's Northeast region competition in Hingham over the weekend.
Staff photo/Carey C. Marden

"The kids love skating, but they also want to play soccer, swim, baseball, hang out with their friends and do a million other things in addition to their skating," said Hayden. "There are some top skaters in the group, but they are on a different career track than the kids you see in the other amateur championships or in the Olympics."

Tennis, Sailing Teams Complete Successful Seasons

By Jim O'Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

School may be out for Cohasset students, but some will surely reflect on their spring season at CHS with fond memories. Two teams in particular, the sailing team and the girls' tennis team, performed quite well.

The sailing team, comprised of juniors and sophomores, finished second in their section, coming in after St. Sebastian's in the Division 3 South Sectional final.

The girls' tennis team, led by senior captains Ashley Brister and Karyn Niessink, had their best season in years, making it all the way to the second round of the state tournament.

The Skippers sailing team was captained by Colin Pyfrom and Katie Buckley, both juniors, and its roaster was packed with sailors who should be grizzled seamen by next year. Apart from Pyfrom and Buckley, Ivan Chang, Whitney Cook, Janson Dupree, Lindy Holway, Lis Kidder and Chris Laas were other junior mariners this season and will bring experience to next year's team. Devin Buick, Justin Maitland and Hunt Pile were the squad's three sophomores, all three showing loads of potential, and should be manning the ships for two more years in Cohasset.

"We have a promising year, and we'll do even better next year," vows Pile.

The team qualified for the state tournament and narrowly missed carrying home the Division 3 South Sectional trophy. However, there's always next year and Cohasset shows signs of being a factor on the high seas for years to come.

The girls' tennis team also showed not only talent, but potential as well, finishing with an overall 14-2 record. Brister and Niessink helped steer the girls to the second round of the tourney, losing only two meets the whole way. Freshman Kate Stone was entrenched at the first singles spot and let her opponents know the reason why.

Sophomore Katie Brister filled the second singles slot capably, with her sister Ashley stroking groundstrokes from the third. Niessink and sophomore Jessica Stevens played first doubles, while youngsters Caitlin Flint and Lauren Smith got some experience at second doubles.

Overall, the year appears to have been a good one for the sailing and girls' tennis teams. Both made their respective tournament and both squads appear to be packed with potential, looking forward to a banner season next year.

THE FISH STORY/Mark Trask

Thunder Rolls Over the Pond

The lightning cracked and zipped to earth, sometimes a flock of sizzling bolts at once. Great gusts of wind roared through the treetops as thick swirls of heavy rain engulfed everything in a grey wall of water. Deafening rolls of thunder boomed ominously, adding to the impressive natural symphony.

Before all that however, the fishing was like the weather, hot.

The heat wave built early in the week, and it seemed the fish sensed it and responded by becoming aggressive. Angler after angler reported wonderful stories of catching scads of schoolies, some even whining dare I say. Too many schoolie stripers? How can we complain! A stream of lucky anglers brought fish in to the official scale.

Adam Donovan has been on a hot streak. Adam picked up two keepers out of four fish he brought to shore up in the Briggs Harbor area. Minutes ago he smiled as he left with another bagful of mackerel and pogies.

Mike Kelley took some time off from tying flies to use one near Sand Hills. His chartreuse Clouser fooled a fine 20-pound striper that taped out at 40 and 1/2 inches. Meanwhile up in Cohasset, Scott Coughlin was placing his beauty on the charcoal barbecue.

Ken Portanova of Cohasset and his buddy Mike McCabe of West Roxbury trolled a 9ER rig in the western channel and christened it in fine style. Just inside Barrel Rock, a 42-inch, 21-pound, 14 ounce striper slammed the trolled baits. To say Ken

Junior Skippers End Season With a Tie

The Cohasset Junior Lacrosse team finished its season with a game that epitomized the entire year, jumping off to a hot start before finishing in an 8-8 tie with Concord.

The game was one of two the Skippers played June 14 at the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League Jamboree, the largest annual youth lacrosse event in the country. In the first game, Cohasset lost to a powerful, undefeated Beverly team 10-1.

Against Beverly, Cohasset scored first, with Curt Kahn converting a feed from Dwayne Morris, but Beverly's size and stick skills soon won out. Beverly scored nine unanswered goals to lead 9-1 at the half. The two teams played evenly in the second half, with Nick Murphy making 12 of his 17 saves to shut down Beverly's offense.

Against Concord, Cohasset jumped off to a lead just seconds into the game, when Robert Hickey won the opening face-off and drove straight to the net and scored, a feat he duplicated at the start of the second half. Kahn collected two goals and Michael Hajjar and Justin Runey both picked up their first points of the season with assists to Evan Pestone and Michael Rasmussen respectively, as Cohasset stretched the lead to 5-3 at the half.

Concord turned it around in the second half, however, peppering Murphy with shots and finally tying the score with just two minutes left. Cohasset had several opportunities to win the game from there, but could not convert. There is no overtime in jamboree games. Murphy's 14 saves were described by the Concord coach as "the best goaltending we've seen all year."

Cohasset finished the season 4-6-1, a disappointing end to a year that started with four wins in the first five games. Matt Davis, who finished the season as Cohasset's leading midfield scorer with 14 goals and 2 assists was selected to the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League 12 and Under All-Star team and will play with that squad at a national tournament in Towson, Md. the weekend of June 21.

"All in all, it was a good season," said Junior Skippers coach Chuck Jaffe. "We would have liked to win a few more games, but the kids had fun, learned a lot about the game of lacrosse and were a joy to coach. They should be excited about their future in the sport. I am."

Jaffe noted that about half of this year's squad should return next year, and is particularly excited about a defense that returns goaltender Murphy and defensemen Runey, Reed Smith, Stephen Davis and Danny Roth. "I've always been a defensive-minded coach, so it's nice to know that, unlike this year, we can start next year with a lot of depth and savvy around our own goal."

Jaffe will lead a summer recreation camp designed to get players ready for next spring. Boys and girls entering the fifth and sixth grades in the fall are eligible to participate in the camp, which runs for eight Mondays beginning June 30. Contact the Cohasset Recreation Department for details.

Here are the final statistics for the Junior Skippers 1997 season:

Curt Kahn (23 goals, 0 assists, 23 points); Matt Davis (14-2-16); Evan Pestone (10-6-16); Robert Hickey (11-3-14); Michael Rasmussen (8-0-8); Michael Devine (7-0-7); Greg O'Connell (5-2-7); Paul Dignan (2-4-6); Dwayne Morris (1-3-4); Mike Ernst (1-3-4); Rob Carpenter (3-0-3); Nick Spirito (1-2-3); Paul Cotter (1-1-2); John Dwyer (1-1-2); Mike Geddes (0-1-1); Michael Hajjar (0-1-1) and Justin Runey (0-1-1). Nick Murphy stopped 149 of 236 shots he faced for a .631 save percentage.

Sunshine Girls Off to Perfect Start

The Sunshine Girls softball team, sponsored by Sweet Surprises Candy Store in Cohasset Plaza, is off to a roaring start. The team is undefeated after its first three games thanks to the great hitting and fielding ability of the girls.

In all of their outings, the Sunshine Girls have racked up a lot of runs. The bats of Christina Daniels, Erin Liddell, Aly Belz, Cecilia Chapman and Kate Carpenter have been consistently red hot, driving in many runs much to the consternation of the other teams. These girls give it their all every time they are at the plate.

But hitting is only part of the story; for not only can the Sunshine Girls hit, they can also field. Danielle Hajjar and Jacqueline Chase, both terrific at the plate, have also robbed the other teams of runs with their fielding. Katie James, Elizabeth Stone and Vanessa Plante, all solid hitters, fielded with great finesse, making it difficult for the other teams to score.

Kristen Schwerin and Dominique Asnault have their share of RBIs and great plays in the field. Eagerness to try any position and great team spirit have marked the playing of Brooke Allen, Molly Kirk and Jessica Wheelwright making the Sunshine Girls impossible to beat so far.

Great coaching by Dan Belz and John Chapman, with assistance from Rick Daniels at Saturday's game, has certainly been evident when you watch this team score, score, score!

Lacrosse Lessons Available

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a full-contact, full-equipment lacrosse clinic this summer under the direction of Mr. Chuck Jaffee of Cohasset, for youngsters entering grades five and six during the fall of 1997.

Clinics will be held Monday evenings, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., beginning Monday, June 30, continuing for eight weeks through Aug. 18.

Participants will need a helmet, stick and pads for participation in this clinic. The fee for the eight-week opportunity is $35 per person.

Registration forms and details are available at the Cohasset Recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall. Early registration is advised due to a limitation in participation.

South Shore Soccer Camp

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8 to 18. This is the South Shore Soccer Camp's sixth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering, it is suggested that you call the Cohasset recreation department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791, to be assured enrollment. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore Soccer will be offered to both boys and girls during the weeks of Monday through Friday, Aug. 4 to 8, and August 11 to 15. Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays through Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Miliken Field. The cost for camp is $175 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available.

PERSONAL FINANCE

A mid-year review of your financial plans

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Have you stuck to your New Year's resolutions? This year you were going to lose ten pounds and invest more money toward your retirement--remember? Of course, it's easy to see what needs improvement, and difficult, somehow, to conjure up the willpower to make those promised changes. Giving yourself a mid-year financial checkup can prevent you from totally abandoning those beginning-of-the-year goals.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Worth Magazine asked some of the country's best financial planners for advice on how to start the year with a healthy financial plan. Here are a few of those suggestions which may help you keep on track, or at least let you get a jump on next year's resolutions.

On the most basic level, the first step to making a financial plan is knowing what you have and what you want. But most people can't even estimate their net worth within five percent, says David Diesslin of Diesslin & Associates in Fort Worth, Texas. To figure the dollar sum, tally the value of your assets--cash, investments (IRA, mutual funds, stocks, etc.), real estate, cars, and collections of art, etc.--and then subtract any liabilities--mortgage, car loan or lease, and investment liabilities, such as a margin loan with a broker and deferred-income taxes on stocks or compensa tion packages.

Determining your net worth may show you that while you own a lot, your debt overrides the assets' value--perhaps more than you had suspected. This process is a good point of departure for setting your long term financialgoals and adjusting your saving and investment strategies to meet them, says Diesslin.

And as you review your investments, you should inspect your portfolio's asset allocation to make sure it jives with your investment strategy says Wayne Starr, a certified financial planner at Neill & Associates in Kansas City, Missouri. Each investor's asset allocation should reflect his financial goals and taste for risk, both of which change with age.

The following, among other things, need to be considered: whether one is willing to take big risks for big profit; whether there is a need for income from investments; and what kind of access to cash is required. A generic asset allocation model for conservative investing has 60 percent in a diverse array of equities and 40 percent in short- and long-term bonds and cash.

Whatever you decide your ideal allocation to be, make sure that six months of market activity hasn't thrown it off-balance, says Starr. In a year with a strong equity market, for example, your stock investments may have increased in value so that they now represent 80 percent of your portfolio, instead of 60 percent. If so, consider selling some stock to get your allocation back on your well-balanced portfolio.

You can decide to take a short-term perspective and make some tactical allocation shifts in response to market changes and trends in the economy. A surge in stock prices or rising interest rates, for example, might suggest a subsequent decrease or increase in the recommended stock and bond allocations.

Just as the nature of your own portfolio can change without you realizing it, so can the characteristics of your mutual funds. "Several things can happen to a great fund after you buy it," says Frank Butterfield of Homrich & Berg in Atlanta. "The manager who built the track record can depart. The assets can balloon and cause the manager to dilute his or her investment ideas. The style of the fund can change."

Butterfield points to the Govett Small Companies fund which had a stellar record under fund manager Garrett Van Wagoner--its annual average for the three years ended December 1995 was a whopping 52.1 percent. Then Van Wagoner left and the fund's performance fell under the new manager; returning only 1.47 percent over the nine months following Van Wagoner's departure.

Instead of parking your money in a mutual fund and throwing away the key, Butterfield suggests you monitor the fund carefully by reading the quarterly reports. Watch for shifts in the amount of assets and the number and types of stocks the fund holds. Any significant breaks with the past should lead you to re-evaluate the investment.

While staying on top of your financial plan isn't exactly as much fun as a day at the beach, following through on this advice may ensure that you can enjoy the summer worry-free.

Investing in emerging markets

By Porter P. Morgan

As Americans become more and more knowledgeable about investing, their horizons are expanding beyond the borders of the U.S.

Much of the attention in international investing has been focused recently on emerging markets. Emerging markets refer to the securities markets in developing nations such as China, Brazil, South Korea and Thailand.

Attraction to the emerging markets seems to be in direct correlation with their projected growth rates. In developed countries such as the U.S., the economy tends to grow at two to five percent per year, while in emerging markets growth rates of five to 10 percent are not out of the ordinary.

The search for above average returns in emerging markets can be accompanied by above average risk. Investors should keep several things in mind when looking at investing in emerging markets:

• Only invest in emerging markets if you can tolerate extreme volatility. These markets can go up and down very quickly.

• Invest in emerging markets with a long-term perspective. Nations like China and Mexico offer a great deal of potential but it will take time. Think about investing today based on what these markets could be like in 10 years

• Invest only a small part of your portfolio in emerging markets (10 to 15 percent). Just as it is important to limit your domestic exposure in any single investment by diversifying, so too is it important to limit your exposure to emerging markets by diversifying among these holdings.

• Emerging markets carry a completely different set of risks not usually associated with investing in the U.S., including political, social and economic events that could cause investment loss.

Despite the risks, investing in emerging markets offers greater diversification than a portfolio that's dependent on a single developed nation. It can also help to create a steadier level of returns, as the U.S. stock market generally moves independently of foreign markets.

Fidelity Flyers Soar in Final Game

By John and Paula Cuneo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

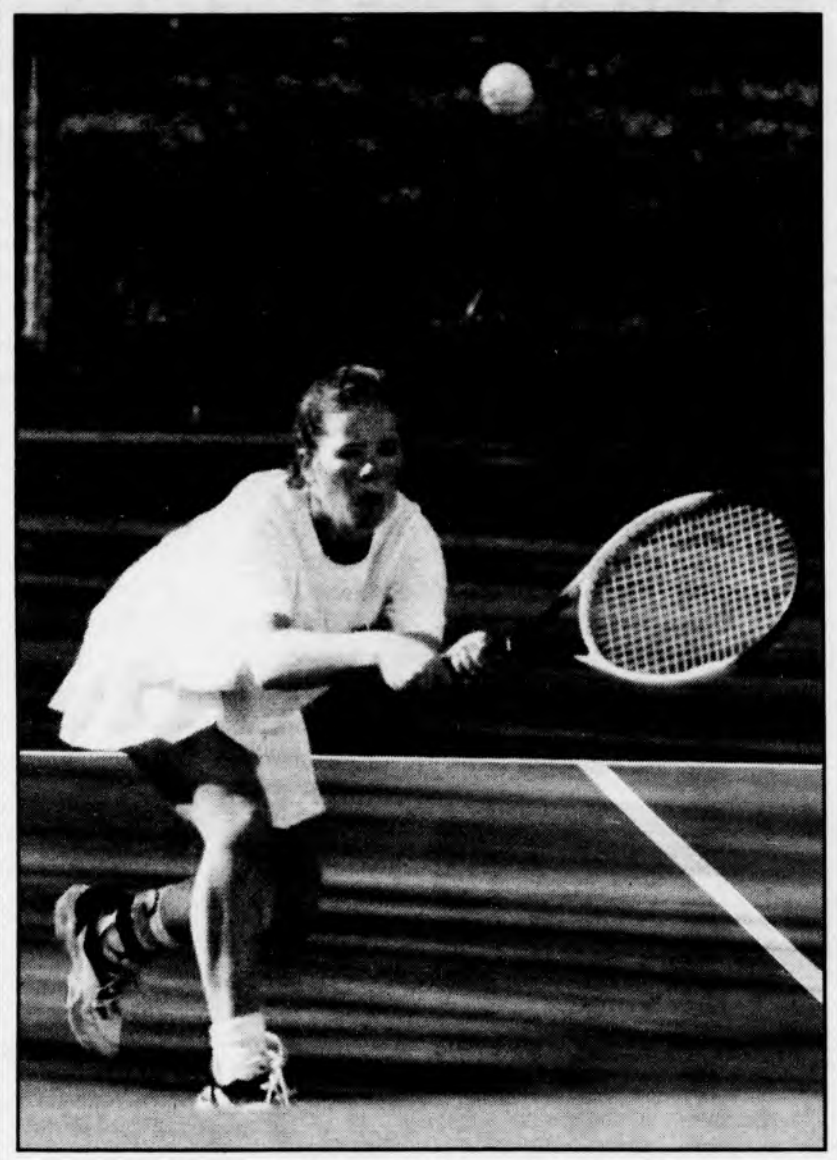
Coaching and teamwork led the Fidelity Flyers to a 21-11 victory in their final game of the 1997 girls softball season.

The Fidelity Flyers, sponsored by Fidelity Home Health Services and coached by Jean Muir, Patty Smith and Mary Ernst, have shown steady improvement over the course of the season.

The players have a knowledge of the game and are enthusiastic and encourage each other to do their best.

The team exhibited a lot of talent and skill in this game both offensively and defensively. During the third inning, the Flyers came from behind by scoring eight runs.

Alex Coffey continued to show her form as a power hitter by doubling home runners Caitlin Sanchez and Devin Smith, who had hit safely ahead of her.



Amy Cuneo singled Alex to third, adding to her perfect night at the plate. The next four batters, Callie Ernst, Chelsea Grossman, Becca Lehr and Mia Lieb-Lappen, chipped in by hitting safely and scoring at the top of the third inning.

Defense took over at the bottom of the third with Becca Lehr's great play at second base to finish the inning and keep their opponent scoreless this time at bat.

Several other players made great defensive plays to keep the other team off the scoreboard. Outstanding fielding was demonstrated by Christine Lovallo, who tagged a runner out at second, and Mia Lieb-Lappen, who threw to first to get the runner out.

Late in the game, teammates Christie Muir, Carrie Muir, Katherine Murphy and Cassie Rosano helped the flyers to score the insurance runs to guarantee victory.

This softball season proved to be a good experience for the girls, learning to work together as a team, showing good sportsmanship to their opponents, learning the game and improving their skills. By any measure it was a successful season, and we all look forward to another great year in 1998.

Kate Stone was one of the reasons for a successful tennis season this year at CHS.

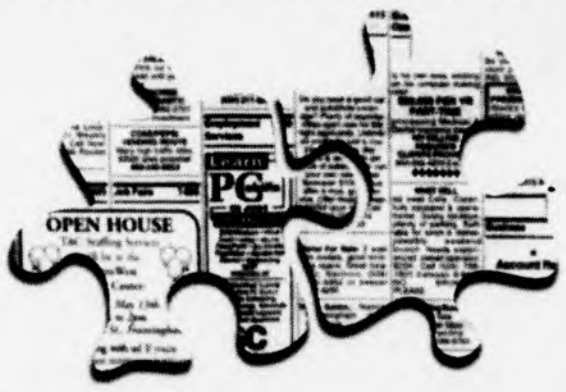
was ecstatic would be an understatement.



Stripers and blues are advancing on Humarock from both sides. Ronnie reports from Ferry Street that pogies are now the bait of choice for most river anglers and beachfront surfcasters as well. The excitement was barely concealed as she talked about the blues running up the beachside. Remember to bring some wire leaders!

Back when it was still a cold spring, we ordered Mike MacNamara some Mustad circle hooks. Mike reported he'd read an article about the lip hooking abilities. As it turns out the state Division of Marine Fisheries is also now investigating the circle hook as a way to reduce throwback mortality. Mike reports that every fish caught this spring was lip hooked. Four keepers per trip in May and June. Not a bad streak.

Elsewhere pogies are thick in the Snug Harbor mooring basin of Duxbury Bay. Jeff Adams was all smiles as he hustled out with some fresh pogies. No Brown's Bank striper is safe now, I thought. Mike Bearce is having a summer to remember on the sweet water. Mike landed and released a 7-plus pound large mouth bass in one of the Turkey Hill Run impoundments.

Nantasket Beach Relay Race to Benefit Wellspring

By Carol Britton Meyer
COHASSET MARINER

Runners from Cohasset and other South Shore communities will have an opportunity to participate in an 8-mile relay race on Nantasket Beach.

The "Great Nantasket Dash to the Basket," planned for Saturday, July 12, has a twofold purpose.

"The relay race can easily be run by both casual and serious runners, and the proceeds will benefit Wellspring, a local food pantry in Hull," said race coordinator Richard Wallwork, a Hingham resident.

"The emphasis of the race is having a great time," he said. "There are many races, but this one's different."

What makes the event unique is the fact that it's a relay race. Teams of up to five, including four runners and one "beach bum," are invited to participate.

Participants will each complete a 2-mile leg, passing a rubber lobster baton to the next runner. Carrying a package of rice or pasta from the start to the 2-mile turnaround point, each participant will hand his or her offering to the team "beach bum," who collects items from all the runners in a "Nantasket basket."

"The rubber lobster will make the race really nutty," Wallwork laughed.

A team finishes the race when its fourth runner crosses the finish line. Each team must have its lobster baton and a full basket of food at the end of its part of the race.

Wallwork hopes to recruit at least 100 teams in the first year of the event, which he hopes to make an annual occurrence.

"I encourage early registration so we'll get enough teams to make the race interesting and ensure its success," he said.

Wallwork, a public relations specialist, has coordinated special events as part of his job at a Boston bank.

"I've always wanted to coordinate an event of my own, to make my mark so to speak," he said.

The inspiration for the beach race came from his participation in a fund-raising marathon last fall in Falmouth, which was very successful.

"A lot of people don't realize how great Nantasket Beach is. It's nice for morning walks or long runs in the sunset," said Wallwork. "It may not be the most pristine beach now, but in the next 10 years I predict it will come around even more."

In the meantime, he said, the race, which will take place at the south end of the beach, offers local runners the chance to take advantage of it's early-morning beauty.

While some may wonder if running a race on a beach is difficult, Wallwork said, "Nantasket Beach is really flat and therefore easy to run on."

Wallwork, who is a volunteer with the Greater Boston Food Bank (GBFB), read about Wellspring in the GBFB newsletter.

Since Wellspring is located in a non-urban setting, he said it's sometimes more difficult to do fund raising.

"It's almost totally a volunteer effort, and sometimes people don't realize that there are needs in the suburbs as well," he said. "I thought all the people out there in the community needed was a little nudge in that direction."

Hingham resident Cindy McGovern is assisting Wallwork by recruiting residents to participate in the beach race.

"People seem interested in taking part," she said. "In some cases, they've got a crew and are looking for that last member.

"It's for a good cause and will be a fun event taking place outdoors," McGovern said.

"The prizes also emphasize fun," Wallwork said. They include beach sandals for third-place winners; beach shirts for second-place winners; and lobster dinner gift certificates for the winners. Prizes will be awarded in a ceremony following the race.

'The emphasis of the race is having a great time. There are many races, but this one's different.'

— RICHARD WALLWORK, RACE COORDINATOR.

The race coincides with the MDC's Back to the Beach day, which features live music and "fun" activities, and Hull Heritage Days, with events taking place throughout the weekend.

"The race provides a good opportunity for people to make a day of being at the beach and participating in all the events," Wallwork said.

The entry fee is $40 per team (plus $5 per person for "Great Nantasket" T-shirts). Race participation, refreshments and a team photo postcard are included in the fee. All proceeds after expenses will be donated to Wellspring, along with the food items.

Wellspring offers many services to residents of local communities, including domestic violence intervention, adult education programs and counseling services, in addition to an emergency food pantry.

Check-in on race day is scheduled from 7 to 8:45 a.m., with the race beginning at 9 a.m. The event will take place rain or shine.

Call Rick Wallwork at 749-2890 for event information or entry forms, which are also available at Atlantic Bagel in Hingham, Hingham Public Library and stores in Hingham Square as well as other local libraries and businesses. Entry forms are also available at Wellspring, 814 Nantasket Ave.

"A race on the beach is a novel idea, and we're hoping people will join the event and make a day of being at the beach and participating in all the events," Wallwork said.

Mark Skala Named Managing Editor

Mark Skala has been appointed managing editor for Community Newspaper Company/South's Mariner Newspapers based in Marshfield.

Skala was formerly the editor of CNC/South's Cape operations. The promotion is part of an overall restructuring of CNC/South's editorial department, said Victoria Ogden, editor-in-chief. In the restructuring, Carol Dumas was named managing editor of the Cape editorial department.

"I'm delighted to be able to promote both Mark and Carol to positions they have earned," Ogden said. "While the company has grown through acquisition, our focus remains relentlessly local. These two talented professionals will help assure that the newspapers we put out stay in touch."

"I'm very pleased to be back working on the South Shore where there are many dynamic communities facing important issues in the coming months and years"

– MARK SKALA, MANAGING EDITOR

Skala began his journalism career as a reporter with Hughes Newspapers on Cape Cod. A former resident of Marshfield and Plymouth, he was also a community editor for the Memorial Press Group where he worked in the towns of Kingston, Halifax, Plympton and Duxbury. After leaving the South Shore, he returned to Cape Cod Community Newspapers where he performed in a variety of editing roles before being named overall editor.

"I'm very pleased to be back working on the South Shore where there are many dynamic communities facing important issues in the coming months and years," Skala said. "We have our work cut out for us at the Mariner covering these issues and I know the staff is up to the challenge."

Skala, a graduate of St. Bonaventure University in Olean, N.Y., and his wife, Damaris, have a 20-month-old son, Daniel.

To contact Skala directly at the Mariner, call (617) 837-4574.

LITTLEST EXPLORERS FIND FUN IN BIG SKY COUNTRY

By Linda Saulnier

GO WEST, young boys and girls, and take your parents with you. Montana, a state known for having more elk, deer and antelope than it does people, is promoting itself as kid friendly. They don't mean the state's famous mountain goats.

Big Sky Country boasts such kid attractions as Glacier and Yellowstone national parks, ghost towns and cowboys. It was also the former stomping ground for Tyrannosaurus Rex. And you thought the grizzly bears would be scary.

You find out where to visit them in "Kid Friendly Montana," a leaflet published by Travel Montana, the state's tourist bureau. Guide book author, Norma Tirrell, wrote the leaflet, which pulls out to a colorfully illustrated poster that speaks directly to kids about the state's amazing attractions and their geography, history and culture.

Tirrell said, "We wanted something that would motivate kids to study Montana for a school report, and then tell their parents, Let's go." In an interview, she mapped out the following itinerary of things to do in Montana if you are a kid.

For young dinosaur hunters, the Museum of the Rockies in Bozeman will prove to be a real find. Its chief paleontologist, Jack Horner, was the prototype for Dr. Alan Grant in the novel and movie, Jurassic Park. The museum is set up so kids can watch paleontologists working with recovered dinosaur bones.

Tirrell said kids will get a more hands-on approach at the Old Trail Museum in Choteau, a town on the Rocky Mountain Front. It was the owners of this very informal museum who led Jack Horner to the dig where he discovered dinosaur eggs. The museum celebrates dinosaur days in July with an open house, expeditions to "egg" mountain and a parade.

"Bozeman puts it all together, but Choteau gets kids and people out in the field," said Tirrell, who recommends visiting both.

Big Sky Country boasts such kid attractions as Glacier and Yellowstone national parks, ghost towns and cowboys. It was also the former stomping ground for Tyrannosaurus Rex. And you thought the grizzly bears would be scary.

Montana has two distinct geographic areas, the western mountains and the eastern plains. Most of the scenic attractions -- Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks, the Continental Divide -- are in the West.

"Glacier National Park is less crowded than Yellowstone," Tirrell said. Spanning the northern Rockies, Glacier Park has 750 miles of hiking trails, including a handicapped-accessible trail. For spectaular views, drive the 52-mile Going-To-The-Sun Road that crosses Montana's mountainous backbone.

Glacier Park has mountain goats, bighorn sheep and glacial sculptures but Yellowstone Park has grizzlies, volcanic smoke chambers and geysers.

Tirrell said some of Yellowstone's workshops are geared to kids so they can learn about the wonderful ecosystem. Yellowstone is the largest, active geothermal area on earth.

There have been warnings about the summer crowds' effect on Yellowstone Park. Montana has less than one million residents but eight million tourists visit the state each year. If guilt plagues you, visit off season -- fall is fabulous, it quiets right down -- or opt to visit one of Montana's 41 state parks, Tirrell said.

A good choice is the Lewis and Clark Caverns where you can picnic, hike, camp and enjoy a two-hour exploration of the limestone stalactites and stalagmites.

To fish, kids can cast a line anywhere in the state, Tirrell said. According to Travel Montana, some of the rivers are lazy, and others have rapids with tell-tale names like "Bone Crusher."

If you have the luxury of time, you can mosey from Glacier Park to Yellowstone Park, visit both dinosaur museums and do several side trips to ghost towns and cattle ranches. Helena is enroute and parents will enjoy the historic architecture and mansions of this gold rush town.

Montana offers fun and adventure for the entire family.

For the kids' itinerary, Helena puts you halfway between the stage coach rides at Bannack and the Deer Lodge cattle country. Both towns will take kids back to the days of the old west. Bannack, a ghost town, was Montana's first territorial capitol. At Deer Lodge, the historic Grant-Kohrs Ranch is a former cattle empire that is now run by the National Park Service where kids will see horse teams, steer roping and working blacksmiths. For adventurous families, outfitters offer wagon train vacations.

To enjoy eastern and western Montana, you will have to plan a two-week vacation not counting travel time to get to Montana, Tirrell said.

On the eastern plains, kids will see real cowboys in action at the Miles City Bucking Horse Sale, the wildest spectator event in Montana. The annual sale is held in May, lasts two days and attracts thousands.

"It is a big, spectacular deal," Tirrell said. "They bring through hundreds of the wildest horses in the country. The cowboys try them before they buy them."

Rodeo cowboys from all over the West come to buy the horses who give them the ride of their lives. Hence, the name, "Bucking Horse Sale." A parade and art show are part of the event. Miles City is Lonesome Dove country, which might interest those who enjoyed the television mini-series.

To see Native Americans in action, visit one of Montana's tribes during a celebration that honors their heritage. Montana has 11 Native American tribes and seven reservations.

The Crow Fair Pow Wow in eastern Montana is a huge celebration, Tirrell said. It draws tribes from all over the country and Canada creating the largest teepee village of any celebration in the West. Held in August, it lasts four days.

The "Kid Friendly" poster does not list events. That information is available through Travel Montana. Interesting facts are on the poster. It notes that a 15-year-old Shoshone Indian girl named Sacajawea helped guide Meriwether Lewis and William Clark on their expedition.

Does that mean the very first guide in Montana was a kid? Maybe Travel Montana is on to something. You can contact them at 1-800-847-4868 or visit their web site at http://travel.mt.gov.

EDUCATIONAL FAMILY OUTINGS: FARMING NEAR BOSTON

By Stephanie Maughan

A family outing to several farms around Boston will not only be fun your children but also a chance for them to learn about agriculture and wildlife.

Massachusetts Audubon Society's 220-acre Drumlin Farm Nature Center and Wildlife Sanctuary, on Route 117 in Lincoln, is a marvelous place for children to learn about respecting wildlife and to get hands-on experience in organic farming and gardening.

Originally bought in 1905 by Donald and Louise Gordon, and run by the Society since 1955, Drumlin Farm attracts 100,000 people a year. It easy to see why this farm and wildlife sanctuary is so popular -- here, children not only see wildlife, but also learn about organic gardening or edible flowers, or milk a cow.

The best time to visit is between 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., when hourly demonstrations are given. Start your visit with a brief tour, either on a wagon ride or by foot.

Heading south from the main entrance is Boyce Field where many of the crops, including pumpkins, peas and onions, are raised. Next to the field, you'll see wildlife areas preserved so that children can learn about the wildlife that live around a farm. There is also a short trail up Drumlin Hill, carved by a glacier 10,000 years ago.

Bird Hill, a short walk east from the main entrance, is home to injured or imprinted birds, including a red shouldered hawk and a gray horned owl, that have come from area rehabilitators and can't survive on their own. Several nocturnal animals, including a two red foxes, live in an area next to it; their burrows are visible in a small underground room.

Just beyond this is an interpretive farm where an array of barnyard animals from pigs to chickens are raised for market. Here, children learn all about running a farm. For instance, they don't just get to see a pony, they find out what's involved in owning one. There's also a small organic garden with herbs and flowers. Teacher/naturalists give garden tours, often serving children tea or edible flowers.

Admission to Drumlin Farm is $6.00 for adults, $4.00 for children ages 3 to 15 and seniors. For more information, call 617-259-9807.

Located off Route 12 in Sterling, an hour west of Boston, is Davis' Farmland, the largest exhibitor of endangered farm animals in the nation. Larry Davis started this operation a year ago with his brother, Doug, and his dad, John, and already it is attracting thousands of people.

Its opening marked the 150th year that the family has farmed the land; his grandparents used to run a dairy farm on it. Now, 200 endangered farm animals, including several rare breeds, live on its 250 acres. A visit to this farm, open from April through October, will be a memorable experience for families with children aged one through 12.

"Pete" the Poitu from France, the oldest breed of donkey in the world, is one of the rarer animals you'll see -- less than 200 are living. Back in Roman times, the Pope rode on them. Poitous were also used when breeding to create the largest draft mule worldwide. The farm's rarest animal, a Wiltshire horn sheep, is one of only 32 left. Davis' goal is for children to have fun learning about these animals.

To do so, he has made this farm look like a giant playground; it's small enough that parents can see their children from any location within it. Goats and sheep roam freely on a labyrinth of short trails that meander around the areas where the animals live. These animals are so tame that you can become intimately acquainted with them, feeding them Farmland's special food, even walking into areas with the smaller ones to do so.

Be sure to take the 15-minute narrated hayride around part of the farm; you'll have a chance to meet and feed "Gus," a Scottish Highland bull, and "Oreo," a Belted Galloway from Great Britain, so named because it looks like an oreo cookie.

To take advantage of all this, the best time to come is between 10:00 - 11:00 a.m. and spend the rest of the day. You can either bring a picnic lunch or buy one at the Herd Rock Cafe.

General admission is $6.50; children under two are free. To encourage families to come several times a week, so that kids can get to know these animals well, Davis has established a membership program with very reasonable rates. According to Davis, it has been popular because the children usually want to come back often to see their favorite animals.

But there's more to this farm than just getting to know and feeding animals. Events such as milking goats or cows and bottle-feeding newborns take place each day. These are supplemented by special events on weekends, including a skydiving exhibition, a rodeo and a demonstration by the Auburn outfit, Reptiles and Beyond. For more information, call the farm at 508-422-6666.

Children will enjoy a variety of activites at Davis' Farmland including feeding a wide variety of animals.

Fourth Graders Find

Picking What's Most Delicious is Delightful

By Kerry Herlihy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Pupils in Joan Cassiani's fourth-grade reading classes were recently faced with the difficult choice of determining the most delicious food. Through written and oral presentations, the students shared with classmates and parents their leading picks for delicious.

Lately, the students completed reading "The Search for Delicious," by Natalie Babbitt. The story takes place in the Middle Ages and revolves around the potential for civil war over a great disagreement about which food, of all the foods in the world, was the most delicious.

"As a culminating activity for this reading selection, individual students, who chose from an array of offerings, created presentations that would best communicate what he and she considered the most delicious food," said Cassiani, reading teacher at Deer Hill.

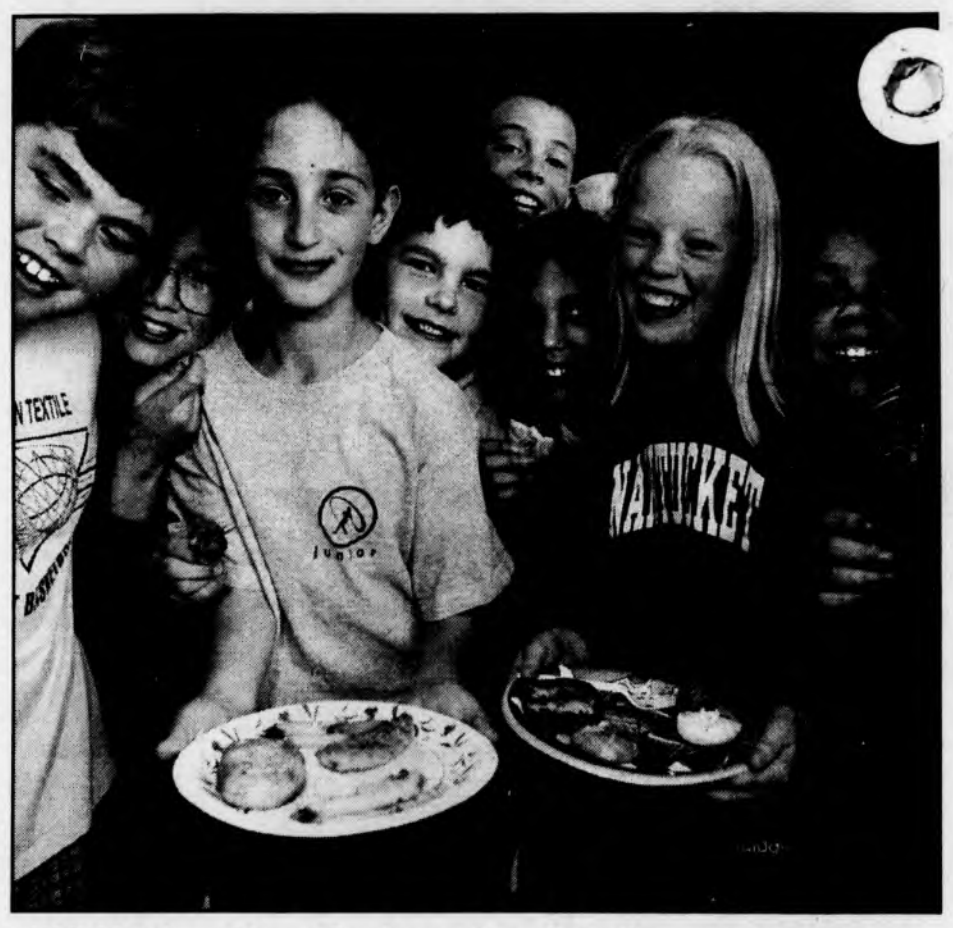
The presentations were in the form of commercials, skits, news flashes, poems, conversations, songs, dances or gymnastics.

"Teachers are urged to enrich literature through activities. This lesson includes the criteria listed in the Massachusetts Curriculum Framework for not only oral presentations but the writing of various genre. It is all connected and covered in one activity," said Ruth Fennessey, elementary curriculum coordinator.

Among the many wonderful presentations, Lauren Rizzotti performed a rap song for the audience praising her mother's pumpkin bread:

Pumpkin bread is very yummy
It feels so good in my tummy
When you eat it you will shout
This is good and that's no doubt
My mom makes it really well
And so it tastes really swell
When you try it and you think it's fine
Just remember it's all mine!

Colin Regan and Joey Durkin led the audience in a verse of:



Mrs. Regan's homemade cookies
They always taste so sweet
Merrily, merrily, merrily, merrily
Chocolate chips are neat.

Joey Rosano expressed his love for pizza by reciting his poem:

Pizza Pizza Pizza
Pizza you see
It's good for you and it's good for me
Roll it, top it, but don't drop it
Look at it, slice it, then enjoy it
Pizza Pizza Pizza
Pizza you see
It's good for you and it's good for me.

In conclusion and accompaniment with the presentations, students prepared their favorite foods with the help of their parents to be shared by all. The food celebration allowed everybody to contribute their favorite choices.

"The 'Search for Delicious' was an enjoyable opportunity for the Deer Hill students to share their accomplishments with their parents. It was a most delightful experience for all," said Cassiani.

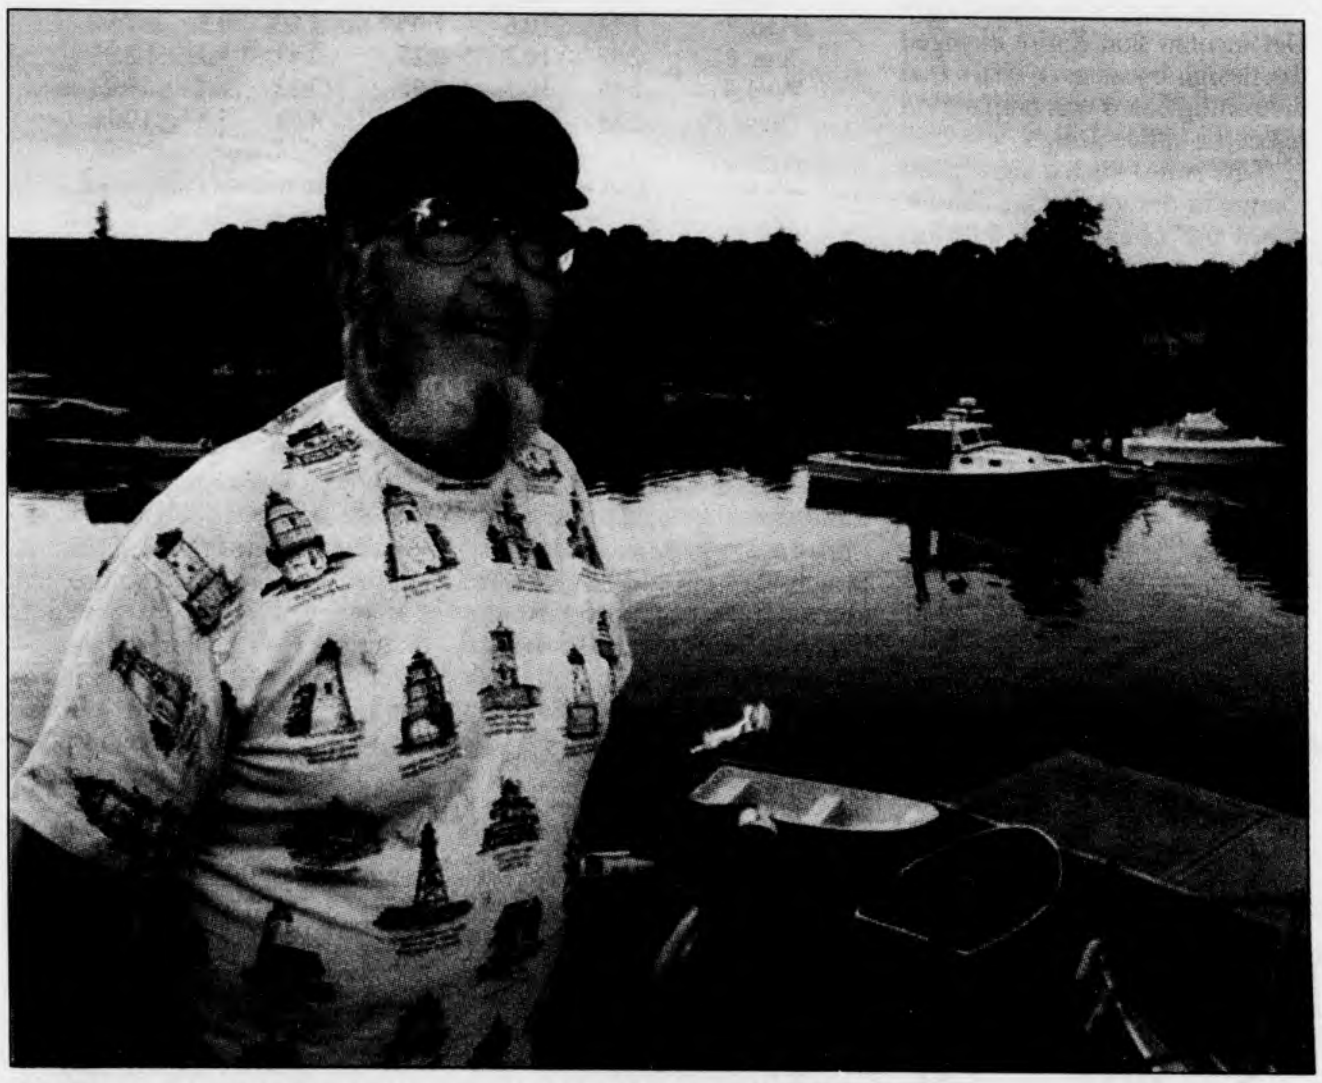
Cooking Class Offered

Tony Ambrose, local resident and talented chef/owner of the famous Ambrosia On Huntington in Boston's Back Bay will be personally cooking for the lucky guest who sign up for the upcoming class "Cooking with Bluefish and Bass" being offered Monday, July 28 at 6:45 p.m., at the South Shore Community Center.

The chef will exhibit and teach his talents and skills in cooking bluefish and bass fresh from the seas to the table.



Chef Ambrose will show students how to select, scale, prepare, and dine on the tastiest of sea delights. Don't miss this opportunity for a great night out, a great meal, and learning from a master.

Lobstermen must claw for their livelihood

By Jennifer R. Horan
STAFF WRITER

While local lobsters shed their shells and grow new ones this month, Cohasset lobstermen are re-examining the century-old fishing tradition that once proved so lucrative for their seaside community.

"I think I have seen the good days of lobstering," said lifelong Cohasset-based lobsterman Herbert Jason, 83.

Cohasset Harbor ranked tenth in the state in 1995 for catching lobsters, landing 570,000 pounds last year. With 39 lobstermen fishing out of the harbor, Cohasset ranked 11th in size of port, out of 40 Massachusetts ports.

"I liked it the way it was before," Jason said.

During the 75 years that Jason has hauled in lobster pots, the crop has never been less plentiful. He attributes the lack of lobsters in recent years to a depletion of resources from over-fishing.

"I used to get six-and-a-half pound lobsters all the time. But I can't remember the last time I caught a big one," Jason said.

Over the years, Jason has seen most lobster boat operations expand from a one-man job to a

Residents frequently complain about the amount of development on Route 3A or the unattractive properties that fill the landscape. But one new structure that is currently under construction should meet with the town's approval — the Sunrise Assisted Living Facility near Stop & Shop.

The 48,000 square-foot building, which sits on four acres of land and is scheduled for completion in the spring of 1998, will resemble a Victorian grand mansion complete with turrets, according to John Noonan, vice president of develop-

Shaw's market set to open Aug. 24

Driver's trying to wend their way through the maze of construction on Route 3A probably find it hard to believe that the mountain of dirt in Cushing Plaza will be a Shaw's supermarket in less than two months. But company officials insist the store is on target for an Aug. 24 grand opening.

Construction workers are racing to complete work on the septic system, parking lot and building that will finish the transformation of Cushing Plaza from a blighted strip mall to a modern shopping area.

Paul Madden, site job supervisor for Tedeschi Construction, said the septic system should be completed by mid-July and construction work finished by mid-August.

"It's been quite a dance to move around all the stores that occupy Cushing Plaza," said Bernie Rogan, a public information spokesman for Shaw's. "But all the tenants are back, and Shaw's will be the last piece of the puzzle."

The pile of dirt that currently occupies the parking lot is an excavation for the new septic system. The old septic system was too close to the water table, resulting in contamination. The new system has been raised several feet above the water table to allow for better filtering.

"The old septic system was a sinkhole waiting to happen," Rogan said. "We've installed pretty extensive new sewage systems under where the parking lot will be."

Our new design

Cohasset Mariner

Dear Readers,

Today is the debut of a new design for your newspaper.

This project has been in the works since the start of the new year and has incorporated suggestions from the close to 200 of you who responded to our in-paper survey. (You can read more about that on today's editorial page.)

We have changed type styles to make headlines and stories more readable, are giving better play to our local photographs, and have created eye-catching column logos to make your weekly favorites easier to find.

Our "South Look" section has been revamped with a color photo spread on the front and an expanded South Shore calendar inside.

"South Look" is also home to two new sections. "South Shore Real Estate" will carry weekly tips on buying and selling along with the "Mortgage Line," which lists the latest loan rates. Our new "Working" section not only gives you what jobs are available but also tips on how to land the one you want.

What hasn't changed in the re-design is our commitment to local news. The new type, bigger pictures, section heads and logos are being used to put even greater emphasis on stories coming out of and affecting your community.

We welcome your feedback on our new look and how we're doing covering the things you care about. Please feel free to contact me, managing editor Mark Skala, or your local editors and reporters.

Thanks for your continued support.

Open house at DPW garage

Plans are to hold an open house at the new DPW garage from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., August 2, Selectman Merle Brown said.

In a related matter, Selectman Diane Sullivan said the Greenbush Mitigation Committee would like the old DPW shed in the town parking lot razed as soon as possible. She explained that the committee and MBTA will do a "walk about" the site to look at improvements to the parking lot. The train will pass through the rear of the lot.

Brown said DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield is seeking bids to tear down the shed.

Flag pole to come down

The 80-foot flag pole which was installed in 1915 will have to come down as soon as possible, selectmen said this week.

Plans were to paint the wooden pole, but the painter refused to climb it after a significant amount dry rot was discovered at its base, Selectman Merle Brown said.

Selectmen said it will cost about $10,000 to replace the existing pole with an aluminum one of the same height. A wooden pole would cost twice as much and it would take six months to get one, Brown said.

Selectmen discussed cutting the pole above the dry rot and keeping the rest but Brown explained that the pole goes into the cement base about seven feet.

"You'd have a lot shorter pole," he said.

Antenna hearing reopened

At its June 25 meeting, the zoning board reopened a hearing on an application by Sprint Spectrum L.P. to erect a 123-foot lattice-type telecommunications antenna near Foreign Auto Repair on Route 3A, just 200-feet back from the road. Sprint changed the proposed antenna design from a lattice-style to a flagpole design.

The land for the proposed antenna is in a light industrial zone with a 45-foot restriction on the height of any structure. The antenna is allowed in a light industrial zone with a special permit for height.

Zoning board Chairman Mark DeGiacomo said Sprint changed the design because of fears that the zoning board was prepared to reject the lattice design.

"This is just such a significant change in design that we felt we could not consider it without public comment," DeGiacomo said.A hearing is scheduled for July 30 at town hall.

Town hall closes early Thursday

Due to the Fourth of July holiday on Friday, Cohasset Town Hall will close at 4:30 p.m. on Thursday, July 3, nstead of 7 p.m.

Nannies to have beach passes

Selectmen said Monday that nannies and baby-sitters for local families will be able to use a special parking pass for Sandy Beach."We should not deprive any child from going to the beach," Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said.

The pass will be valid Monday through Friday and can be obtained at town hall for $7, the same price as a beach sticker.

Selectmen explained because in many families both parents work and take the cars, baby-sitters from out of town cannot park at the beach.

Diane Sullivan was the sole selectman opposed to the beach parking passes. She said families whose relatives visit from out of town should be afforded the same privilege.

Resident can raise house

Carolyn Sammon of 84 Summer St. received good news from the zoning board June 25 when it approved her request to raise her house by 4.5 feet to prevent flooding in a basement apartment. The zoning board granted Sammon a special permit to raise her house from 31-feet-high to 35.5-feet-high on cross beams. Sammon said occasional floodwater from James Brook carries raw sewage from the Elm Street treatment plant into the basement apartment. Sammon said the sewage would still flow under the house, but it would not threaten the health of tenants, and she would have an easier time pumping it out.

The heat is on

Hot summer forecast could mean energy shortage

By Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITER

South Shore communities may be in for an energy shortage this summer. if what many are predicting holds true — we're in for a hot one.

"We're working together to deal with what could be a tight situation," said James Sinclair, manager of public information for the New England Power Pool (NEPOOL), a consortium of New England electric utilities.

"There is nothing particularly unique in any city or state in New England, because everyone is on the same power grid," he said. NEPOOL manages all the electrical utility companies in the area.

The three Millstone Point nuclear power plants in Connecticut and the Maine Yankee nuclear power plant are off-line for safety reasons and may not be back in operation during the months of peak summer electricity use.

The combined loss of those four nuclear power plants represents a 15 percent loss of energy for users in New England.

"We're working closely with electric utilities, including municipal companies," said Sinclair.

Weather expert Robert Skilling of Hingham says the long-range outlook for summer weather is for above-normal temperatures and drier than normal conditions. The South Shore area has already experienced some hotter-than-normal days with temperatures already reaching past 90 degrees.

Once a pattern is established, that particular type of weather tends to continue, he said.

Joseph R. Spadea Jr., manager of Hingham Municipal Light Plant said, "The possibility of a shortage is very likely if we encounter a real heat spell." Hingham Light does not generate electricity.

David Jacobs, spokesperson for Eastern Edison, said customers were notified in their May bills that if the weather became very hot, the electric supply would be tight.

Hingham Light Plant customers received similar notices.

"We've done all the required and recommended maintenance on our generator equipment to make sure nothing breaks and to ensure all of our generating capacity is on-line," Jacobs said. "That includes extra steps and optional maintenance items.

"That's not to say something won't break in spite of our efforts," he cautioned.

Eastern Edison is offering "interruptible" contracts to larger commercial and industrial power users, who are reimbursed when they reduce their use of electricity upon advanced notification.

Residents should stay tuned to local television channels and radio stations to keep up-to-date on forecasts for their area.

While NEPOOL has taken measures to replace lost power by rearranging maintenance plan schedules and "prepping" mothballed nuclear power plants for possible use, a shortage could still occur.

"We're cautiously optimistic — if a typical New England summer, with some heat waves and hot, humid weather, occurs," Sinclair said.

While NEPOOL is working hand-in-hand with New England Utilities to communicate with large users to enlist their aid if there is a need, Sinclair said, "We may still have to call upon the public (in a time of shortage)."

"We've taken steps on both the generation and conservation side to manage the situation, but without the Millstone and Yankee plants on-line, the reserve is tighter than last summer," he said.

The consortium has put in place a comprehensive plan to ensure the region's electric system is prepared for potential shortages and will keep local utilities updated on the status of the electricity supply.

In periods of extremely high demands on the supply and unhealthy air quality conditions, the following steps could be taken:

• South Shore and other New England utilities may be asked to implement a voluntary conservation day to caution customers the day prior to an anticipated power shortage;

• A power caution would involve notification that electric reserves are lower than normal. (Utility personnel would take steps to maintain the integrity and reliability of on-line generation and transmission facilities. No public action is needed in the event of a power caution.)

• A power watch could be issued — customers would be asked to consider turning off unnecessary lights and appliances.

• A power warning would be issued when an immediate reduction of electricity demand is needed to avoid overloading the electrical system.

However, conditions requiring emergency action could occur without warning. In that case, advance notification to consumers cannot be guaranteed.

During a severe generating shortage, NEPOOL can request utilities to disconnect customer load on a rotating basis for short periods of time.

However, that action would be unlikely, according to NEPOOL.

While he doesn't want to cause undue alarm among Hingham residents, Spadea is cautioning them to be prepared — just in case.

Costs in Hingham may jump if a shortage occurs, but Hingham Light Commissioner Kenneth Cham said contracts already in place could be beneficial when it comes to keeping the rates from escalating too much.

Jacobs said Scituate and Cohasset are "in the same boat as the entire region as far as the possibility of an electrical shortage is concerned."

There is not sufficient regional generation of electricity to meet customer demand, which increases in the morning, peaking at about 11 a.m. Demand tapers off in the afternoon but increases again around dinnertime.

Spadea said 2 a.m. marks the period of minimum demand.

"If we have a hot spell for several days in a row we might encounter problems," Spadea said.

"What frequently happens is that by the third day, air conditioners which have been kept running, combined with the normal demands on electricity, are too much for the system," he said.

While Hingham has a diverse group of energy suppliers and might not suffer a considerable loss of energy, Spadea said the town will be impacted if the region runs short.

"The pool of users will be called upon to reduce the electrical load on the system," he said. "They will be asked to shut down voluntarily first."

Spadea said the worst case scenario would be if circuits were required to be shut off in the region.

This would occur if a shortage was severe enough to cause a circuit overload. Otherwise, a blackout such as the one which occurred in the area in 1963 could happen again.

"We're prepared and have plans in place to help prevent these kinds of things from happening," said Spadea.

Jacobs said Eastern Edison is also prepared for an emergency.

Nevertheless, a shortage might still occur.

While such planning is routine, it has been stepped up on an earlier time frame this year in anticipation of a possible energy shortage this summer.

Jacobs said another option Eastern Edison might consider is asking customers to voluntarily cut back on their use of electricity during peak hours if a prolonged heat spell occurs.

Conservation Tips

When the area is experiencing a hot spell of weather, Hingham Light Plant and Eastern Edison, which serves Cohasset and Scituate, offer the following suggestions to help prevent power outages:

•An air conditioner works easier if lights and other appliances which generate heat are shut off; be sure to purchase the right-sized air conditioner for the job and the most energy-efficient unit available;

•Adjust air conditioner thermostats to a higher temperature (a 15-degree temperature difference between outdoors and indoors is enough); clean or replace air conditioner filters monthly

•Use "natural" air conditioning — set up a cross-breeze in your home by opening windows on opposite walls;

•Set timers on electric water heaters and swimming pool pump motors to run during evening and overnight hours, when less electricity is being used overall;

•Use fans if possible — they use less energy than air conditioners;

•Leave shades on the sunny side of a house drawn to help keep out the heat;

•Try to reserve cooking for the evening only, and use the daytime hours to warm-up food which has already been cooked;

•Run dishwashers and clothes washers and dryers during the early morning and evening or use an outdoor clothesline (It takes the same amount of energy to run a full load as it does a partial one);

•Cook on an outdoor grille or use a microwave oven and small appliances rather than ovens and countertop burners;

•Clean the coils on the back of refrigerators and freezers;

•Consider the purchase and proper installation of an emergency generator; and

•If heated electrically, try not to use a large amount of water during the daytime; and

Eastern Edison also suggests individuals check in regularly on elderly family members, neighbors and friends who may be susceptible to heat stress.

Light plant manager Joseph R. Spadea Jr. said anyone with an emergency need during an outage should call the fire department, which is equipped to provide emergency generation.

Residents should also be equipped with emergency lighting, such as flashlights and candles.

"Those who have well water should store up water for drinking," Spadea said.

"They should remember not to put it in the refrigerator, however, because refrigerator doors should be left closed if a power outage occurs," he said.

If there is a loss of electricity, remember that:

•Circuit breakers should be turned off or fuses removed at the electrical panel to lessen the chance of a circuit overload when service is restored;

•When using a portable generator, keep the machine in an open area, because the engine emits carbon monoxide. Follow instructions before connecting the generator;

•Following an outage, leave an outside light turned on as an indication to repair crews that power has been restored to your block.

two- and three-man job — which boosts the boats' output of traps. Captain of the Blue Heather in Cohasset Harbor, his third boat, Jason and his grandson, John Small, are among the only lobstermen who fish alone.

The number of pots on the ocean floor has skyrocketed and the waterways have grown more crowded, especially on the weekends, due to the increase in lobstermen in business, he said.

Also, lobstermen don't have to follow the same rules against catching female lobsters before they have a chance to breed, said Small, also of Cohasset.

And dragging for lobsters — a practice in which fishermen drag large nets along the ocean floor — has taken its toll on the lobster harvest, they said.

The result has been a much shorter and less fruitful spring lobstering season and overall harvest, said Bill Adler, executive director of the Scituate-based Massachusetts Lobstermen's Association.

"Lately, there's been very little spring fishing," he said. "Up and down the whole coast, lobstermen haven't had a spectacular spring. It puts everyone in the doldrums."

Nowadays, lobstermen have to wait until the months of August through November to make any money in the industry.

"The last few years, spring has been a disaster for lobstering. You might as well stay home," Jason said. "They're not there. They've already been caught up."

Small, a police officer, has taken the summer off from lobstering due to the slow season.

"I figured it was the right year to take a break," he said.

Throughout the month of June, lobsters take up residence in the crevices of the ocean floor during their shedding phase. They hide away until their shells are hard enough to protect them from predators.

With lobsters absent from the marine scene, lobstermen have nothing to catch for about a month.

"There's no sense in hauling traps right now. There's nothing there," Adler said.

The harvest used to pick up in July and be roaring by August. But during the last decade, shedding season has been lasting longer and pushing the whole lobstering cycle back into November. As winter and cold weather approach, lobsters stay put and are more difficult to catch.

"Ten years ago at the fourth of July, lobsters came out like a blast. Then they started to trickle out," Adler said. "Last year, they didn't come out until the end of July."

Local lobstermen have tried to get a head start in the spring to make up for the months of February and March, when the herds of crustaceans are at a stand-still. But this year the going was rough.

> 'It used to be that May was a good month. You could make enough money to cover the debts you incurred during the winter months. But now you have to wait. You have four months to make it.'
> — LOBSTERMAN, HERBERT JASON.

"It used to be that May was a good month," said Jason. "You could make enough money to cover the debts you incurred during the winter months. But now you have to wait. You have four months to make it."

"If nothing's brewing by September, it's going to be panic time," Adler said.

In addition to a shortage of lobsters, another obstacle standing in Cohasset lobstermen's way is a harbor that has not been completely dredged in four years, said Harbormaster John Winters. The dredging project is on hold until the town can get aid from the federal government, he said.

"It hinders fishermen from coming and going," said Winters, a lobsterman for 15 years before he became harbormaster two years ago.

"This year hasn't been good at all for lobstering, and it's half over. They're not going to make up a whole year in six months," he said.

But looking back over the years, Jason said working in the lobster industry — as his grandfather and uncles did — has been well worth it.

"I could have perhaps made more money doing something else, but there's just something about the sea," he said.

Godzik said he is satisfied with the way the work is proceeding.

"It looks like the great, sandy desert right now," Godzik said. "But in reality it won't be much different from the one at Stop & Shop. The reason it looks so much bigger is because they had to raise the topography to get away from the water table."

Godzik said Shaw's is actually installing three septic systems that will operate on a daily rotation. Each system can handle about 4,000 gallons of water per day. Godzik said an average four-bedroom home would need a system that could handle about 440 gallons per day.

"They use water in all of their operations, so they need a big system," Godzik said.

Godzik said Shaw's is also installing a Bio-Clear Treatment System to pre-filter the water before it enters the septic system.

"There's no reason this system shouldn't last forever if they use it properly — especially with the treatment system," Godzik said.

Once the septic system is completed and inspected, workers will cover it with asphalt for the store's parking lot.

Rogan said Shaw's has also designed the parking lot so that storm water runoff will not roar across the street in a torrent of water.

Rogan said the approximately 45,000-square-foot store will be the 121st location in the Shaw's chain. The building cost between $8 and $9 million to construct, not including land acquisition and the septic system.

Rogan said the store will be completely computerized, with special software that tracks buying trends for each location so Shaw's can keep the appropriate products in stock. He said even the bakery tracks customer habits to bake the correct number of loaves of bread each day.

"If you come in every Tuesday and purchase tomato-basil bread, the computer will instruct the bakers to prepare a fresh loaf for that day," Rogan said.

Shaw's will hire 210 people to work in the store, 60 full-time workers and 150 part-time.

The BayBank building in Cushing Plaza off Route 3A was demolished recently to make way for the new Shaw's Plaza.

All Paws joins internet

All Paws Rescue, a not-for-profit humane society serving Southeastern New England and headquartered in Hingham, joined the internet as of July 1.

The website will feature veterinarian-approved, family-friendly dogs and puppies, cats and kittens, ready for adoption, pet care tips, humane education information, and announcements of upcoming All Paws Rescue events.

Website design and hosting were donated by graphic design specialist Joe Stieglitz of XpressNet, a full-service provider of internet solutions, based in Weymouth that can be reached on the web at www.xpres.net:http://xpres/allpawsrescue.

Year round swimming pool draws community interest

Strong community interest in exploring the feasibility of establishing a year round swim pool has materialized into a group that has named itself: "Friends of the Cohasset Swim Center."

The "Friends" are working closely with Trustees of the Hugh Bancroft Charitable Trust Swim Center to update a study done during the late 1980's. The most likely alternative appears to be enclosure of the existing pool that resides on four acres of land between North Main and Sohier Street.

It will require at least three months to do a preliminary assessment and the "Friends" will only proceed if they have the approval of the Trustees, and the strong support of neighbors, Town residents and appropriate boards and committees. If a plan were to be approved by the Trustees, in all likelihood, there would be a public hearing(s) and probably a request for a "green light" at the Spring 98 Town Meeting.

The "Friends" will not incorporate, but would assist in whatever manner possible to include fund raising. Proceeds would go directly to the existing Trust. It is clear that issues include: a.making a proposal that is acceptable to neighbors and supported by the community, b.determining whether sufficient funds can be raised by grants and donations, and c.providing for a long-range business plan that would assure affordable fee structures while covering operating and maintenance costs.

Already, many creative suggestions have been made such as using less expensive well water to supply the pool. Also being considered is the possibility of leasing the pool back to the Town's Recreation Commission, for $1/year, to operate on a break-even budget. Enclosure costs would be significant and approaches such as a three year pledge system and challenge grants are likely. Whatever plan the "Friends" adopt will be presented to the Trustees for approval.

Current NSGA Sports Participation Data reveals that swimming and exercise walking are the most popular recreational activities that Americans enjoy. Severe local area winters suggest that a year round swimming facility would promote physical fitness for all ages: our youth, adults to include the elderly, the disabled and those in need of physical therapy. Additionally, the "Friends'" are motivated by a desire to give our youth constructive outlets for their leisure time and the opportunity for all to improve their cardio-vascular well being.

A meeting scheduled for July 12 has been postponed. Questions and ideas are welcome and should be referred to Joe McElroy, Ph: 383-0505, Fax: 383-9762, or E-mail CohJoe@aol.com.

Assisted living

ment for the Sunrise Assisted Living Corp.

"The building will look like an old, well-kept mansion on a hill," Noonan said. "This should fit right in with Cohasset."

Sunrise is a publicly-traded company based in Fairfax, Virginia that operates 47 assisted living communities in 11 states serving more than 9,000 residents. Sunrise plans to expand to 55 communities by Jan. of 1998.

Assisted living facilities provide an alternative to nursing homes for elderly people.

"We offer residents a beautiful facility with skilled professionals to assist them with every day activities like bathing, dressing, grooming, eating, medication, monitoring, scheduling and transportation," said Michael Clendenine, corporate communications director for Sunrise.

Noonan said the average age of Sunrise's residents is 83.

Nurses are available to distribute medicine. A shuttle service is available for residents who don't drive. There are community rooms, function rooms, a library and group activities.

Clendenine said many elderly people need help with every day chores, but are too independent for a nursing home. Assisted living facilities are able to cater their service to each person's individual needs.

> 'The building will look like an old, well-kept mansion on a hill. This should fit right in with Cohasset.'
> JOHN NOONAN
> SUNRISE ASSISTED LIVING CORP.

Sunrise is devoted to providing its patrons with as much independence as they need through comprehensive services and architectural planning.

"People usually follow a set pattern in life where they rent an apartment, then buy a condo, then a townhouse, a single-family house and finally a larger house," Clendenine said. "We try to create a grand manor — a mansion — which should be the nicest home these people ever lived in."

The interior of the buildings have grand staircases, a beautiful foyer, fabric furniture, carpeting, and short, narrow hallways. Clendenine said the company strives to make sure the facility is gorgeous inside and as far from a nursing home atmosphere as possible.

The grand staircase serves a dual function: it beautifies the interior of the mansion and lets residents feel independent.

"The staircase lets our residents enjoy the dignity of risk," Clendenine said. "They can choose to use the stairs with as much or as little help as they desire. We encourage independence rather than saying they're not allowed to do something."

But this luxury is not without its cost. Rents begin at about $1,800 per month and, depending on the level of services used by a guest, can top $3,600 per month.

Clendenine said Americans are becoming more affluent through investments and mutual funds, making assisted living an affordable option.

"More and more people are saving money for their retirement," Clendenine said. "Many older people can manage on their own, but find it more attractive to get rid of their big house and have easy access to the services we offer. They use a combination of savings and assets to live in a beautiful home."

Local developer Wayne Sawchuk served as a broker Sunrise. He said the assisted living facility will be a great addition to the town, and points the way for the type of development that will beautify 3A.

"We are constantly talking about Route 3A as if it was a blighted landscape," Sawchuk said. "This will be the most beautiful building on 3A."

New Hingham commuter boat service has rocky start

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

As he stood on the Hingham commuter dock Tuesday morning Brian Pedro of the MBTA was confident the brouhaha over the change in provider for the Hingham-Boston commuter boat service would soon subside.

It appeared to be business as usual for the hundreds of Boston commuters, who have been at the center of a firestorm of controversy over loss of their long-time carrier, Boston Harbor Commuter Services.

The 8 a.m. boat owned by Harbor Cruises, the new provider, was running about five minutes late — but that didn't faze commuters waiting on the dock at Hewitt's Cove in brilliant sunshine.

Not even newspaper reporters, state officials, and television cameras on hand to keep an eye on the morning commute caused grumbling among the hundreds heading down the gangway.

But at 6 p.m. that night at Rowes Wharf in Boston, it was quite a different scene. After a long day at work, the patience of about 150 tired commuters grew short as they waited 20 minutes for their shuttle, according to Melissa Boynton of Scituate.

"They were extremely frustrated," said Boynton who described the situation as "being two boats behind in capacity and times."

The shuttle lost another 10 minutes on the ride to Hingham.

"I'm not too happy," said Linda Dickason of Hingham. She said it's one thing to be late going home but in the morning it would be totally unacceptable.

"One half hour is really late to work," she said.

Earlier this month, the MBTA awarded Harbor Cruises the contract to provide commuter boat service from Hingham Shipyard to Boston's Rowes Wharf.

Alleging the bid process was unfair, Dana Goodell, owner of Boston Harbor Commuter Service, which provided the service for 13 years, is suing the MBTA and Harbor Cruises.

The controversy over Hingham commuter boats brought Channel 7 to the dock Monday morning. Here a cameraman films commuters as the boat pulls away

State Sen. Robert Hedlund says his office has been inundated with calls from concerned boat commuters over the change in provider for the popular service. Here, Hedlund gets on the Hingham commuter boat Monday morning.

Monday, a Suffolk Superior Court Judge denied Goodell's request for a temporary injunction to maintain the status quo until a trial on the merits of the case could be held.

That set the stage for Harbor Cruises, the new provider, to take over July 1.

Jim O'Leary of Alternative Concepts, which owns Harbor Cruises along with Modern Continental Construction and Nolan Associates, was on hand at the commuter dock.

O'Leary, who conceded there were some glitches that needed to be worked out, said the boats were full.

He said the lawsuit is "unfortunate" and maintains the process was fair.

"We went through the public bid process and were the lowest qualified bidder," O'Leary said. "We are determined to run a good service at a significant savings to the taxpayers."

Goodell's attorney, Kevin Moloney of the Boston law firm Barron & Stadfeld, P.C., said the lawsuit will go forward.

"We intend to prosecute," he said.

Goodell contends Harbor Cruises did not submit a reasonable bid because it did not satisfy the minimum vessel requirements set forth in the first phase of the bidding process. The lawsuit alleges that several of Harbor Cruises' boats don't meet the speed and capacity requirements. Harbor Cruises' bid was about 50 percent less than that of Boston Harbor Commuter Service.

The controversy surrounding the switch in providers, which included a letter with concerns to the MBTA, signed by about 700 riders, didn't deter commuters Tuesday who decided to give the new service a shot.

Martha Reardon of Hingham arrived at Hewitt's Cove at 8 a.m. Tuesday after making the round-trip to Boston and back to check out the new provider.

She enjoyed the trip and the amenities.

"The free coffee got good points this morning," she said.

But for Brian Hoar, a captain with Goodell's company, Tuesday was a sad day as he watched the boats come and go.

Unlike about 16 who were laid off Monday night, Hoar said he still has a job.

"You might say I'm on a light vacation," he said, noting his hours have been cut back.

Hoar conceded that Harbor Cruises was having a good morning, but said it will have to prove itself over time.

"There are a lot of things going for them as far as weather," he said. Hoar pointed to one boat packed with commuters on the top deck which he said didn't have space to accommodate them inside on rainy days.

That was corroborated by Boynton of Scituate. She said while her shuttle going home was fairly comfortable she was concerned about its capacity to protect commuters in foul weather.

Marilyn Regolino of Hull, said the company providing commuter service is not the issue.

"I don't get involved," she said. "I just want to get to work on time."

The MBTA's Pedro said he's confident everyone will be happy.

"Once commuters are on the boats for a couple of days, this will be distant memory and everyone will be happy again," Pedro said.

Commuter boat battle begins

Starting Monday boat commuters will have more choices in how they get from Hingham Shipyard to Rowes Wharf in Boston.

Bill Spence, owner of Massachusetts Bay Lines, said yesterday he is expanding the private ferry service by launching The Hingham Commuterboat.

The expansion is made possible by the addition of the crew and vessels of Boston Harbor Commuter Services, which, earlier this month, lost its contract with the MBTA for the Hingham-Boston run.

The new service will use two boats owned by BHCS and employ two crews, about eight people.

Spence's Mass. Bay Lines has been running two shuttles a day.

The expanded service will offer six shuttles about every half hour from 6 to 8:30 a.m. from Hingham and six from 4-6:40 p.m. for the return trip directly competing with Harbor Cruises, the new provider. Harbor Cruises operates about 20 round-trips a day.

In fact, commuters will walk down the same gangway and be able to take the boat either to the right or to the left.

"It'll be a real people's choice," said BHCS owner Dana Goodell.

Goodell said the agreement with Spence will allow him to keep his hand in the water, so to speak, until his lawsuit with the MBTA is resolved.

Alleging the bidding process was unfair, Goodell is suing the MBTA and Harbor Cruises, the new provider, which took over the subsidized shuttle service July 1.

MBTA spokesman Brian Pedro said it will be interesting to see how the new expanded service is able to make a profit.

BHCS was heavily subsidized by the MBTA, he said.

Harbor Cruises bid $5 million for the five-year MBTA contract, about half of what BHCS bid, which will save taxpayers about $1 million a year, Pedro explained.

"We have complete confidence in Harbor Cruises," Pedro said. He apologized to commuters who were inconvenienced this week when their boats were late. He said it was too soon to judge the new carrier.

"The test of time will determine how they do," he said.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who took the boat this week, said Harbor Cruises has some performance problems which need to be addressed by the MBTA soon. The trip home Monday night took 50 minutes when it should only take 35, he said.

Hedlund said his office continues to be "bombarded" by calls from concerned commuters.

Chiropractic for HEALTH
by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor
IMPORTANT FACETS OF THE SPINE
The wear-and-tear process associated with osteoarthritis involves degenerative changes in the discs and displacement between vertebrae, resulting in a loss of motion in the gliding joints of the spine. Found in pairs along the entire length of the spine, these "facet" joints allow for its movement and flexibility. As the discs undergo degenerative changes and the function of the facet joints becomes altered due to osteoarthritis, the spine becomes less flexible and more vulnerable to injury. Chiropractic addresses these effects with specific adjustments of the spine intended to unlock the facet joints. The goal is to improve spinal mobility, relieve the accompanying contractions of muscles, ligaments, and tendons and remove any irritation of the nerve that might cause pain.
At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we are trained to restore the health of your spine and joints. Special chiropractic methods, called adjustments, can help reduce swelling and irritation, relieve pain, and slow degeneration. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor, where we work to restore your health and guide you in a personalized approach to overall wellness. Please call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. Let us help you live life without pain.
P.S. When the facet joints endure repeated trauma from excessive athletic activity, the commonly experienced result is low back pain and/or leg pain.

Tank site is back on the table

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

The water commissioners have withdrawn their application to the zoning board to construct a new 2 million gallon water tank on Bear Hill while they explore an alternate site on Scituate Hill. After several meetings between the two boards, it appeared as if the zoning board would deny a height variance to allow the tank to be constructed.

The zoning board approved the withdrawal so the water commissioners could explore the Scituate Hill site. If the zoning board had rejected the withdrawal and denied the height variance, the water commissioners would not have been able to resubmit their plan for two years.

"The water commissioners are attempting to investigate the Scituate Hill site further," said zoning board Chairman Mark DeGiacomo. "My guess is they may find that the Scituate Hill site is more expensive than they thought."

The water commissioners want to construct a 2 million gallon water tank on Bear Hill next to the town's only other tank. Town meeting approved the plan and appropriated $1.4 million to construct the new tank.

The commissioner's are seeking to build a 70.5-foot-high tank. The zoning for Bear Hill only permits a 35-foot-high structure without a variance.

The water commissioners say the tank is needed to improve fire fighting reserves and to allow workers to clean the older tank. Water commissioners favor the Bear Hill site because the town owns the land.

Residents, who live in the shadow of Bear Hill, have complained that a second tank will lower their property values and ruin the neighborhood's aesthetics. Opponents of the Bear Hill proposal have also argued that placing a second tank on Scituate Hill would still improve fire reserves and allow workers to clean the older tank.

But the water commissioners have argued that acquiring the land on Scituate Hill would require an eminent domain taking of about 1.5 acres. Water commission Chairman Rob Kasameyer said in a letter to the zoning board that taking land on Scituate Hill would add at least $135,000 to the price tag.

Kasameyer said the taking would add at least one year to the project, and the land owner could sue the town if he was dissatisfied with the purchase price.

Wayne Sawchuk has been a strong advocate for the Scituate Hill location, which is part of a 62-acre parcel owned by Webb Norfolk Conveyor, off of Route 3A.

"Putting the tank on Bear Hill is an issue of ease," Sawchuk said. "I'm primarily an advocate for what I believe is the right spot— not the most convenient one."

Sawchuk said there are many ways to offset the higher price estimates for Scituate Hill. Sawchuk said the town could allow the company at the old Norfolk Webb site to connect to the water tank's main at no cost in exchange for the land or a fair price on the land.

He said the town could also build a steel tank instead of a more expensive concrete structure. Sawchuk said the concrete tank was $300,000 more expensive than a steel tank.

Water commissioners say concrete tanks require less maintenance, but Sawchuk countered that concrete tanks still needed some routine maintenance and cleaning.

Town Counsel Michael DeRensis has drafted an opinion stating that he believes town meeting approved the Bear Hill location. DeRensis said that the article at town meeting approved the tank based on Tutela Engineering's recommendation that Bear Hill offered the best combination of cost-effectiveness and convenience.

Sawchuk said the water commissioners could resubmit a Scituate Hill recommendation at the fall town meeting.

If the Scituate Hill site proves to be too expensive, the water commissioners can resubmit their Bear Hill proposal to the zoning board.

DeGiacomo said even if the Scituate Hill site proves to be more expensive than current estimates, there is no guarantee the zoning board will approve the Bear Hill location.

DeGiacomo added that proponents should submit their best proposal in the future at the outset because the zoning board will not be so generous with requests for withdrawal.

"It's not fair to have to go through hours and hours of hearings and then have the applicant withdraw," DeGiacomo said. "We will terminate that practice in the future. We want to see a serious effort by the applicant from the very beginning."

McCann is acting town manager

Finalists on cable Monday

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Although a majority of selectmen came reluctantly to the table for the switch to a town manager — they were in good humor Monday when they learned the position had become law.

The governor signed the special act on Monday. Tuesday, interim town administrator Ed McCann was sworn in as the town's first town manager. He will serve as acting town manager until selectmen fill the position.

"On a par with Hong Kong, at midnight tonight there will be a change in government," McCann said at Monday's meeting. "But I can assure you there will be no communism or dictatorship in the town of Cohasset."

The town manager, approved at the annual town meeting over the objections of a majority of selectmen and the advisory committee, will have the authority to hire and fire and run the day-to-day activities of the town.

This week, selectmen interviewed Donald Young of Beverly and Mark Haddad of Littleton, two finalists for the post, for the second time. Those candidates and possibly two more will be back Monday for a final interview before the cameras which were off during this week's special meeting.

Young, a former town manager in Derry, New Hampshire, served as Beverly's finance director for 11 years. Haddad has served as Littleton's town administrator for nine years.

Selectmen said about 40 applied for the position. They narrowed the field to 11 semi-finalists whom they interviewed in closed session, as allowed under the Open Meeting Law.

Monday they initially said they would go into executive session to interview Haddad and Young. They changed their mind when the three reporters present threatened to file a complaint with the District Attorney's office because the board would be in violation of the Open Meeting Law. Executive sessions are not allowed to consider and interview applicants who have passed a prior preliminary screening.

Selectmen said they plan to make a decision on who should fill the post Monday. The salary is negotiable but will be in the $60,000 range, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said.

Class of 1978 plans high school reunion

Had a nice chat with Steve Sinopoli recently, he is one busy person! He is planning his class reunion for next year (Class Of 1978). He is trying to get an idea of who would be interested in attending the event, so that they can choose a facility to accommodate that number. Steve has reached more than 75 percent of the total from his class in just a few months of calling (and balancing two rambunctious kids at the same time!). People can call Steve at (617) 3311-9664, or write him at 570 Commercial St., East Weymouth, 02189. His e-mail address is SSinop4082 @aol.com. Steve sent a list of the people that he has been unable to find, lets all try to help him out. Robert Blossom, Renee Burrows, Peter Carmody, Pamina Caruso, Lucinda Clarke, Richard Coleta, Deborah Davis, Deidre Fahy, Julie Fessler, Margaret Fox, Catherine Gonsalves, Philip Jackman, Bruce James, Bruce Killion, Kristin Linsley, Sandra MacDonald, Eileen McDonald, David McLeod, Richard Morse, Maura O'Rourke, Michelle Powers, Michael Quinlan, Lori Reynolds, Miguel Rodriquez, Renee Ryan, Mary Settino, Kristen Sharp, Dana Silvia, Catherine Sizoo, Cynthia Stover, Lillian Thompson, Kristine Westerhoff.

Steve also had a story to relate, he and a couple of his Northeastern buddies went to Southern California to see games at San Diego, L.A. and Anaheim. This is their fifth year doing it — they have been to New York's Shea Stadium (obnoxious people, they say), Baltimore (best stadium they have seen so far), Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh (three boring concrete bowls), two stadiums in Cleveland (beautiful Jacobs Field and the dumpy Municipal Stadium), Detroit (classic oldie), Milwaukee (great tailgates, great beer and great brautwurst), Wrigley Field in Chicago (nice, but not Fenway), Minnesota (their mall was nicer than their domed stadium), and the Sky Dome in Toronto (space age facility). Their side trips have included many sports pubs, the Hockey Hall of Fame, Niagara Falls, and others, but the best side trip was playing baseball at the Field of Dreams in Dyersville, Iowa. Steve says that is a must for baseball fans! On the California trip they hit the beaches, went to Tijuana Mexico for a quick margarita, and visiting Hollywood and some of the attractions that are there.

COLLEGE HONORS

We received news from Skidmore College, and it is great news indeed! Kathryn Ross, daughter of James and Susan Ross of Cohasset, and member of the class of 2000 at Skidmore College, earned highest honors during the spring semester! Congratulations to you!

Sarah Kirk, daughter of Jim and Rita Kirk, also did her best to make us all proud of her, she made the Dean's List at the University of Vermont for the Spring Semester Sarah will be going into her junior year next fall, and is now working as a Research Assistant for one of her professors! Isn't that just the best!!

Hats off to Mike Kasameyer who achieved Dean's List status at Tufts University — Mike is a freshman, majoring in mechanical engineering! Isn't it always so great to see hard work pay off!!

NEWS FROM HOLDERNESS

At Holderness School's Commencement this year, Cornelia "Neely" Wakeman was awarded the M.J. Lafoley Award. This award is given to a boy or girl in the third or fourth form who, in the opinion of the Headmaster and Faculty, exemplifies outstanding character and integrity and who puts forth exceptional effort and spirit in all aspects of Holderness life. Congratulations Neely!! Neely is the daughter of Sam and Linda Wakeman and Granddaughter of Frances Wakeman, a tri-varsity athlete at Holderness, has just completed her sophomore year.

60-YEAR CLASS REUNION

The Class of 1937 held its reunion last week, and it was a lovely one indeed! Eleven of their original class members were there.

They also had several other people from surrounding classes, 25 in all were present. We read notes from others that were not able to attend, including their second grade teacher, Elinor Kennedy. She was suppose to attend, but came down with a bad bug, so they read her poem that she wrote, and thought pleasant thoughts and had happy memories about her — the highlight of the day was having Gerard Keating attend, he left from the rehab hospital to be there!

All reports are that he was looking better than ever, and he was the master of Ceremonies (as always) — he opened the program, and read some of the correspondence that was received. As you may remember, the reunion was held at Kimballs-By-The-Sea — the food was said to be outstanding, but the best part for the attendees was being able to be with their classmates and friends of so many years!

Weddings & Engagements

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy W. Whitney

Hartshorne/Whitney

Ellen Fritz Hartshorne, the daughter of John and Mary Hartshorne of Cohasset, was married Saturday, June 14 to Timothy William Whitney, son of Robert and Evelyn Whitney of Sugar Hill, N.H. The wedding was performed in Cohasset's First Parish (Unitarian-Universalist) Church. The Rev. Jenny Rankin, interim minister, officiated.

Mrs. Whitney, 35, is a senior designer with the Boston office of Fitch, Inc., a communications design firm. She is a graduate of Smith College and Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, Calif.

Mr. Whitney, 44, is senior architect with Sasaki Associates, Inc., architectural design firm of Watertown. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College and Harvard University Graduate School of Design.

The bride attended elementary and high schools in Bronxville, N.Y., where her family lived for 22 years before moving to Cohasset in 1989. Her father, now retired, was the executive director of the Institute of Management Consultants in New York City.

The bridegroom prepared for college at Middlesex School in Concord. His father is founder and president of Whitney's, Inc., a construction company in Franconia, N.H.

The couple will make their home in Watertown.

Spignesi/Roy

A reception at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy followed the September 28 wedding of Pamela J. Spignesi and James A. Roy. The Mass was celebrated by The Rev. Charles Sheehy at St. Francis of Assisi Church in Braintree.

The bride, daughter of James and Jeanne Young of Braintree, graduated from Archbishop Williams High School and the University of New Hampshire, where she earned a bachelor of arts degree in political science. She is employed as a business manager with Enterprise Car Sales.

The bridegroom, son of John and Dolores Roy of Cohasset, graduated from Cohasset High School and the University of Maine, where he earned a bachelor of science degree in business administration. He is a sales representative for Venture Distributing.

Matron of honor was Amy Tripp of Millis, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Barbara Ehret of Cambridge, Marguerite Kutz of Pittsburg, Penn., Amy McDonald of South Boston and Tracy Olson of Boston. Elizabeth Roy of Scituate served as flower girl.

Daniel Camardo of Lake Mary, Fla. was best man. Ushers were Michael Gentile of Savannah, Ga., John Hall of Weymouth, John Roy of New York, N.Y., William Roy of Scituate and Scott Tripp of Millis.

After honeymooning in Greece, the couple is living in Weymouth.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Local news focus in paper's new look

Your newspaper today has taken on a new look. We have redesigned its sections, added fresh logos overtop time-tested local columns, given better display space to our award-winning photography, and even changed the lettering in our headlines — it's "Times," for you typography aficionados.

It takes a lot of teamwork to get a project like this off the ground, and we at the Mariner hope you like what we've created. A newspaper, however, is always a work in progress, and our mission is to constantly improve our news coverage and presentation based on your feedback and suggestions.

Your comments — several hundred of you filled out our coupon asking what you liked and wanted more in the Mariner as we planned this redesign — helped get us where we are today.

The thoughtful notes you wrote were both enlightening and encouraging, articulating the role we play in your community.

Some of you were short and to the point. "We very much like the emphasis on our town!" one Scituate reader wrote.

The message — don't change the local flavor. We won't.

"Explore issues like unified school districts for South Shore towns i.e. Concord-Carlisle, Lincoln-Sudbury, Acton-Boxborough etc. are all successful at it? Why not here? Ever consider a 'Mariner' web-site on the net? Very nice paper — good job," wrote a Norwell reader.

Good idea on the school district story and yes, a Mariner web-site is in the cards. We'll keep you posted.

"Having grown up in Holbrook for 40 years, I have witnessed many interesting people and interesting sites. How about a page or half-page titled 'This is Holbrook' and feature a part of Holbrook not known to the vast majority," suggests a Holbrook reader.

A Scituate reader wrote, "I enjoy reading about different ideas and faiths, I clip and send (Around Town especially) some articles to my married son in L.A. A picture is worth 1,000 words — keep them coming."

We will.

"I like to hear about what is happening in the schools, churches, local clubs etc. More of the local stuff you've been giving us. Pictures are very important," reiterated a Norwell reader.

And this commentary from a Weymouth reader is going up on the wall to remind us of the importance of understanding the communities we cover:

"From covering local business to construction of the new police station, to school sports stories to school board decisions; through all this, your paper has been informative without being sensational and has been thorough while remaining respectful of the people of Weymouth. I realize that is not always easy, but I thank you for it."

We thank you, and all our readers. Please keep letting us know how we're doing. It's your newspaper, after all.

SCHOOL BOARD IS TELEVISED

To the Editor:

As the Cohasset School Committee's liaison to the media, it is my responsibility to point out a significant factual error in a recent front-page story by David Tibbetts (Mariner, June 19, 1997). In this article, Mr. Tibbetts stated that only the Cohasset Board of Selectmen offer live television coverage of their meetings.

In fact, the Cohasset School Committee has been televising our meetings live since January, 1997. The committee set "increasing communication with all of our many constituencies" as a primary goal this year. Principals, school councils, guidance counselors and adjustment counselors have produced several newsletters for parents. Interested citizens have been invited to numerous forums, for example on block scheduling and the transition to a middle school. And the school committee produced an informative newsletter and distributed it to all residents of the town this spring. We also have televised all of our meetings for more than six months on local cable Channel 53.

The Cohasset School Committee respectfully asks that you correct the unfortunate impression left by your reporter that only the selectmen have entered the electronic age. While we still have some improvements to make, including renovation of the AV studio at the high school, which may take us temporarily "off the air" this summer, we do provide gavel-to-gavel coverage of our meetings on local cable and will continue to do so this fall. Thank you.

Ralph D. Kidder

To the Editor:

Congratulations to all those involved in the spring/summer landscaping at the Cohasset Plaza.

Not only do the tastefully arranged saplings, shrubs and flowers improve the view from Route 3A and lessen the visual distractions of highway signs, but their planting and the thought which has gone into their care definitely upgrades the image of the stores in the plaza.

Let's hope this spirit of natural beautification spreads to other shopping areas along 3A.

SENIORS ARE A TOWN TREASURE

To the Editor:

The staff at the treasurer/collector's office and myself owe the following senior citizens our heartfelt thanks for helping us mail the real estate tax bills on time: Mary Andracchio, Mary Davis, Pat Hanlon, Tillly Nardo, Olga Sawchuck, Connie Tolman, Peter Tolman and Louise Ward.

While they were working I thought I would be social and thank them for their help. I guess I stayed a little too long because someone said, "We did not come her to do your work while you sit there."

State officials say water rate relief could be in sight

By Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITER

Rate relief may be in sight for thousands of water users in Hingham, Cohasset and Hull.

According to Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, the committee on natural resources held a hearing Tuesday to consider a bill which would provide significant financial assistance to Massachusetts-American Water Company customers, who pay the highest average water rates in the state. The average water bill is $713 per year. The combined water and sewer rate for the three communities is twice the MWRA average.

However, legislators are still deciding whether or not to grandfather projects (ones already completed) and include private water suppliers, such as Massachusetts-American, in the program, which would be administered by the Department of Environmental Protection.

Hedlund met with Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci recently about the issue.

The lieutenant governor attended a meeting with selectmen from the three towns last year to discuss water rates. Hedlund said Cellucci recalled the meeting and felt the three communities should be included in the program.

"Federal safe drinking water standards were part of the reason for improvements at the Hingham water plant," Hedlund said. "So it makes sense that Massachusetts-American Water Company customers should be included in the program."

Officials from Hingham , Hull and Cohasset testified at the hearing.

"The bill is a significant step in the right direction to bring sanity to outrageous rates," said Hedlund. The Department of Public Utilities will readjust the water rates if the project is approved.

Hingham Selectman Katherine Reardon said a sizeable constituency from Hingham, Hull and Cohasset attended the hearing, as well as representatives from Massachusetts-American Water Company, to speak in favor of including private companies in the bill.

"We championed an amendment which would do that," said Reardon. "There was support at the hearing for the bill in general, and a general consensus that the water company should be included in the program."

Reardon said the issue isn't whether a company is private or not, because the plant was built in response to a federal mandate.

"The impact is the same in either case," she said. "Our feeling was that the legislators we talked to were in agreement with us, and that the administration is also supportive."

Hedlund wrote to Gov. William Weld last October asking his assistance with the 155 percent rate increase suffered by residents in the three towns.

At the time, some residents were experiencing problems with discolored water during times when the company was flushing the water pipes, according to Hedlund.

The bill, filed by Governor Weld, would create a drinking water state revolving fund (SRF) which would provide $450 million of financial assistance during the next five years to water suppliers, who would then use the state assistance to reduce water rates.

Hedlund said "cursory" calculations from his office could mean up to a $150 reduction in water rates for the average family. He stressed that the figure is only a rough estimate.

Hedlund co-sponsored a similar bill with other legislators and the Massachusetts Municipal Association. An amendment was also filed during the Senate budget debate for the creation and funding of a drinking water SRF.

Under the revolving loan fund program, the federal government awards grants to states, which in turn provide loans and other assistance to qualifying water suppliers. (A "revolving" loan fund reloans money as it receives principal repayment on its outstanding loans.)

The drinking water SRF is modeled after the state's existing sewer SRF, which is currently subsidizing the tri-town sewer project between Hingham, Hull and Cohasset."This is one of the most efficient and sensible things we do with state tax dollars," said Hedlund. "This provides a good mix of federal and state dollars.

"The benefit isn't meant for the companies," said Hedlund, who was one of the legislators who asked the Weld administration to come up with a drinking water plan modeled after the sewer SRF. "The savings are mandated for the rate payers."

Hedlund said he expects the bill to pass sometime this year.

"The hearing was the first step. Once the natural resources committee votes on the bill, it will go to the house and senate for approval," he said.

Clamming fee issue to be dug up

A clamming dispute between Scituate and Cohasset will re-enter negotiations after a three-year standstill, Scituate Selectmen announced this week.

When the clam flats reopened at Bassings beach in 1994, the two towns could not see eye to eye on clamming permit fees. While the beach is located in the south section of Cohasset Harbor, the town of Scituate owns the area where the flats are open.

Currently, Scituate residents pay $20 annually to dig for clams while Cohasset clammers are charged a $50 non-resident fee. But because the clam flats in their town are closed due to pollution and storm damage, Cohasset residents have begrudgingly paid extra for digging privileges.Clammers are allowed to harvest up to eight quarts of mollusks larger than two inches in size during a day at the flats. Scituate's clamming regulations, which are based on state law, allow clamming activity once a week — either on Thursday or Sunday, the only days the flats are open.

"I got the job!"

FOREST STREET WIDENING NEEDED

Dear Selectmen,

I have lived in Cohasset for only two years, but am purchasing a home on Forest Avenue. As a recent transplant, I have had the opportunity to live in other areas where bicycling and walking in safety were a given. Because the law stipulates that bicycles have the same right of way as cars on the streets, it doesn't seem like there would be too much trouble in widening the roads just 36 inches for a formal bike lane.

The perils of King Street are not well known to me, however, it does seem feasible to widen Forest Avenue by three feet, with a foot on one side and two on the other where nature dictates. I really believe that three feet the length of the avenue is not out of the question. Then a simple white line measuring three feet could run from Main Street to Black Rock Beach down one side of the road, giving pedestrians and cyclists the much-needed safety buffer.

Because Forest Avenue is scheduled to be re-paved in September, I hope a re-evaluation will be made with respect to different funding for a bike lane vs. a sidewalk, per se. From what I understand, the sidewalk plan was 48 inches down one side of the road, and then half way down on the other side, with much blasting and expense. Perhaps a mere widening on both sides while paving is in progress, approximately 18 inches per side, or 30 inches here, six inches there, would drastically reduce the cost.

SENIOR SCENE MARY LONDERGAN

We finally have those lazy hazy days of summer. How about some water aerobics in our town pool held every Tuesday and Thursday, from 11:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., starting July 1. The cost is only $2.50. Bring your water shoes, towel and hat, and don't forget your bathing suit.

Also, walk on air with our Foot Care Program. There are still a few openings for our monthly Foot Care Clinic on July 9, cost is $20. Call 383-9112 for an appointment.

Anyone for bridge? Cohasset Elder Affairs is looking for more players to come play in the lovely, air-conditioned T. Gerard Keating Room every Wednesday at 1 p.m.

Anybody need Farmer's Market Coupons? They are available on "first come, first served" basis. Call Linda and leave your name.

A wonderful welcome to our two new people at the Senior Center- Linda McCarthy, here Monday through Thursday 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m, and Jennifer Silva, daughter of the owners of Phil's in Hanson, will be here for Tuesday and Thursday luncheons.

Don't forget the SHARE sign-up, Monday, July 7 through Friday, July 11 at the Senior Center.

Everyone had a terrific time at the 90s Party on Wednesday, May 28. We had a terrific response. It was wonderful to note that four of the honorees who attended were all teachers who had retired from the Joseph Osgood School- Ros Reardon, Kay Mulchay, Elinor Kennedy and Gertrude Young. They recognized many of those present and remembered them as their pupils. Super pictures of everyone are available!

Summer band concert series

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first concert on the Common for the 1997 Season will be Tuesday, July 8, at 7:30 p.m. on the Town Common.

Performing will be the 30 piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

The next two concerts are scheduled for Tuesday's, July 22 and August 12, both at 7:30 p.m. on the Cohasset Common.

Concerts are made available via the generosity of the South Shore Play House Associates, Inc. of Cohasset and a matching fund grant from the American Federation of Musicians of New York City, NY.

Concerts are free of charge and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Please bring your own lawn chair or blanket to sit on and from time to time insect repellent can be a good item to have available.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Poetry reading caps off 25 year teaching career for Mrs. Atkinson

'WE'VE GAINED GREAT KNOWLEDGE IN GRADE THREE WE'VE EVEN MASTERED POETRY.'
Excerpt from "Ode to Couplets" written by parent Linda Nash.

Poetry was the theme of the day and perhaps a career theme for Marian Atkinson who retires this year after 25 years of teaching.

In the last week of the school year, Atkinson held a "Prestigious Poet's Reading" in her third-grade classroom. This was a time for parents to visit and listen to their child read a poem that he or she has written. After the reading, children treated their parents to an afternoon tea.

This year students and parents turned the tables on Atkinson by presenting her with a poem memorized and recited by the children, a memory book from former students, a treasure book, and other gifts to mark her 23rd and final year teaching in Cohasset. The poem spoke of the children's pleasure in being in this classroom with this teacher.

Atkinson responded the way she always does, with charm and grace, as if this was the most pleasant surprise she could have anticipated. Despite the focus on her, Atkinson did everything she could to emphasize the achievements of her students.

The bookworm is a tradition in her classroom. A child reads a book on his own time, does a book report and a picture, then hands it into the teacher. When this happens, a new section of the bookworm is added to the wall. The idea is to have the bookworm circle the classroom by the end of the year. This year, for the first time, it has happened, with the worm circling the room and extending into the hall. These 23 children read 225 books and did the same number of reports and pictures.

Atkinson described herself as a teacher who sets "high standards for her students, but does not overwhelm them." She said she spent a lot of time on reading and writing in third grade.

"I read a lot of wonderful literature very dramatically, I'd like to be a storyteller," Atkinson explained.

Her methods must be working. High school students came back and show her their poetry. She has even had poems dedicated to her.

Atkinson stresses good manners and caring for others. The children at this afternoon tea had to greet their parents at the door, and lead them politely to their seats. During the school year, children earn tickets for doing something extra for a classmate. When the child earned 25 tickets, he/she gets to choose a gift from the treasure box.

Atkinson said she has viewed teaching as an "awesome responsibility and a challenge to never say something that can leave a scar on a child."

For years, Atkinson's students have remarked about her "nice hair." Bacharach Studio in Boston did her engagement picture and included it in a window display. An advertising executive saw the photograph, and bought the rights to it for Breck shampoo. Yes, Atkinson was a "Breck girl!"

Her first teaching job was in Randolph where she taught for two years. Then Atkinson and her husband, Thomas, moved to Cohasset. After having seven children, all born and raised here, she returned to teaching, this time at the Joseph Osgood School. Now, 23 years later, she retires leaving a generation of friends and memories.

Preschool applications available

Erdman Preschool is accepting applications for a three-day, three-year-old class for children who will be 3 1/2 by September. The class will meet Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon from 1 to 3:30 p.m. Erdman is located at 330 First Parish Road in Scituate. Call the school office at 545-9309 for further information.

The preschool is also offering a summer program beginning June 10 and continuing through Aug. 14. Children from three- to six-years-old are welcome to enroll on a weekly basis. The play school meets Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon. Activities include arts and crafts, nature fun, music, storytelling and games. Call Patrick Litz at 545-5695.

Widow's Walk has to be seen and played to be believed

By David McKee
MARINER STAFF

While nature lovers and environmentalists have already given thumbs up to the scenic Widow's Walk Golf Course on the Driftway, one group of people is going to fall in love with the course at first site - golfers.

This rolling, Scottish Links-style course, designed by Dr. Michael Hurdzan and owned by the town of Scituate, has something to offer golfers from beginners all the way up to scratch players.

"You will need to use every club in the bag on this course," said Widow's Walk head golf pro Bob Sanderson, 42. "It reminds me of the old Links courses in Scotland. Players of all ages and abilities will really enjoy it here."

The par 72, 6,403 yard public course officially opens on July 3.

Sanderson said the course has many risk-reward holes and players who can hit the ball straight will be in excellent shape for a solid round.

"By modern standards, it's a relatively short course," he said. "There are some holes where power will help, but the main thing is accuracy and shot placement. And the X-factor is the wind. We're right near the water and I'm not certain how the wind's going to react day to day. That could make things interesting for the golfers."

The course has numerous bunkers, holes with 'forced carries' off the tee, elevated tees and greens, as well as water, wetlands and vegetation of all kinds.

The fairways have fescue grass that is more durable while requiring less water and fertilizer.

While the greens are made of the same grass used at the Augusta National Golf Club, according to Sanderson.

"The fairways have a Scottish look and appear to be in great shape," he said. "And the green are fast and are in excellent shape as well."

The 18-hole course starts and finishes with par five's.

There are three par fives on the front nine with two on the back.

There are also three par three's on the front and two on the back.

There are four teeing areas for each hole (the blue tees measure the longest) to accommodate golfers of all levels.

The most challenging holes on the course are the third, fourth and fifth holes, according to Sanderson.

The third and fourth are narrow, difficult to reach par four's with the third hole having an approach shot over water.

The fifth hole is a 213 yard par three, the longest on the course.

"That stretch will challenge everyone, even the best golfers," Sanderson said. "If a golfer can get through those three holes in good shape, he or she is looking at a good round."

The eighth hole, a 199 yard par three, has the highest elevated tee and was the hole that led to the course being named the Widow's Walk.

From the elevated tee on eight, golfers can see 16 of the 18 holes, as well as the North River and the Atlantic Ocean.

"The scenery at this course really has to be seen to be believed," Sanderson said. "I think people are going to really enjoy the sites, especially at the eighth tee."

The course opens officially on July 3 to the public with tee times available up to six days in advance.

Monday through Thursday, it costs $25 for 18 holes for Scituate residents. It costs $28 for non-residents.

Fridays, weekends and holidays, it costs $33 for Scituate residents and $38 for non-residents.

Junior and senior rates are available.

Carts are also available at $12 per person.

Carts will be made mandatory starting in '98, according to Sanderson.

The driving range is open only to players who are playing at Widow's Walk that day.

Widow's Walk strongly encourages players not to wear metal spikes.

In '98 the course will ban metal spikes altogether, according to Sanderson.

"While this is a public course, we plan on treating the players like they're at a private club," Sanderson said. "Service is what we're going to be about and we're going to make this a comfortable atmosphere for everyone involved."

With that in mind, Sanderson said Widow's Walk will encourage fast play but will not stack the course with too many players at one time.

"There's been a lot of talk about slow play and what to do about it," Sanderson said. "Well, in a lot of cases, it's the club that's at fault because they send out too many players and stack everyone on top of each other. The USGA has rated our course and said it should take four and a half hours to play a round. And we're going to make sure that's how long a round will take. We won't hesitate to tell a group to speed it up."

THE FISH STORY

MARK TASK

Anglers reach for the beach

As the swelter settled in this week, more and more people headed for the water. Pounds of pogies, mackerel, and countless boxes of seaworms went out the door as anglers seeking heat relief headed for the shore and boats to get off shore. As sun-baked beachgoers scrunched against seawalls, driven ahead of afternoon high tides, it seemed every point and rock held an angler or tow wielding surf rods.

For some there was exhilarating success, a large silvery striper swinging from the scale, photographed for posterity. Others were reminded its "fishing" not "catching" as knots frayed, hooks bent, lines and poles snapped, and crusty reels gave up the ghost. Nothing like stripers and bluefish to test the equipment.

Don Schneider's patience was tested as he worked his regular spots along the coast. Every single hook was cleaned off, the line clipped clean. Sounds like the schools of blues spotted a couple weeks ago are making their way in along the rocks and beaches. Birds actively feeding are a sure telltale to the locations.

Pete Parker confirmed the efficiency of circle hooks. Another angler tried them too. Its strange he reported. You don't set the hook. Just pick up the rod and start reeling and the fish is on. Just takes some getting used to loading the bait on the hook.

The striper parade is getting longer as we get into the heart of summer. Rob Ziff nailed his first near Sandy Beach, a fine 34 incher that took his mackerel chunk for a ride. Mackerel was the choice for a large number of successful anglers. Colt and Rory MacDonald traveled south on consecutive days and caught three keepers at the Duxbury Bridge and Brant Rock. Dave, Mike and Nick Hillner fooled a fat 25 pound, 4 ounce stripe that taped at 41 inches, again on mackerel. Grant Emde, Keith Jackson and Matt O'Connor picked up five and a bluefish as well.

From Point Allerton up into the Brewster Ledges has once again become a steady destination for many bayside anglers. Cohasset Ted has taken up his summer roost and is again catching a steady stream of fish. the best bay news is that there seems to be a decent supply of pogies inside unlike last year's drought.

The charter guys are reporting good results. Joan Mac of Capt. Mac Charter reported on the week's results from the "Irish Rover": 500 pounds of cod and keeper haddock, 188 pounds of por beagle, 65 bluefish. The whale watching is spectacular, she reports.

Mike Bartlett entertained a group of Orvis reps aboard the "B-fast" in the shadow of Minots Light. Mostly using a fly called the SarMulMac the group boated and released more than 25 stripers, the largest measuring 27 inches. A ton of action! Sounds like its time to take a number deli-style.

Sunshine girls off to perfect start

The Sunshine Girls softball team, sponsored by Sweet Surprises Candy Store in Cohasset Plaza, is off to a roaring start. The team is undefeated after its first three games thanks to the great hitting and fielding ability of the girls.

In all of their outings, the Sunshine Girls have racked up a lot of runs. The bats of Christina Daniels, Erin Liddell, Aly Belz, Cecilia Chapman and Kate Carpenter have been consistently red hot, driving in many runs much to the consternation of the other teams. These girls give it their all every time they are at the plate.

But hitting is only part of the story; for not only can the Sunshine Girls hit, they can also field. Danielle Hajjar and Jacqueline Chase, both terrific at the plate, have also robbed the other teams of runs with their fielding. Katie James, Elizabeth Stone and Vanessa Plante, all solid hitters, fielded with great finesse, making it difficult for the other teams to score.

Kristen Schwerin and Dominique Asnault have their share of RBIs and great plays in the field. Eagerness to try any position and great team spirit have marked the playing of Brooke Allen, Molly Kirk and Jessica Wheelwright making the Sunshine Girls impossible to beat so far.

Great coaching by Dan Belz and John Chapman, with assistance from Rick Daniels at Saturday's game, has certainly been evident when you watch this team score, score, score!

Their wonderful sense of teamwork and unbridled enthusiasm must make these girls a joy to coach; they certainly are a joy to watch.

RECREATION NOTES

How much is too much to pay for a growth stock?

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Will Coca-Cola keep it's fizz? It's an important question for long-term investors who hold stock in the company. The value of the stock increased more than 80 percent between the end of 1994 and 1996, beating the Standard & Poor's 61 percent gain.

WORTH

Similarly, technology highflier Cisco Systems' stock almost doubled over the same period. While Coca-Cola and Cisco have given new meaning to the label growth stock, as many investors know past success does not guarantee more of the same.

The tricky part of buying growth stocks after a prolonged rally is determining whether they are overpriced, especially in terms of long-term performance. Financial analysts have developed many techniques to draw that line. Comparing a companies price-to-earnings ratio to the S&P 500's average, for example, ranks among the most basic; other analysts have sophisticated computer programs for separating the wheat from the chaff.

So, which method should you use? Evaluating something called a sustainable earnings growth rate may be good measure for determining whether a growth stock will continue to grow enough to make it a good long-term investment, according to a study done by Jim Jubak in Worth magazine.

The sustainable earnings growth measure is based on the assumption that over the long-term a company's growth rate can't be higher than the return earned on investors' equity. In other words, the efficiency with which the company uses the investors' money (return on equity) relates to its ability to expand its earnings. Hence, if a company's return on equity ratio is significantly lower than its profit growth it may be a signal that growth will slow. The opposite situation might signal a good buy.

High payout ratios, which measure the percentage of earnings being paid to investors as dividends, are not a good sign. High-growth companies are expected to reinvest current earnings to produce even higher future earnings.

That can't happen, though, if a company devotes a large percentage of its net income to dividend payments.

Sustainable growth rate is calculated by taking the the figure for a company's return on equity and multipying it by the percentage of earnings that the company is retaining, versus paying out in dividends. This resulting sum forecasts a company's likely maximum long-term growth rate.

Let's get back to Coca-Cola. Here's how you compute its sustainable earnings growth: multiply its 60.5 return on equity for 1996--that means it earned a commendable 60.5 cents for every dollar invested --by the percentage of the earnings it keeps for itself (the company paid its shareholders 36% of what it earned last year, which means it withheld 64%.).

So, 64% of 60.5 gives Coca-Cola an estimated sustainable growth rate of 38.72%--not shabby at all considering some companies would be happy to grow their earnings by 10 percent each year.

What also matters, though, is how Coca-Cola's estimated sustained growth compares with its current earnings growth. Last year Coca-Cola's earnings rose 17% -- less than half of the 38.72% it's expected to grow. That discrepancy suggests the rate at which Coca-Cola's earnings are growing should increase over the long term, rising into the 30 percent range.

Before you start dreaming about the fantastic wealth you could acquire from your Coca-Cola investment, remember this: There are many variables--such as a market crash, slowing sales, new management--that can affect a stock's behavior. Standard & Poor's, for example, has a less sanguine view of the soft drink company's stock. In its stock report, S&P predicts that Coca-Cola will merely keep pace with the overall market in the coming year because a stronger U.S. dollar could truncate its overseas profits. And well it could.

But in the long run--say 10 years down the road--the sustainable growth comparison may win out. Indeed, history suggests it could. Jubak's study (building on data from an earlier study by Wharton's Jeremy Siegel) of the stalwart growth stocks of the 1960s and 1970s called the Nifty Fifty reveals a compelling pattern. The study illustrates that the among the group, the stocks that performed best between the December 1972 and May 1995 had, on the whole, started with higher sustainable growth rates in 1972.

Eastman Kodak was an example of one of the losers. The company increased earnings a robust 30.4% in 1972, but had a sustainable growth rate of only 11.7%. Kodak's stock ranked among the 10 worst performers in the Nifty Fifty over the 22 and a half year period.

It doesn't always take a few decades to see the results, though. Shares of Broderbund Software, a technology company that did very well in 1995, dropped in value by one-half last year because its earnings essentially stood still after a year of stellar growth. If you had compared the company's hefty 226% profit growth for 1995 with its estimated sustainable growth of 34.6% at the end of 1995, you may have predicted the company's correction.

The last step in evaluating sustainable earnings growth is to see if the stock offers the most sustainable growth for the dollar.

Overpaying for a good growth stock can undercut benefits. Jubak devised another simple formula; divide the price-to-earnings ratio by the sustainable growth rate.

The Nifty Fifty study contained this value lesson: Of the group, the best-performing growth stocks from 1972 through 1995 were those that traded for the lowest price-to-earnings ratios in 1972.

Investors in the stocks that turned out to be the poorest performers over the long haul were paying almost 70 percent more for each unit of sustainable growth than were investors in the top performers.

The implication is that investors who refuse to pay too much for growth will do far better than those who are less discriminating.

Lacrosse lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a full-contact, full-equipment lacrosse clinic this summer under the direction of Mr. Chuck Jaffee of Cohasset, for youngsters entering grades five and six during the fall of 1997.

Clinics will be held Monday evenings, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., beginning Monday, June 30, continuing for eight weeks through Aug. 18.

Participants will need a helmet, stick and pads for participation in this clinic. The fee for the eight-week opportunity is $35 per person.

Registration forms and details are available at the Cohasset Recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall. Early registration is advised due to a limitation in participation.

Mary McElroy honored for work with Girl Scouts

More than 500 people were in attendance at the Newton Marriott Hotel to congratulate this year's recipients of the Girl Scout Appreciation Pin at the Patriots' Trail Council's Annual Meeting. Cohasset's Mary McElroy was among those honored with this prestigious award.

Approved by the board of directors following nationally-established guidelines, the appreciation pin recognizes an individual who not only contributes to the council's goals and objectives, but serves Girl Scouts above and beyond expectations.

McElroy has been a Cohasset Girl Scout Leader for the past six years in addition to the years spent as a leader for her older daughter's troop in other councils. In 1994-1995, McElroy served as Cohasset town coordinator and, in 1996, she took over as the town registrar and treasurer.

According to Terry James, Cohasset service unit coordinator, McElroy has done a tremendous job at reinforcing the importance of Girl Scouting in their town. From providing a helping hand to first-time leaders to creating a computerized database for all registered Girl Scouts, McElroy has gone above and beyond all expectations.

> "Mary is a true example of what Girl Scouts are about: women and girls joined together, helping, working and teaching each other selflessly. Mary does all this and more."
> TERRY JAMES, COHASSET SERVICE UNIT COORDINATOR

"Mary is a true example of what Girl Scouts are about: women and girls joined together, helping, working and teaching each other selflessly. Mary does all this and more," James said.

In addition to volunteering in her current positions, McElroy has also been a service team chairperson, service team coordinator, and the Cookie Chair.

Beyond Girl Scouting, McElroy's voluntarism has impacted the community in several other ways. For the past 20 years, she has served as a leader and organizer of Boy Scout Troop 28, as well as taking on the role of registrar since 1984. She is a seven-year board member of the Light House Keepers Association and has volunteered her computer skills for both the Council of Aging and the South Shore Community Center.

Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council congratulates Mary McElroy on her recognition and is honored to have such a dynamic woman among its adult membership.

Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council serves nearly 35,000 girls annually in the greater Boston area, but the "girl" in Girl Scouting represents only a part of those involved. Each year more than 8,400 adult volunteers serve as troop leaders, adult trainers, special event organizers and board members.

Community Center summer fun

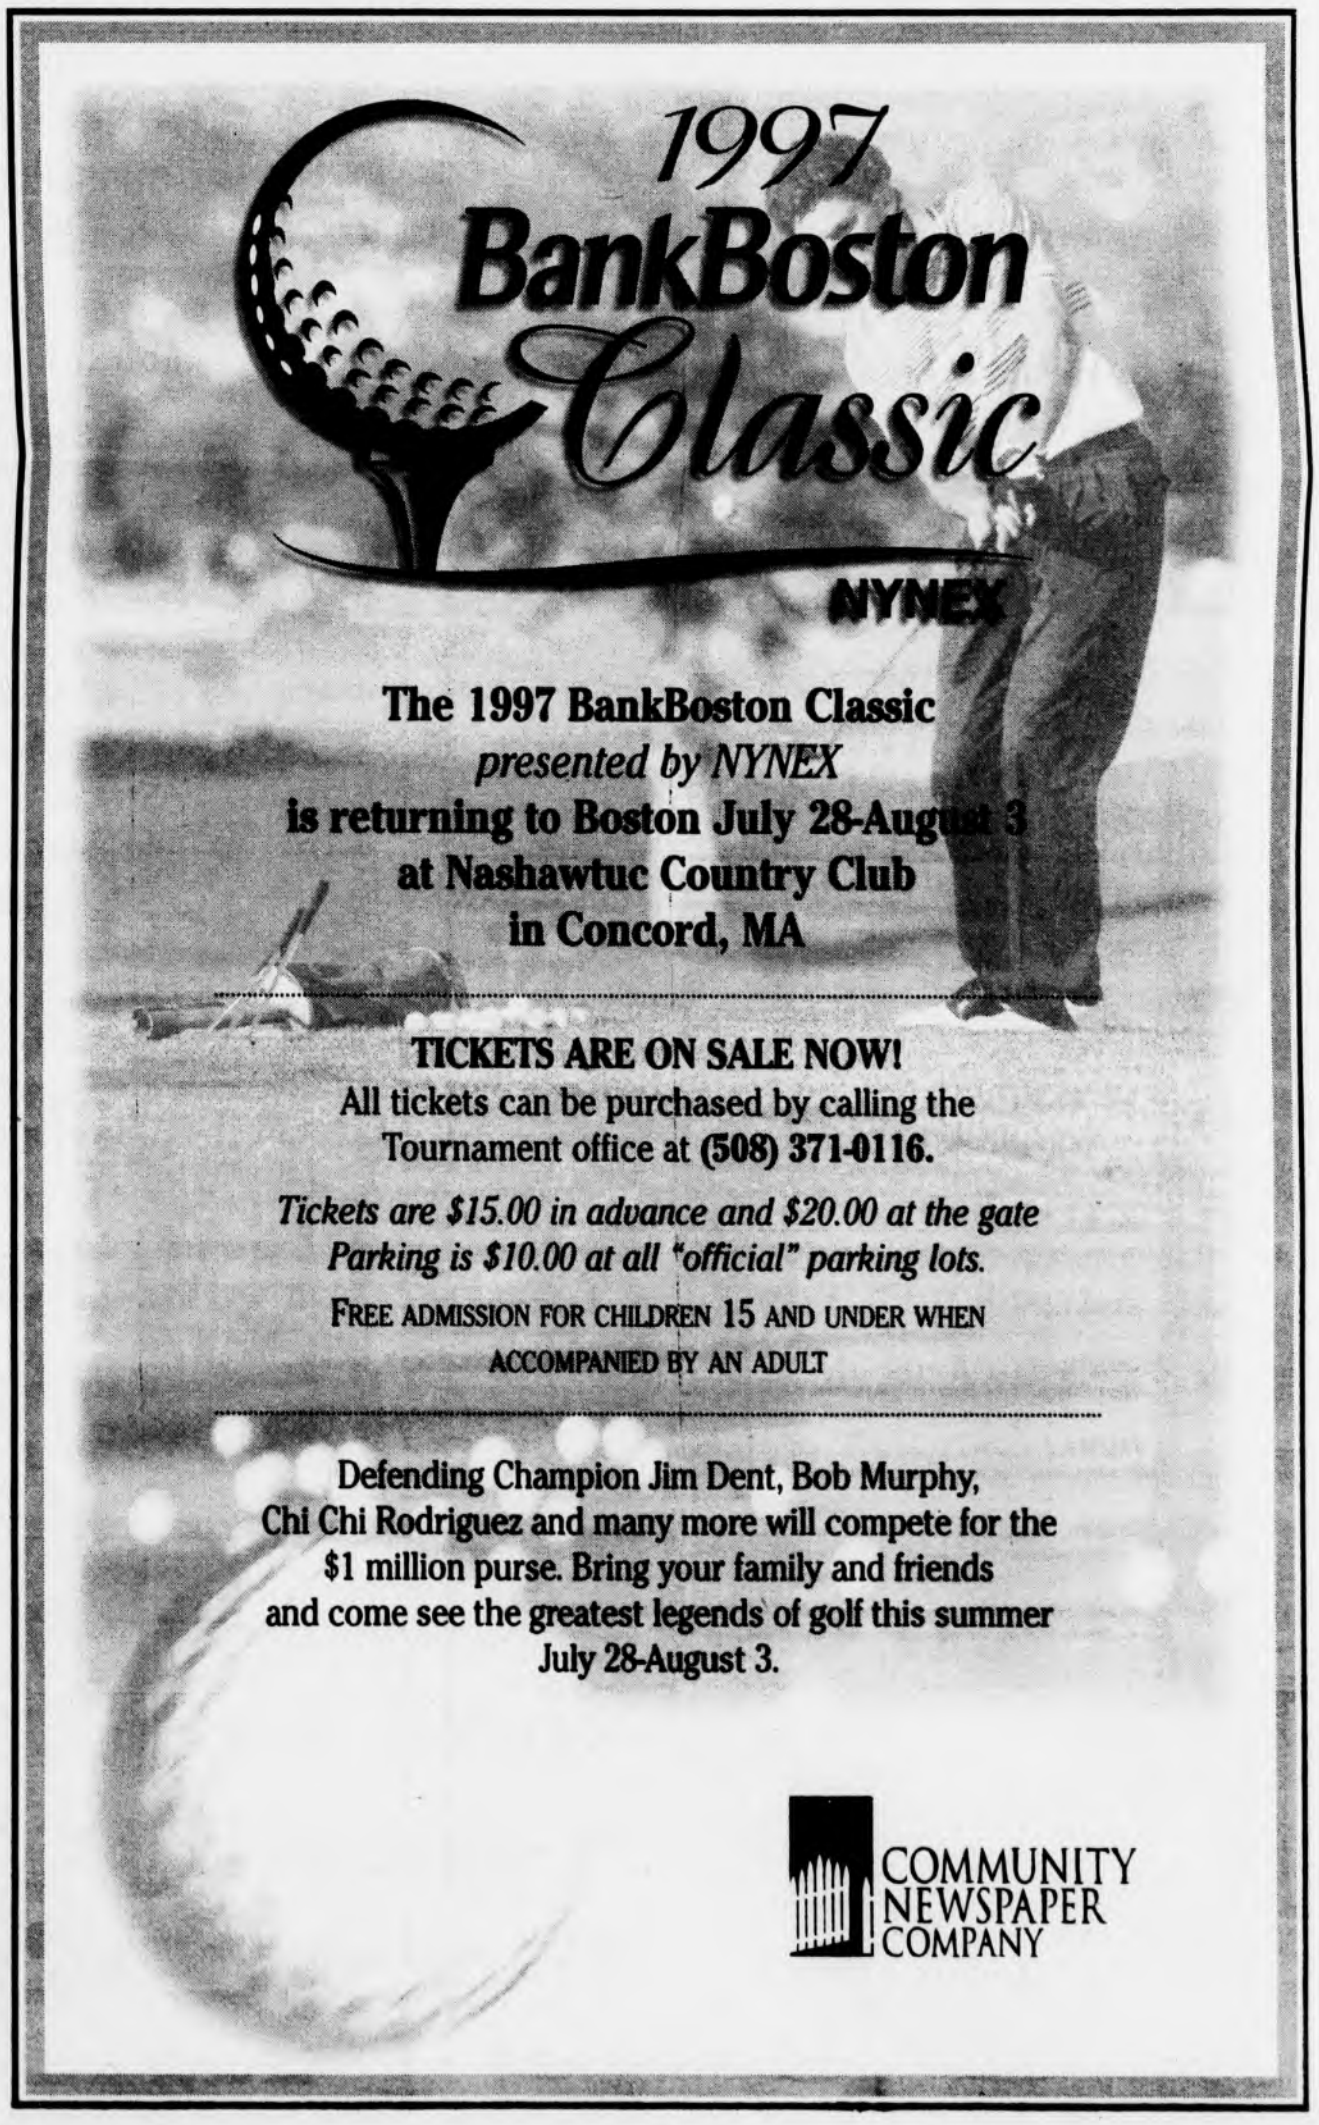
The following activities are being offered at SSCC this summer:

Gymnastics Summer Team Workout Level 4. July 8-29 (Tuesdays) 4:30-6 pm and again August 5-26 Tuesdays, same time). Level 5, High School Optional will be offered July 8-29 (Tuesdays) 6 to 8 pm, and again on August 5-29 (Tuesdays) 6-8 pm.

Summer Caberet Dance Camp will be offered under the direction of Leslie VanDyk of the South Shore School of Performing Arts, August 25-29 for ages 7-10, 9:30 to 11:30 and for ages 11-18, 1 to 3 pm. Kids will dance and sing using tap and jazz and themes from current musicals. There will be a performance for friends and family to attend. Cost is $75 for members and $80 for non-members.

Maritime Museum is open

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum, Elm Street, Cohasset center, is open for the season. Hours through September are 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. each day except Mondays. Admission is free and donations are accepted.



The museum features artifacts such as ship models, fishing gear, lifesaving materials, shipbuilding and shipwreck relics, as well as a collection of Native American stone tools relating to the history of this small New England village.

For further information call the Historical Society at 617-383-1434.

EEE packets available

Packets containing basic information on Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and general measures for mosquito control are available at three Cohasset sites: Town Hall (in a receptacle mounted on the large billboard), the Community Center, and the Paul Pratt Library.

This information has been provided by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the Audubon Society, and the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee (CMCC). For further information call 383-9900, ext. 121, or leave a note in the CMCC mailbox in town hall.

Cohasset man injured in motorcycle accident

A 39-year-old Cohasset man was in stable condition at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital this week after the motorcycle he was driving was struck by a car at the intersection of Route 3A and Country Way in Scituate.

According to police, the driver of the motorcycle, Stephen Wirth of 14 Red Gate Lane in Cohasset was heading north on Route 3A at about 7:30 p.m. on June 28, when he was struck by a car turning south on Route 3A from Country Way.

Police said there were two cars in front of the motorcycle turning onto Country Way when the car, a 1993 Nissan Altima driven by Pembroke resident Diane Lange pulled out. Lange, 28 of 40 Mattakeeset St., was cited for failure to use care when starting.

Suffering from head and other injuries, Wirth was treated by EMTs at the scene and then transported by ambulance to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth. He was later taken by Med-flight to Brigham and Women's Hospital, police said.

The Cohasset ambulance arrives at the scene of a head-on collision near 605 Jerusalem Road, at about 6:40 p.m. Wednesday, June 25. Police officer Jeffrey Treanor said the Sarah Gatti, 17, of Hingham, the driver of the Geo Prism involved in the accident was cited for marked lane violation and failure to wear a seat belt. Gatti and her passenger, who was also not wearing a seat belt, were transported to South Shore Hospital. The driver of the other car was not injured. He was wearing a seat belt and the air bag inflated, Treanor said. Staff photo/Bill Wadsworth

IT'S HAPPENING

Boat raffle July 4

The Sailing Club has been promoting a fund-raiser raffle, which will be held this Friday, Independence Day. The drawing will be held at the Sailing Club, located on Government Island, at 1 p.m. At this time, the winner will be presented with the 9-foot Avon inflatable, a 4-hp engine, and dock space free for the summer. If you are still in need of a ticket, there are a few left. Call a member of the Sailing Club or at the Cohasset Hardware Store.

Beechwood Congregational

Soloist, David Norris, will be singing during church services on Sunday, July 13 and August 10. Sunday services are from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The Beechwood Congregational Church is holding a yard sale on Saturday, July 19 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 432 First Parish Rd. in Scituate. Come for reconditioned furniture and treasures. Anyone wishing to donate items to sell can call 383-9131.

Alice In Wonderland

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold the first Music Circus registration for Alice in Wonderland Thursday, July 3. The Music Circus Children's Show registrations will be open to children in the Playground Program and the show date for Alice in Wonderland is Thursday, July 17.

Music Circus registrations are held at the recreation office, 1st floor, Town Hall. On Thursday, July 3rd, registrations will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and again from 1 to 4:30 p.m. due to the holiday. All tickets for the Music Circus are $5.25.

Farmers' Market

The Cohasset Village Farmers' Market, located on the Common, South Main St., will be open Thursdays, 3 to 7 p.m., June 5 to Oct. 9.

Enjoy organic produce, strawberries and seasonal fruits, herb plants, perennials, baked goods and jams, seasonal vegetables, "Peace Meal" bread, fresh and dried flower bouquets, honey products, French pastries, lobsters and more.

A free folk concert will be featured each month. July 10, "Two for the Show" will perform Americana classics. For more information, call 383-1010.

Carillonneur to play

The second program in the 73rd Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, will be given on Sunday July 6, by Ann-Kirstine Christiansen of Aarhus, Denmark. Ms. Christiansen will play original carillon pieces by Bent Lorentzen and Staf Nees, transcriptions from the works of Grieg, Chopin, Orff, Albeniz, Mozart and Nielsen, and arrangements of popular pieces.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. Listeners are encouraged to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnics. In case of rain, the carillon may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs, concert schedules and descriptive brochures will be available, both in a stand near the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, and will also be handed out on the Common and at other listening locations listed on the back of the program. Following the recital a tour of the tower and demonstration of the carillon will be offered for those interested in climbing the 45 steps to the instrument.

Call Sally Slade Warner, St. Stephen's Carillonneur, at (508) 475-2599, Mary Kennedy, Assistant Carillonneur, at (617) 383-9599, or the church office, (617) 383-1083.

Volunteers honored

The Friends of the Paul Pratt Library hosted a reception at the home and magnificent garden of Barbara and Jeff Power on Beach Street last Wednesday evening, honoring some 30 library volunteers (see photo on page 8). President of the friends Betsey Detwiler, and chairman of the trustees of the library, Patience Towle, both thanked the volunteers for their hours of work.

The volunteers honored each received a pair of crystal wine glasses embossed with the library weathervane logo. They were Dottie Booth, Ann Bowdoin, Gloria Boyce, Anne Costello, Carole Anne Dean, Robin Eaton, Genevieve Good, Libby Hagan, Mary Hartwell, Jean Higgins, June Hubbard, Ozzie Ingram, Beth Jordan, William Kelley, Susan Kent, Mary Londergan, Shirley Marten, Lucille McLaughlin, John Mullett, Marjorie Murphy, Debbie Niessink, Carol Riley, Dorsey Robey, Peg Smart, Peggie Soltesz, Gertrude Walfogel.

Members of the executive board of the friends for 1997-98, who had been elected earlier in the day at the friends annual meeting, were introduced: president, Betsy Detwiler; vice-president, Carol Riley; treasurer, Mary Lou Studds; secretary, Anne Costello; Carole Anne Dean, John Flanagan, Gail Flynn, Kyle Lubitz, Monica McKenney, Suzan Redgate, Gitte Shea, Moira Stansell, Linda Wakeman, Chris Whoriskey.

Carousel night

The Family Fun Night series at the Paragon Carousel gets under way Wednesday, July 9, at 7 p.m. Fruit & Jingles, "The Smile Specialists" will tell their favorite story of the First Carousel. They'll combine fables, storytelling, balloons and a dash of magic to deliver important messages. These colorful ambassadors of joy provide spellbinding entertainment for folks of all ages.

Admission is free. Enjoy a ride on the carousel before or af performance. A single rid is $1.50 per person. A 1 ticket is available for $13.50. The Paragon Carousel is open seven days a week during the summer from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Upcoming Family Fun Nights will take place July 23, Aug. 6 and Aug. 20. Aug. 20 will feature a family concert by local performer Dawna Hammers. The concert will begin at 7 p.m. at the Bernie King Pavilion, located across the street from the carousel, and will conclude with a sing-a-long on the carousel. Call (617) 925-0472.

Walking tour series

The historic and architectural walking tour series continues this Sunday, July 6, at 3 p.m. The tour of the Lincoln National Register Historic District will meet in front of Old Ship Church at 90 Main St.

The 1-1/2 hour walk will feature historical and architectural gems of Hingham Square, such as Old Ship Church, Memorial Bell Tower, St. Paul's Church, Old Ordinary, New North Church, the Community Center, Derby Hall and Loring Hall. The tour also spends time in the shady arboretum of the Hingham Cemetery, so we will stay as cool as possible. Tours are free. Call Rick Desmarais at 749-2463.

Trial begins in graduation party case

By Sarah Coffey and Rob Rogers
STAFF WRITERS

At least three Thayer Academy graduates drove home drunk in the early morning hours following a party at the Surry Drive home of John Lennon, witnesses told a Quincy courtroom yesterday.

Two, Richard Azulay and Jake Borden, survived. The third, 18-year-old Gregory D. Smith, died when his car struck a telephone pole.

Lennon, 47, has been charged with procuring alcohol for minors and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. In the third, emotionally-charged day of his trial, eight teen witnesses said they drank beer and participated in drinking games at the party Lennon hosted for about 130 family members, students and their parents.

Lennon held the party to celebrate his son's graduation from Thayer Academy and his daughter's college graduation.

One of those witnesses testifying Wednesday said she

Mark Haddad got some great news Tuesday morning: a call from Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan offering him the job of town manager.

The 33-year-old Littleton town administrator said he couldn't be happier about the news.

"I am very, very excited," Haddad said. "It's an excellent opportunity for me and I look forward to the challenge of being the town's first town manager."

Selectmen interviewed 11 candidates out of 40 who ap-

Locke closes case on Kennedy affair

After nearly 10 weeks spent investigating and interviewing, Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke said he would not be pressing charges against Michael Kennedy.

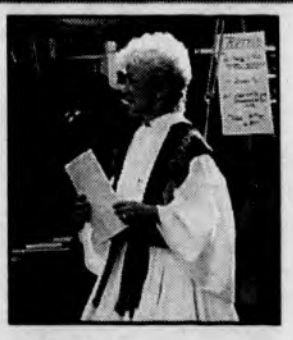
Locke was trying to verify reports that Kennedy, an Atlantic Avenue resident and the son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, had sex with his baby sitter before she was 16. The girl and her family, who live on North Main Street, refused to testify or provide Locke with information he could use to prosecute the case.

"We have conducted our review in conjunction with state police detectives, the Cohasset Police Department, and members of our victim-witness services unit. I have personally directed this effort in concert with First Assistant District Attorney John Kivlan and the chief of our sexual assault unit," Locke said in a statement released at a press conference Tuesday. "We have attempted to conduct this review out of the public spotlight and in a manner which inspires a spirit of trust and cooperation."

Locke acknowledged the investigation was difficult at times because of the enormous media attention focused on the case, which attracted throngs of reporters from around the country and world.

" Despite our best efforts, there has been a barrage of media headlines fed by private parties out to advance their own personal agendas at the expense of the truth seeking mission of law enforcement," he said, noting he was confident no information had been leaked by those involved in investigating the case.

Cohasset was turned upside town for several weeks when the case first caught the public's eye in early May. The media frenzy following the initial report in the Boston Globe wreaked havoc on this upscale seaside community.



Now that the case has been put to rest many in town are anxious to get on with other things. "The closing of the case is a big weight off my shoulders right now," said Police Chief Brian Noonan. "The case is closed for now, but that doesn't mean it can't be reopened."

Rizzo resigns from train committee

Dean Rizzo, who staunchly remained on the Greenbush Mitigation Committee after selectmen asked him to resign over comments he made in a recent newspaper story on the village station issue, has stepped down after all.

In a July 7 letter to selectmen, he said some of his fellow committee members have "been adding fuel to the rumor mill in town serving to escalate the misconceptions of a group of townspeople regarding my volunteer service.

"Thus I will no longer spend time and energy on a project which requires me to continually defend my honesty, integrity and character."

Selectmen accepted his resignation Monday and will send him a letter of thanks. Diane Sullivan wanted to add "with regret" to the motion made by Merle Brown but Brown said that wasn't part of his motion.

Brown led the charge to have Rizzo ousted from the committee after a page one Mariner story appeared The story quoted Rizzo about the village station, which irked selectmen who felt the issue was dead.

In his letter, Rizzo urged selectmen to appoint additional members to the mitigation committee to provide a balanced focus.

The committee's charge is to negotiate mitigation with the T on the affects of the train, such as noise and vibration issues, and not to oppose the train.

Rizzo, who represented local businesses on the committee, said he regretted that business needs "seem to be unwelcome and suspect and unimportant to others.

"It is a shame that Cohasset has not invested the same level of concern and interest in our village business district as have our town neighbors in North Scituate Village and Hingham Square," he said.

"I will continue to work on behalf of the village business district as a private citizen and as always, I will look forward to seeing that the best interests of the town are met by the MBTA Greenbush project," he said.

One-day liquor license

Selectmen approved issuing a one-day liquor license to the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 for their annual clambake. Proceeds benefit the Christine Burke Memorial scholarship.

Ambulance billing

The town billed for 35 ambulance transports last month for a total commitment of $12,487.61. There were 36 actual transports. The 'unbilled' transport was for a Cohasset fire-fighter injured while on duty.

In fiscal year 1997, which ended June 30, the town filled for $128,983.92 for ambulance transports and collected $117,139.53.

Payment that are collected for ambulance are applied to invoices from all previous fiscal years as well as the current year, said ambulance administrator Jane E. Henderson.

Red Lion Inn gets licenses

Selectmen approved issuing a Sunday license and a common victualler (food) license to the Red Lion Inn this week.

Attorney Michael Hayes, spokesman for the Inn, said the inn would be back to ask permission to close for renovations soon.

Open house at DPW garage

Plans are to hold an open house at the new DPW garage from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., August 2, Selectman Merle Brown said.

In a related matter, Selectman Diane Sullivan said the Greenbush Mitigation Committee would like the old DPW shed in the town parking lot razed as soon as possible. She explained that the committee and MBTA will do a "walk about" the site to look at improvements to the parking lot. The train will pass through the rear of the lot.

Brown said DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield is seeking bids to tear down the shed.

A license for danger?

Flurry of crashes brings driving age into question

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

Bobby LeBaron, 16, anxiously awaits his road test to receive his license at the Registry of Motor Vehicles in Plymouth.

Is a 16-1/2-year-old teenager too young to drive? The question has vexed parents and lawmakers for decades. Recent fatal accidents throughout the South Shore and the state involving teenagers have once again raised the question of whether the state should raise the minimum driving age.

State Sen. Peter Larkin, D-Pittsfield, proposed a bill last January that would place tougher restrictions on drivers under 18 with junior operator's licenses. The Public Safety Committee discussed the bill April 30, before taking it under consideration. The committee must recommend the bill before it can move on to the full Legislature.

Larkin proposed the bill along with seven other legislators to try and lower the number of young people killed in car accidents because of inexperience behind the wheel.

The National Safety Council lists car accidents as the leading cause of death (29 percent) for young people aged 15-24. Approximately 5,000 young people die every year in car accidents.

State figures closely reflect the national trends. The Registry of Motor Vehicles reports that of 187,575 car accidents in Massachusetts in 1996, 71,893 involved young people aged 15-24. In 1996, 52 people aged 15-24 died in car accidents.

A stricter bill had been considered in reaction to an horrific car accident which claimed two young people on Route 2 in Waltham. A bill was proposed to raise the minimum driving age from 16-1/2 to 18, but Larkin submitted an alternative bill to place tougher restrictions on drivers under 18.

"We didn't want to just penalize the 75 percent of young people who drive responsibly," said Stephen Reagan, who did much of the research for Larkin's bill. "We spoke with several parents whose children were killed in car accidents, and they supported the compromise."

Reagan said he was stunned to discover how easy it is for a young person to get a license with little or no training.

"What was most outrageous was we discovered that drunk driving among teens is going down, but car accidents are going up," Reagan said. "If you're 17, you can get a license without any training. We decided it was important to focus on training."

Currently, a 17-year-old teenager can get a license by successfully passing a written exam and a driving test with a State Police officer. At 16-1/2, a teenager can get a license by successfully completing a certified driver's education course that provides six hours of driving time and six hours observing another student driver.

The only restriction on a junior operator's license — issued to all drivers under 18 — is a prohibition from driving between 1 a.m. and 6 a.m.

Larkin's bill would place the following restrictions on junior operators:

- A prohibition from driving between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m., with an exemption for employment.
- A minimum of six months driving experience with a learner's permit and a driver's education course or a certified statement from a parent that the applicant has completed 30 hours of supervised driving.
- Suspend until age 19 the license of any junior operator convicted of drunk driving.
- Any junior operator found at fault in an accident must complete a driver's education program.
- Incremental suspensions for junior operators found guilty of speeding.

Reagan said he is more convinced than ever of the necessity of the bill with the recent spate of accidents involving young drivers.

Earlier this month, a 17-year-old Milton youth died after he lost control of his car in Mattapan.

One day after the Milton crash, a 17-year-old Hingham girl left a party and crashed into a tree, killing her 20-year-old boyfriend. Hingham police are investigating whether alcohol played a role in the crash.

On June 29, a 17-year-old Bridgewater girl was racing home to make a midnight curfew when she lost control of her car in East Bridgewater, killing a 15-year-old passenger and critically injuring a 16-year-old passenger.

Two weeks ago, a junior at Marshfield High School crashed her BMW into a tree just yards from the school where she had just completed final exams. The three passengers, in addition to the driver, were injured in the crash. Similar stories have played out in Hanover and Pembroke as of late.

Support for stricter measures

Reagan said Larkin's bill has a good chance of passing, although it was delayed because of "a glitch" in the filing date.

Whether the bill passes, many parents, law enforcement officials, legislators and even driving instructors support some form of increased license restriction for young, inexperienced drivers.

Rocco Libertine owns the Norwell Driving School. Libertine said he supports the stricter licensing requirements even though it could reduce his business.

"Every year, I would say an average of 1-1/4 of my former students die in car accidents due to inexperience," Libertine said. "Some of them are found to have been drunk or on drugs, but many just don't know how to take a sharp corner properly."

Libertine said the state's licensing requirements are not stringent enough to produce experienced drivers. Libertine said the written exam for a learner's permit is so easy, most teenagers could pass it without even reading the "Blue Book" which lists the rules of the road.

He added that the State Police have not been requiring license applicants to display complicated skills like three-point turns.

'Parents should also be more involved. Many parents hand off the family car without ever observing their kid behind the wheel.'
– POLICE CHIEF BRIAN NOONAN.

"There are no regulations on how much experience a driver must have to get a license," Libertine said. "The only advantage to taking a driver's education course is you can get your license at 16-1/2 and you get an insurance discount."

Libertine complained that young people with learner's permits are allowed to drive with 18-year-old drivers, who may be inexperienced. He said drivers with learner's permits should not be able to drive with anyone under 21.

"I would favor a driving age of 17 or 18 because 16-1/2-year-old students are still just kids," Libertine said. "They're still showing off for each other, and trying to impress boys or girls."

Libertine said parents also want their teens to have licenses so they can drive themselves to jobs, social events, extracurricular activities and sports events.

Margie Zides of Canton has a 16-year-old son, Andy, who just got his license last April. Zides said she agrees that 18-year-olds are far more mature than 16-year-olds, but teenagers need cars for economic and social reasons.

"I can really see both sides of it," Zides said. "I'm confident in my son's ability because I drove with him a lot to make sure he got the experience he needs. There is no substitute for experience."

Zides said her son is involved in so many extracurricular activities that she is not able to drive him to all the places he needs to go.

Zides said the key to developing a good driver is parental involvement.

"We let our son drive everywhere for six months with a learner's permit before he got his license," Zides said. "I was most concerned that he learn how to react to some of the crazy things other drivers do. We went up on Route 128 during rush hour to see how people really drive."

Zides added that parents didn't have to let their children get a license.

"Parents have to sign a consent form letting their children get a license if they're under 18," Zides said. "If their child isn't ready to drive, they shouldn't sign the form."

Stephen Hallowell, 17 of Canton, has had a driver's license for about a year. Hallowell said his parents let him drive everywhere when he got a learner's permit, giving him the experience he needed to drive alone.

Hallowell said he supports the idea of more stringent restrictions on junior licenses, but not an increased minimum age.

"I was involved in so many activities in school, and I lived five miles from school, that I needed a license at 16-1/2," Hallowell said. "I have a job in Boston, I wrestled, worked on the school newspaper, served as student representative to the school committee and participated in school government.

Hallowell said many fellow students needed a ride from Hallowell to stay involved in extracurricular activities.

"As the senior student, I made sure everyone had a ride," Hallowell said.

Hallowell was also a little annoyed that legislators were going after young drivers.

"We can't vote, so we don't have any political clout," Hallowell said.

Hallowell agreed that the driver's test was much too easy. He said when he took his test, the State Police officer had him go around the block and then gave him his license.

Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan agreed that training is the key to producing good young drivers.

"You can't give a kid enough training and education about driving at the tender young age of 16-1/2," Noonan said.

Noonan said he firmly supported restrictions rather than an outright increase in the minimum driving age.

"I prefer restrictions because it forces people to think about making the right choices before speeding or breaking the law," Noonan said. "Parents should also be more involved. Many parents hand off the family car without ever observing their kid behind the wheel."

Party case

saw Smith and other teens bringing their own alcoholic beverages to the party — something Lennon's lawyer has repeatedly insisted in the months leading up to the trial. The defense is expected to begin its case today.

Azulay, a resident of Cobb Avenue in Kingston, had said during a pretrial hearing he did not drink at the party. He changed his story for the trial, saying he felt the time had come to tell the truth.

"I didn't want to lie," said Azulay, a 1996 graduate of Thayer Academy in Braintree. "I didn't think this would go to trial. I think I was lying to protect myself."

Azulay, who said he drank between eight to 10 beers, said he drove home from the party at 2 a.m. He was "not sober" during the drive, he said. He also said he made small talk about the upcoming school year inside the house with Jo-Ann Lennon, John's wife, while holding two cups of beer in his hand.

Azulay said he had not received immunity from the district attorney in exchange for his testimony.

Another guest at the party, Dr. Rabeh Shalhob, testified he knew his son Matthew, a Thayer student, brought beer to the party. He did not know how much. Shalhob said he ran into Greg Smith on the street in front of the house at 9:30 p.m., where he saw Smith with a six-pack of Bud Light in his left hand.

Nathaniel Banchiere, another teen witness and Thayer graduate, told the court he had served Mrs. Lennon a beer during the party.

Banchiere, a resident of Peters Road in Plymouth, said he drank eight or nine cups of beer during the party, but was not able to obtain mixed drinks from a bar at the event despite his use of false identification. The bartender said "hard alcohol wasn't for us," Banchiere said.

"This isn't for you - you've got to go outside," said the bartender, Banchiere testified.

Both Banchiere and Azulay testified they had attempted to serve themselves from a bar in the basement of the house, but were initially driven out by Mrs. Lennon. Marc Rando, a coach at Thayer Academy who attended the party, testified that he told Mrs. Lennon four or five students were trying to obtain alcohol from the bar. Mrs. Lennon then went to the basement and told them to leave the bar area, Rando said. Rando said the students he saw were definitely rowdy, but that he could not determine whether they were drunk.

Azulay and Banchiere testified that they returned to the basement bar later in the evening and served themselves several mixed drinks. Jessica Bicknell testified she had two or three shots in the half-hour before Mrs. Lennon told the students to leave the bar.

Eight Thayer students also testified they had participated in a drinking game at the party called "Babe Ruth," a game played at a picnic table on the back porch of the house where Ping-pong balls are thrown at cups containing a shot of beer. The person in front of the cup that the ball goes in has to drink, the students said. Azulay told the court he played the game for about half an hour to 45 minutes and that both teens and at least one adult, Mr. Shalhob, took part in the game. The beer from the loud, rowdy game was taken from the keg and poured out of a clear pitcher, Azulay said.

Banchiere, unlike Azulay and Smith, did not drive home from the party. He told the court Mrs. Lennon took the keys of his former girlfriend and companion at the party, as soon as they arrived. Witness Jessica Bicknell of Seaview Avenue in Marshfield also slept at the Lennons', a practice she said was common for Thayer students visiting each other, since they came from several communities. Both said they were invited to stay by the Lennon's.

Thora Fernquist, mother of Thayer student Peter Fernquist, said she told her son to stay at the Lennons' overnight after she noticed beer in his cup.

"I was not pleased" that he had been drinking, she said. "I told him to behave himself and that he was staying the night there." Fernquist's voice wavered when she recounted details of the evening.

Banchiere said he had seen Smith serve himself from kegs of beer at the party and that Smith had been "rowdy and wild." Banchiere said he and Smith had been friends since the sixth grade. Bicknell, who had known Smith for four years, said she had seen him walking around with a cup in his hand.

Witness Allyson Khun of Hanover was the only teen who testified she had not consumed any alcoholic beverages at the party. Khun, who said she had known Smith for a year, said when she spoke to him at the party he was "very loud, very social and very loose."

Two witnesses, Kerri Mulligan of Marshfield and Courtney Wilkinson of Duxbury, broke down in tears while on the stand. Both were longtime friends of Smith.

Meghan Mullin of Westwood said she drank three or four beers from a keg on the Lennons' patio. She testified she saw Smith and Azulay carrying bottles of beer they had brought to the party.

Jake Borden, a Duxbury resident and Yale student, testified yesterday afternoon that he arrived at the party at 6:30 p.m. and left at 2:30 a.m. In the interim he consumed four beers from a keg at the party and two outside. He was never served or invited to drink while at the party. He drove home drunk.

Another witness, 17-year-old Danielle Bello, said Michael Lennon served her two beers from a keg at the party. Michael Lennon is the son of John Lennon. She said she never saw John Lennon during the party.

Judge Joseph Welch issued a warrant for the arrest of another teen witness, Douglas Cravanaugh, who failed to appear at the trial. Assistant District Attorney Jon Barooshian said Cravanaugh told him by phone he would be on vacation in California and unable to make the trial.

Gregory D. Smith, a resident of Emery Road in Marshfield, died June 23, 1996 when the car he was driving struck a Summer Street telephone pole. The 3:20 a.m. crash took place just two weeks after Smith graduated from Thayer Academy.

Based on information provided by minors who attended the party, Cohasset police sought charges of procuring alcohol for minors and contributing to the delinquency of a minor against Lennon one month after the crash. Lennon now faces 10 counts of providing alcohol to minors and one of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Police investigators estimated Smith was driving 56 miles per hour when he collided with the pole. Cohasset police said Smith's blood alcohol level revealed he had been drinking prior to the crash.

If convicted, Lennon could face up to six months in prison and a fine of $2,000 for providing alcohol to minors and up to a year in prison and a $500 fine for contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

During Lennon's first hearing, Clerk Magistrate Stephen Abany ruled there was not enough evidence to charge the Cohasset resident with contributing to the delinquency of a child, although he did issue a charge of providing alcohol to a minor. Cohasset police appealed the first ruling, saying the matter should be heard before a judge. Following a second hearing, in which a 16-year-old girl testified she had obtained liquor at the Lennon party, a Quincy District Court judge applied the delinquency charge to Lennon.

No criminal complaint has been brought against Lennon charging him with Smith's death, but the Smith family has filed a wrongful death suit against him.

Bernard Hamill, Lennon's attorney, asked Judge Welch not to mention Smith's death on Monday, the first day of the trial, according to published reports. Yet both assistant district attorneys prosecuting the case, Joseph Harrington and Barooshian, linked the accident to the party on Tuesday, according to the published report. Smith's mother, Donna Smith, also testified that day.

Hamill has previously denied that Smith received alcohol at Lennon's party and suggested that the teen obtained alcohol himself and brought it to the event. On Tuesday, Hamill argued that the 12 to 15 teens at the party brought their own beer to the party and continually tried to obtain alcohol from bartender Ernest J. Sullivan, a retired Cohasset firefighter. Although he acknowledged that teens drank at the party, he said his client never offered any alcohol to minors or encouraged them to drink.

plied for the position, which will pay $60,000 a year to start. They narrowed the field down to two finalists. They interviewed Haddad and Daniel Young, former finance director in Beverly, last week for the second time. Monday, they invited the two men back again to be interviewed in front of the cameras.

Although they said both candidates were excellent, selectmen voted unanimously to appoint Haddad.

Haddad, an Andover native, graduated from Merrimack College with a bachelor of arts in political science and obtained a masters in public administration from Suffolk University.

He has worked in Littleton, which is similar in size to Cohasset, since 1988. Haddad first served as executive secretary there and then as town administrator when the position was upgraded 1-1/2 years ago. His experience also includes serving in Acton as acting assistant town manager, administrative assistant to the executive secretary and board of selectmen, acting town accountant and acting deputy assessor.

Haddad, who said he will move to the area, said his strong suit is working with the budget and said he streamlined the process in Littleton by putting together a budget booklet.

While he likes his situation in Littleton, Haddad said it was time to move on.

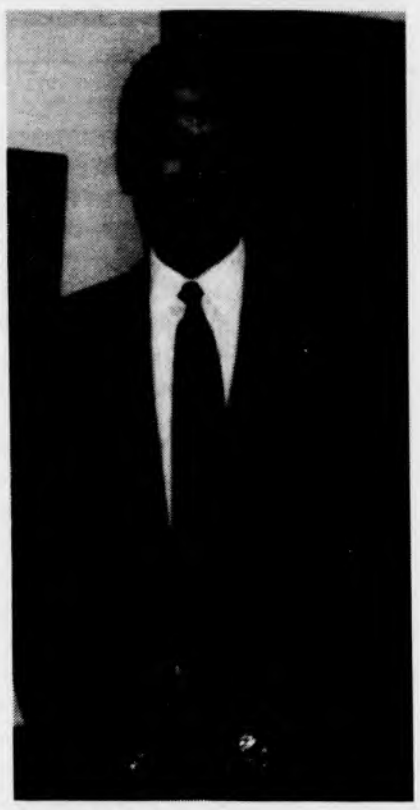
"It's a great town and a great situation, but however I need to grow in the profession and move on to other challenges," he said.

Haddad said he fully understood the difference between a town administrator and town manager, who has considerably more authority.

He said while he would keep selectmen informed, they wouldn't have to be involved in the mundane day-to-day business of the town.

"I'm a hard worker and I'm dedicated. I hope the board has a tough decision to make this evening. I will always give 150 percent," he said.

Selectmen acknowledged that Haddad was younger and less experienced than Young, who served as town manager in Derry, New Hampshire before moving to Beverly as finance director 11 years ago. But they liked Haddad's desire to move up and his desire to face challenges head on.



While both candidates were strong in the municipal finance area, Michael Sullivan said Haddad has "an extra level of creativity."

Selectman Diane Sullivan said she liked the fact that Haddad had been in Littleton for nine years and said he had a "proven track record" in his ability to get along with all department heads.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she sees Haddad as a "better fit for Cohasset" because Littleton is of similar size. She said she didn't feel Young's interpersonal skills were as strong as Haddad's.

Michael Sullivan and Selectman Nan Roth will form a subcommittee to negotiate a three-year contract with Haddad.

Haddad said Tuesday he will stay in Littleton through that town's special town meeting July 28 and hopes to be on board by the first or second week in August. His wife is Angela and they have a son Philip, 4 months.

Interim Town Administrator Ed McCann said he would stay on until selectmen had the new town manager in place.

The switch to town manager was approved at the annual town meting over objections from a majority of selectmen and the advisory committee. The government structure committee worked with citizen petitioners in drafting the text of the town manager article.

Mosquitoes are back in force

Individual homeowners can help curb the mosquitoes by the following measures:

1) If you have a birdbath, shallow wading pool, pet's water dish, or any similar outdoor water container, change the water every two or three days. Mosquitoes breed only in stagnant water.

2) If the gutters on your house are clogged with leaves or debris so that water does not flow freely through the downspouts during a rain storm, clean the gutters.

3) If a stream or ditch runs through your property, make sure that the water is free-flowing. Remove debris, stones, brush, leaves, or other material which may clog the watercourse.

4) If you have a small pond (100 square feet or less), growth of mosquito larvae can be controlled by treating the water with a product containing Bacillus thuringiensis israelensis (Bti). Such products include Mosquito Dunks, Vectobac, Bionide (Bti), etc. These products are usually available at hardware stores or garden centers. Bti is not harmful to humans, pets, or other species which may feed on mosquito larvae.

5) If you have a larger pond on, or adjacent to, your property, it can be treated with the same larvicide by the Plymouth County Mosquito Control District, which can be reached at (617) 585-5450. The PCMCD will treat such areas with larvicide only if larvae exist in numbers sufficient to justify the application.

To supplement information already on file, the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee is trying to locate and map potential problem areas in the town where mosquitoes may breed. Please report any natural areas of standing water in your neighborhood by calling 383-9900, Ext. 121.

Peter Plante graduates from St. Coletta's in Braintree

By Robert Ziff
CORRESPONDENT

When Peter Plante was born 22 years ago with Down's syndrome and a variety of other handicaps, including severe heart defects, there was little thought given to what school he would graduate from.

But now that day has come to pass. Peter, who as an infant was the first baby to have a pacemaker implant, has graduated with eight of his peers from Braintree's St. Coletta's Day School.

The teachers, staff, and the student body of 71 will all miss him. He has been described as being "a very special person with quite a personality."

The youngest of six, Peter's schooling began in the special education program at the Osgood School where he did very well. But after a while he reached a point where he could go no further and transferred to St. Coletta's. St. Coletta's caters to those between the ages of 3 and 22 who have special needs and multiple disabilities ranging from moderate to severe. There is an extremely high student to teacher ratio, and it is not uncommon to have as few as two or three students per class. St. Coletta's School marks its 40th anniversary in 1997.

George Baker, who has been teaching Peter life and related skills for the past six years said, "Peter is a great guy who has made huge progress since he has been my student.

"He wouldn't break any speed records, but what he does is meticulous almost to the point of perfection. I'll miss him a lot.

"Peter is quite the charmer, always after the ladies," he said.

In testimony to this fact, Peter received the school Flirt Award that was presented to him at graduation in the crowded school gym.

Peter's mother Maria Plante, who has lived in Cohasset with her husband Patrick for the past 37 years said, "It's a happy-sad day for me. I'm very proud of Peter. He has made such great progress at St. Coletta's and the staff there are incredibly caring and experts at what they do."

Peter, who is also visually and hearing impaired, is slated to begin the Harbor Industries Program in North Weymouth, this month, however there will be a gradual transition into this program. There he hopes to continue from where he left off.

The sense of accomplishment and victory that arises from conquering personal handicaps and graduating from school, can easily outweigh, or at least be compared to, those of non-handicapped students graduating from traditional schools. There is another level of work besides learning math, history and English, that Peter has successfully confronted and accomplished. This includes skills that most of us take for granted in everyday life including people and communication skills.

Peter Plante gives his brother, Patrick, a kiss after his graduation from St. Coletta's in Braintree.

EEE packets available

Packets containing basic information on Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and general measures for mosquito control are available at three Cohasset sites: Town Hall (in a receptacle mounted on the large billboard), the Community Center, and the Paul Pratt Library.

This information has been provided by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the Audubon Society, and the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee (CMCC). For further information call 383-9900, ext. 121, or leave a note in the CMCC mailbox in town hall

Stay away from construction

School officials said construction of the new school behind the existing Deer Hill School is underway. They urge citizens to stay away from the site for safety reasons.

Where to get R.T.F. stickers

Beginning Monday, July 14, R.T.F. stickers will no longer be available at the R.T.F. during weekend hours. Stickers may be purchased at either the town hall or at the new D.P.W. facility during regular business hours.

Old beach, RTF permits expired

Your permits have expired. Beach and recycling transfer facility permits are now available at the town hall Monday to Thursday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Thursday evening 4:30 to 7 p.m., and Friday 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Beach stickers are $7 per vehicle and $3 per vehicle for elders over 60. RTF stickers are $65, $25 for second vehicle, if application made at a different time, and $33 for a sole resident. You will need vehicle registrations or if not, a Massachusetts registration, proof of residency (tax bill or rental lease). You are encouraged to purchase both stickers through the mail by providing a copy of your registration and a self-addressed return envelope. RTF stickers may be purchased at the RTF.

Permits now being issued will expire May 31, 1998, which reflects the bylaw change at town meeting March 25, 1995.

PRUDENTIAL/HALLMARK SETS SALES RECORDS

Cohasset – Prudential Prime/Hallmark 100 Properties Ltd. reported a record-breaking volume of $50 million in sales for the first half of 1997 announced the firm's president, Chris Ford.

Number One Market Share

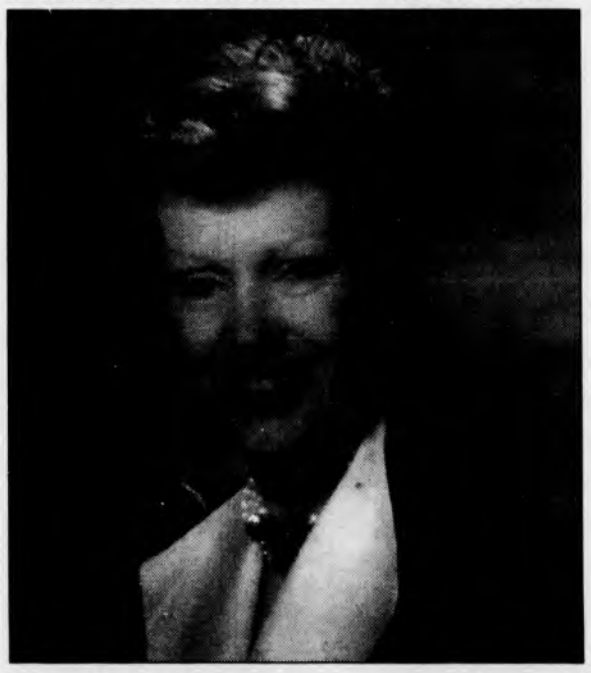
"Our year-to-date sales figures are 58 percent ahead of the same period for last year," stated Ford. "Our combined Prudential Prime/Hallmark 100 market share places us number one in the four-town market of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate where our four offices are located."

Prudential Acquisition

"In May of this year we acquired the Prudential franchise for our marketplace and we are already seeing a dramatic increase in relocation activity and inquiries to our expanded web site on the internet," stated Ford. "We are also seeing the benefits of a national TV marketing campaign for Prudential Value Range Marketing."

Record Internet Inquiries

"During the first two weeks of June we had a total of more than 20,000 inquiries at our site www.hallmark100.com including over 400 inquiries from Asia and Australia!" reported Ford. "In the first week of July we had a $500,000 contract in Hingham resulting from an internet inquiry that originated in London!"



Meallo Named Number One!

Paula Meallo was named the number one sales associate for the first half of 1997 with a record six months sales volume in excess of five million dollars. "This is the highest six-month volume by an individual agent in the history of the company," stated Ford. "Once again Paula has demonstrated that her formula of quiet consistency combined with quality relationship building yields solid long-term results."

HALEY MAKES HER DEBUT

For quite some time now, Ruthann Ardizzoni has been making headlines in all of the local papers, she is an outstanding gymnastic coach! Well, move over, Ruthann, Hayley Marie Ardizzoni is in the headlines this week! Hayley is the new daughter of Ruthann and Thomas Ardizzoni. She was born June 11 and weighed 7 lbs. 12 oz. Her maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sargent of Cohasset; her paternal grandmother is Mrs. Bruna Ardizzoni of Hanover. Can't you just imagine all of the fun they will have with Hayley? We'll bet that she'll be "on the mats" before she is a year old! Congratulations to all of you!

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

Happy belated birthday greetings go to Ricki (Troy) Aikau, all the way in Hawaii (still)! Ricki celebrated her 50th July 3, she and her whole family (including all the grandchildren) went camping for the long weekend — we trust that all had tons of fun, great surf, and a nice luau! We love you!

There were two other birthdays earlier this week that we cannot let go by without mentioning! My daughter, Kim Litchfield, had her birthday July 8, and Anita Bernstein celebrated hers July 9. Neither one wanted to give away their ages, so "mum's the word" — just be sure to give them your regards when you see them! It always means so much!

48TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

How is this for a celebration? JayJay and Tom Healy celebrated their 48th wedding anniversary with their son Bob and his wife Patti and grandchildren Bryan and Samantha. Bassing Beach was the spot, they all dined on steak, lobster and champagne, and we are willing to bet that it was one of their most memorable anniversaries ever! Please let us add our best wishes to your special day, we are glad to hear it was such a wonderful one! Here's to many more!

DEER HILL GRADUATION

Deer Hill School held its graduation June 23, and two of its students received the highest honor that is awarded on that day — everyone is so proud of Martha Henderson and David Crowley-Buck, they were the co-winners of the Scholastic Citizenship Athletic Award. That award is a real tribute to these kiddos, and a wonderful way for them to begin their new adventures at Cohasset Middle School. Isn't it great to have a class with two outstanding leaders!

HONORS

Trevor Vincent Stockinger, a former resident of Cohasset and student at Cohasset High, graduated summa cum laude from Washington and Lee University June 5. He is the son of Bernadette and Sig Stockinger of Knoxville, Tenn. Trevor, an East Asian Studies major, also won the Department Award. He competed as honors thesis, "Reform and Reformation? Religious Policy in Post-Mao China." As a junior, he spent the year studying and interning in Beijing. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Eta Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, the International Club, Chamber Singers, the Concert Guild and was a Rhodes candidate. Trevor will join the Foundation for Teaching Economies as director of development in Davis, Calif.

Recycling the old garage

That pinkish building in the town parking lot is stirring up some interest of late.

Tony Bramblett, 3 Grace Dr., presented an interesting proposal for recycling the old highway garage to selectmen this week.

Speaking for the drug & alcohol committee, on which he is a member, he suggested the garage be turned into a community facility and teen dance hall.

There would be a policy of no drugs or alcohol.

"It would be an asset to the community," Tony said.

Selectmen discussed a similar proposal weeks back. They think the building might make a better site for a teen center than the Independence Building on South Main Street because it has more space.

So this week, they gave Tony a warm reception.

"It's worth exploring," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

They plan to have a formal discussion on the proposal at a special D&A committee task force meeting July 23. At that time, Mr. Sullivan said they would explore establishing a subcommittee to investigate the feasibility of the project.

Selectman Diane Sullivan seemed particularly enthusiastic that this was something teenagers could design and set up so they could "create their own space."

We'll be watching as this idea is explored. It sounds like a positive use for an old garage. We wish Tony and the rest of the D&A committee luck with the proposal.

On a related note toCohasset parents, don't forget to fill out the CASA form on page 16. Modeled after the Safe Homes program, CASA means making a commitment not to allow underage drinking or drug use in your home.

Please take a minute to fill out the form and send it to or drop it off at the town hall on Highland Ave., attention: the Drug and Alcohol Committee.

JULY IS NATIONAL PARK & RECREATION MONTH

To the Editor:

The month of July is set aside each year as National Park and Recreation Month.

Recreators throughout the USA share common objectives and goals, the most universal, perhaps being, to encourage people to participate in leisure-time activities. More acutely stated, recreators would like to see everyone participate in new and unfamiliar, as well as the more familiar activities. Not everyone will be inclined to participate in new, or different activities, but those who do, should be well rewarded for their efforts.

Recreation can manifest in countless ways and as a discipline, recreation has no concrete boundaries or exclusions. The classical definition of recreation states a prerequisite condition, in that it must be the "constructive use of leisure time." Whether or not leisure-time pursuits must be "constructive," may at best be a philosophical question. "Constructive" in this sense may not refer to productivity, but rather, may mean to cognitively plan or structure time for leisure pursuits. That is, we do not need to perform constructively, but need only to provide some sort of format and time for our leisure pursuits.

Recreation can be a very relative and personal sort of endeavor and we must remember, that what may be recreation for one individual, could be a life's work for another individual. If there were any prerequisite conditions to recreation, it very well might be that the activity should provide us diversion from life's daily chores.

As a socially inclined species, man has an inherent need to socialize and recreational activity often satisfies this need, as well as other basic inclinations. We can recreate in group settings, or quietly alone and whichever format seems most appealing to us at a given time remains dynamic and relative to other factors. Often, we pursue recreational activity as an emotional, as well as physical diversion from our daily lives and in this respect, recreation can often be therapeutic.

It is important for us to understand that we must schedule recreation into the structure of our daily activities. Like many other good intentions that we all have, our time for recreating can often be displaced by other, seemingly more urgent and pressing aspects of our lives. Left to chance alone, many of us would be negligent, providing recreational time and opportunity.

We learn to recreate, largely through developed habit. That is, we develop the habit of seeking leisure activity, often at a very young age, from access and exposure to opportunity. In this sense, recreation is education. One of the most vital charges of public recreation is to provide all residents with equal access and exposure to leisure opportunity.

This particular charge is important as it relates to all aged residents, but especially vital regarding children's services. Through access and exposure to recreational opportunity, children develop the habit of recreating. That is, they learn to seek leisure-time activities through reinforced opportunity. Once learned and developed, the habit of pursuing leisure-activity, should serve us well for a life-time.

Recreation can be anything you desire it to be and may serve or not serve and purpose. It may be productive, or non-productive, provide, or not provide any source of exercise. However, recreation should provide us with gratification, enjoyment and diversion from life's daily activities. Keep an open mind to new and different sorts of activities, set aside structured and appropriate time for leisure activity. As the slogan says: "LIFE, BE IN IT!"

District Attorney Locke's statement on Kennedy case

The following is a statement released at a press conference Tuesday by Norfolk County District Attorney Jeffrey Locke

Ten weeks ago following the publication of a story in The Boston Globe regarding Michael Kennedy, I announced that this office, together with the Cohasset Police, would conduct a preliminary review of allegations that Michael Kennedy had a sexual relationship with the babysitter of his children at a time when the young woman was under the age of 16. I indicated at that time that I would have no further statement during the pendency of that review.

Today, I am announcing the conclusion of that preliminary review.

We have conducted our review in conjunction with state police detectives, the Cohasset Police Department, and members of our victim-witness services unit. I have personally directed this effort in concert with First Assistant District Attorney John Kivlan and the chief of our sexual assault unit, Jeanmarie Carroll. We have attempted to conduct this review, as we do all criminal investigations, out of the public spotlight and in a manner which inspires a spirit of trust and cooperation. Despite our best efforts, there has been a barrage of media headlines fed by private parties out to advance their own personal agendas at the expense of the truth seeking mission of law enforcement. Those individuals, as well as the various reporters who encouraged such leaks, know who they are. I am satisfied that there were no unauthorized disclosures of this investigation coming from law enforcement officials that personally participated in this review.

In light of the extensive media disclosures regarding this case and the consequent public awareness of it, I believe it is necessary and proper to share some of the facts surrounding our review. First, it is important to realize the scope of the review that has been conducted by this office. By law, it is our duty and obligation to investigate and, where appropriate, prosecute violations of the criminal laws. Here, we considered potential violations of our sexual assault and related criminal laws insofar as Mr. Kennedy's alleged conduct involved sexual intercourse with a person under the age of 16. The victim in this case reached the age of 16 at the end of January 1994. It is important to note this date because although there have been media reports of various events and conduct by and between Mr. Kennedy and the victim occurring after that date, these events, while helpful in determining the nature and extent of their relationship, could not serve as a basis for criminal prosecution for statutory rape.

Our investigation has focused on two critical issues. First, whether Michael Kennedy engaged in sexual intercourse with the babysitter of his children at any time before the end of January 1994; and second, whether there is sufficient evidence admissible in a court of law to sustain such a charge.

In order to answer these two questions, attorneys from this office and investigators have conducted numerous interviews with persons who had some information or knowledge relating to the case. Among those interviewed were the victim, her father, and members of the Kennedy family. Mr. Kennedy declined our invitation to be interviewed. We also reviewed information developed by and through the media and followed numerous evidentiary investigative leads. Based on our review of all of the evidence, it is clear that the cooperation and involvement of the victim and her family in this case would be a critical component of a prosecution. However, without the willing involvement of the victim, there is no basis to proceed further. This is because when all is said and done we have not determined the existence of any independent, compelling and direct evidence demonstrating a sexual relationship prior to the end of January 1994.

We have considered whether or not to compel the victim's participation as well as that of others in a formal grand jury investigation. The victim, through her attorney, has made it clear that she would not willingly participate, and indeed, would seek to invoke her Fifth Amendment Right not to testify. More significantly, however, is our policy consideration regarding the appropriateness of compelling the victim in a sexual assault case to testify against her will. It has been and continues to be the policy of this office, and of most prosecutors' offices around the country, not to force a victim in a sexual assault case of proceeding and participating in the criminal justice process. In determining whether or not that policy should apply in the instant case, I have considered the victim's desires, her emotional well-being, and her current state of mind. I have also considered the intense public scrutiny that she would be subject to if this case were to proceed in court. Although we have reviewed the evidence in this case as we would in any case of sexual assault irregardless of the prominence of the parties involved, nonetheless, it is appropriate to estimate and measure the anticipated trauma that would occur to the victim were this case to proceed in court. I have determined that we will honor the victim's desires and not commence a grand jury investigation at this time.

To those who suggest that we have caved into the pressures of the Kennedy family in not going forward at this time, I respond that I will not sacrifice the emotional well-being of a young woman for political or prosecutorial gain. I have, however, informed the victim in private and do so here today publicly, that this office stands ready, willing and able to pursue this investigation should she and her family feel prepared to participate.

Thank you very much.

Under the state statute the girl could change her mind over the next 12 years and decide to bring charges against Kennedy.

For his part, Kennedy issued a brief statement Tuesday, which read, "I deeply apologize for the pain I have caused. I intend to do all I can to make up for the serious mistakes I have made and to continue to obtain the help I need. I know it will be difficult, but I hope that in time the (baby sitter's) family will forgive me. I also hope that my wife and children will forgive me, and that I can someday earn and deserve their confidence again.

"There is nothing more I can say without contributing further to the pain I have inflicted on so many people, especially my wife and children."

Published reports indicate that Kennedy's wife, Victoria Gifford Kennedy, has moved out of their Cohasset home and has purchased a home in Milton.

Through the investigation, Locke and his team interviewed numerous people, including the baby sitter, her parents, Kennedy's wife and one of Kennedy's cousins. Sources close to Locke said it was critical for him to investigate and follow this through to the end.

"Otherwise, people would have thought he was letting a Kennedy off the hook," one source said.

In addressing that issue, Locke said in his statement, "to those who suggest that we have caved into the pressures of the Kennedy family in not going forward at this time, I respond that I will not sacrifice the emotional well-being of a young woman for political or prosecutorial gain. I have, however, informed the victim in private and do so here today publicly, that this office stands ready, willing and able to pursue this investigation should she and her family feel prepared to participate."

80-foot flagpole on town common comes down

Aluminum replacement is planned, selectmen say

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

It wasn't the first time that the flagpole in the town common has come down.

But Tuesday morning, it was a first for the DPW workers who helped fell the 80-foot pole like a tree.

A notch was cut out near the cement base and the pole was pulled over toward the church, DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield explained.

Selectmen directed Litchfield to remove the pole when a painter discovered a large area of dry rot near the base. The pole will be replaced by a white aluminum one at a cost of about $10,000. It's not clear how the town will pay for the replacement.

The original pole, which was 100 feet tall, was installed on June 11, 1915, in memory of George G. Crocker, according to historical commission records.

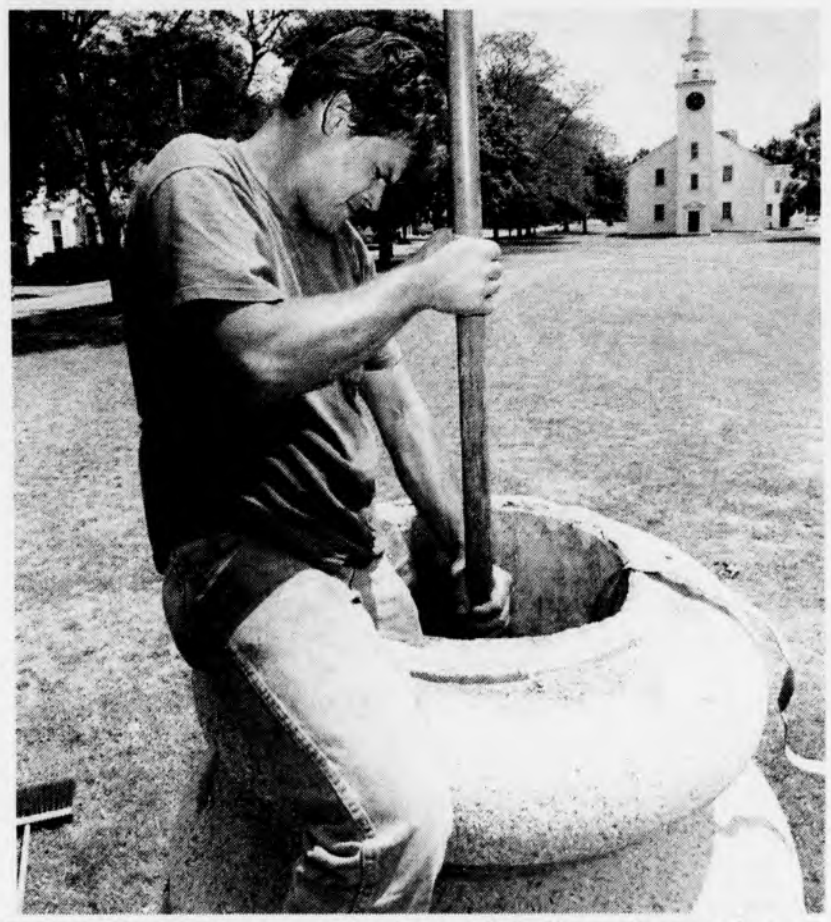
Crocker's great-grandson Davenport B. Crocker, who lives in town, said that his father, George G. Crocker III, was about 9 when the pole went up.

"My father raised the first flag," Crocker said.

According to town records, on March 22, 1915, selectmen voted to accept the gift of George G. Crocker Jr. of the pole in memory of his father who was born in 1843 and died in 1913. The elder Crocker, a lawyer, who summered on Jerusalem Road, served as president of the Massachusetts state senate.

He was also president of the Boston Transit authority and proposed the first subway.

"He turned the first shovel full," recalls Dr. Anne Wight Phillips, Crocker's granddaughter.



In about 1940, the pole was replaced with the 80-foot one, which was taken down yesterday, town historian David Wadsworth said. Town records say the original pole also suffered from dry rot.

Wadsworth said the 1915 pole wasn't the first one on the common. The first was further south in front of the town hall. It was installed in 1861 by W. B. Johnson.

Litchfield had hoped to salvage the top 25 feet of the pole to use in front of the new DPW garage off Cedar Street. But the pole shattered when it fell. Litchfield said the top also had dry rot.

DPW workers cut up the pole. Most pieces were taken to the dump but Litchfield kept a few pieces at the garage.

The base was cleaned out and the part of the pole in the ground was yanked out, Litchfield said.

Barry Butman cleans out the base of the flagpole after it was removed due to rot.

CRANK CALLS

▶When an automobile's starting system cannot exert sufficient power to crank the engine enough to start it, the problem can usually be traced to the battery, alternator, voltage regulator, or the electrical wiring that connects these components. The battery's job is to provide electrical power for the starter motor when the ignition switch is turned. The starter motor gear engages the engine flywheel to crank and start the engine. The battery expends a considerable amount of energy each time it powers the starter motor. The charging system which is comprised of the alternator and voltage regulator, provides current that restores the battery to full charge after it has used its energy to run the starter motor.

▶If your car is sluggish starting, don't wait until you can't move out of the driveway before bringing it in to be checked out. Prevention of greater problems later is worth a small investment now to save you aggravation down the road. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, we routinely exceed customer expectations. We provide the highest value to our customers by offering quality service, technical excellence, and competitive rates. Visit us at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A (383-9090).

HINT
Because the alternator and voltage regulator are usually reliable, any apparent reduction in current should first prompt a check of the alternator belt, which can reduce the current output of the alternator and cause the battery to run down if it is loose.

Parents asked to commit to C.A.S.A.

The Drug and Alcohol Awareness Committee with the support of the police, the Cohasset schools and the selectmen will mail an informational brochure to the parents of children in grades 6 through 12 entitled C.A.S.A. (Cohasset Against Substance Abuse).

C.A.S.A. was formerly entitled Safe Homes. In the past Safe Homes helped parents network a safe home environment. The need to reinstate a support network has become evident because of the presence of alcohol and drugs among our youth. Parents are concerned about the alarming increase in alcohol and drug use among our youth, and social acceptability of this use. Communicating and networking among parents has been proven to be effective in the past under Safe Homes. All parents of children in grades 6 through 12 are asked to participate in this program by taking a stand and by showing your concern for the health and well-being of young people.

Please read and fill out the form which is reprinted here and which will be enclosed in the C.A.S.A. mailing. Be sure to check off the box at the bottom and mail it back before August 31. Forms can be mailed to town hall/attn. the drug & alcohol committee. A booklet with the names of the participants will be mailed out in the fall to all parents with children in grades 6 through 12. Signing this form will be our first stand in making a commitment against substance abuse.

Last Chapel and Derby Day exercises held last month in Hingham

Derby Academy's end-of-year ceremonies, Last Chapel and Derby Day Exercises, took place recently at the Hingham independent school. Last Chapel has a special focus on the awarding of certificates to those eighth-graders who are leaving the school. Derby Day is the graduation ceremony for the ninth-grade class and also includes the Derby Lecture, established by the will of Madame Sarah Derby and delivered this year for the 206th time.

At Last Chapel, held in Sarah Derby Hall, Trustee President Bruce Minevitz awarded certificates to the following students from Hingham and Cohasset: Natalie Cahill, Renee Courchesne, Christine Driscoll, Frederick Fawcett, Caitlin Gardiner, Adrianne Kriegstein, Patrick Lenehan, Laura Mangurian, Jason Riley, all of Hingham; Geoffrey McWilliams, Corinna Noering, Morgan Pierson, all of Cohasset.

Last Chapel also includes athletic, academic and art awards, and two speeches, the Ninth-Grade Address and the Faculty Address. The "Derbies" won this year's girls' intra-mural competition. Captain Christine Harlow of Kingston accepted the trophy. Spencer Balboni of Duxbury accepted the trophy as captain of the winning boys' team.

Academic awards for achievement were presented to the following students: James Simons of Cohasset won the James Hall/Hingham Historical Society History Prize and the Wheelwright Family Prize in English. Wiley Wakeman of Cohasset won the Coyle/Driscoll Art Award. Jackson Shafer of Duxbury won the Francis Ranieri Math Award and the Zildljian Music Award. Renee Courchesne of Hingham won the Susan Feins Science Prize. Timothy Gravel of Hingham and James Simons, the two academically top-ranked ninth-graders, were designated Parade Marshalls for the Academic Procession on Derby Day.

Student Council President Elliot Noon of Cohasset presented the ninth-grade gift to Headmaster Edward R. Foley. Timothy Gravel gave the ninth-grade address; the faculty address was given by Janet Evans-Fuller.

Highlights of Derby Day included the Upper School Musical "Grease," a luncheon honoring the class of 1997, the academic procession from the school's campus to the New North Church, academic awards, faculty recognition, the awarding of diplomas, the 206th Derby Lecture and an alumni/ae reception at Old Derby Academy.

Upper School students in Grades 7 through 9 received Honor Book Awards in recognition of having earned an A- or above in all academic subjects for the entire year. The recipients were Renee Courchesne, Caroline Curtis, Timothy Gravel, Adrianne Kriegstein, Patrick Lenehan, Andrew Mayer, Daniel Rizzotto, Pamela Wessling, all of Hingham; Charles Anderson, Kara Gaughen, Corinna Noering, all of Cohasset.

Cohasset American Legion team stays on the rise

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

In 1996, Cohasset American Legion coach Scott Arnold just wanted his first-year team to be competitive and win a couple games while laying the foundation for bigger and better years to come.

Mission accomplished.

This year, Arnold set a goal of getting his team above the .500 mark.

Only time will tell, but it looks like the Cohasset nine is well on their way to making their coach look like a suitable replacement for Jeanne Dixon.

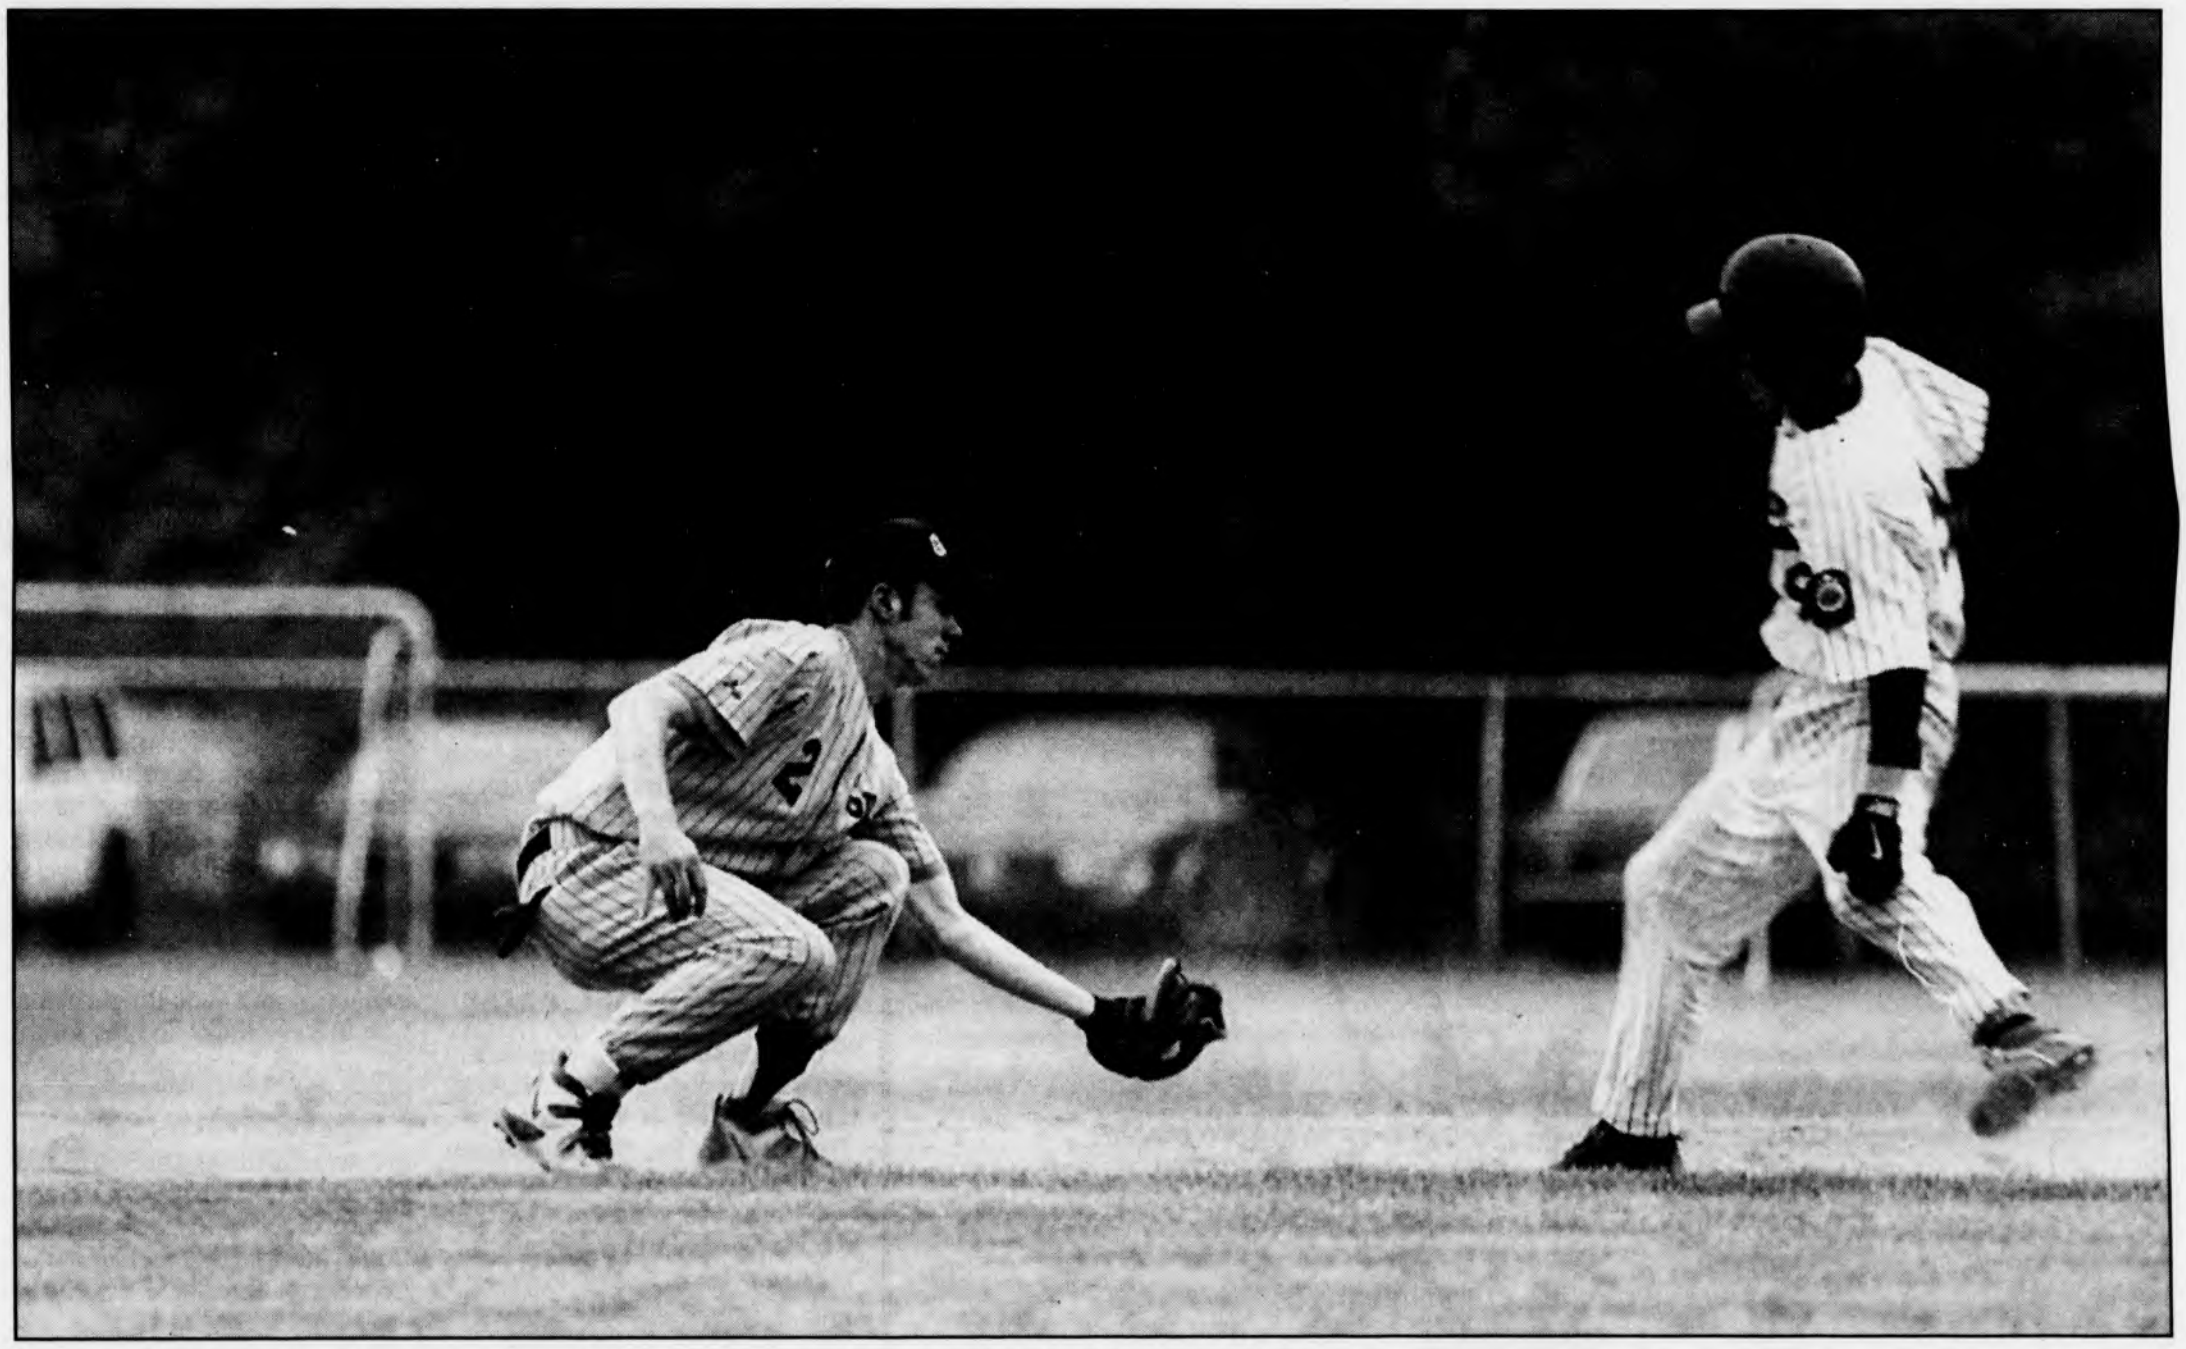
"We're starting to come together as a team. I like the direction that the team is going," said Arnold, a war veteran and member of the local American Legion post who put together the team last year some young local baseball hardcore's would have something to do in the summer months.

As of the this week the squad was a respectable 4-6, with wins coming against Morrisette (2), Canton and Quincy.

One victory stands out in a particular, said Arnold.

"The game we won against Morrisette early in the season had to be the biggest win we've seen since we've been in existance," said Arnold. "To beat a team like them on their own field with all of the tradition they have had in American Legion ball was really something."

But for every Morrisette game their must be games against much larger towns such as Weymouth, a loss that Arnold said may have humbled his team a little bit.



The team is made up of players from Cohasset and Scituate, all between 16- and 19-years-old, who use the 20-25 legion games as an extension of their high school sports season.

"It's a pretty intensive season," said Arnold, calling the legion ball "high caliber baseball in a short period of time," with as many as four or five games scheduled per week.

Arnold credited an improving pitching staff as a major impetus to the success of his team.

Cohasset High School sophomore Joe Pergola has picked up two of the wins, while Jared Connelly, a South

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

Reeling in the big ones

"Honk!" a car roared by.

"Honk honk!" another.

We squinted in the afternoon sun to see the exact spot the quivering needle of the scale would stop at. Twenty-three pounds three ounces read the Chatillion. Then the tape measure, from the tip of the nose to the furthest reach of the wide tail, recording the length. Thirty-eight inches.

"So how did you catch it Frank?" I asked.

"I used a tube and worm," he recalled matter-of-factly.

"Whereabouts did you catch it?"

"Yeah right!" he retorted, "You don't think I'm going to tell you my secret spot do you?" We both laughed.

There were lots of laughs and successful smiles as the scale creaked under successive keepers this holiday weekend. Paul Hansell was busy cutting up pogies, flicking the shaved bits into the water at the marsh's edge when the sudden swirl of a huge bass right next to him put him in adrenaline overdrive. Next thing he knew his knife had become part of the chum slick. That was strike one of a triad of trouble for the well-known angler. Later that day while fighting a big bass, the pole Paul was using jackknifed and snapped under the strain. He could only watch in frustration as the tip slid down the taut line into the water. The pole failure only slowed him down.

Fishing is quite different Paul said when you've only got a foot pole and one guide to use. That was strike two. The third came when Paul's well-used (understatement) reel started skipping gears and had to come in to the workbench for repairs. Paul was undaunted however by this string of luck and was right out there

Golf Scholarship Open Set

The new Widow's Walk Golf Course will be the site of this year's Knights of Columbus Golf Scholarship Open. Proceeds will be earmarked for the K of C scholarship fund, which over the past 30 years has donated thousands of dollars to worthy local high school students.

This year's tournament is scheduled for Aug. 8, with a tee time of 8:30 a.m. The format will be "Scramble," with a limit of 30 fivesomes. Cost is $100 per player, which includes a post-tournament dinner at the K of C hall, raffles, prize holes, and $500 and $250 credits to the Widow's Walk Pro Shop for the first and second place teams.

Tournament director John McNamara notes that "this is a chance to play charity golf on a new championship course, and with the excitement surrounding the course opening, we expect reservations to fill quickly." The par 72 course, designed by renowned golf architect Dr. Michael Hurdzan, is a unique blend of Scottish Links-style and classic American Golf Architecture. Course pro Bob Sanderson adds that "both the landscape and the unusually windy conditions will challenge all levels of players."

A deadline of July 15 has been set for applications, which can be obtained by calling McNamara at 800-848-9287.

Cash investments are an important part of your financial portfolio

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Cash investments are not the little darlings of Wall Street. They haven't rocketed upward by 94 percent in the last two and a half years as the stock market has (for cash securities, five percent might be a good year). What's more, they lack the excitement (and risk) of other investments because their value is essentially known - it's easy to figure out the return on a Treasury Bill held to maturity.

WORTH

But those shortcomings are not necessarily reasons to exclude cash securities from your portfolio. Why? Because they are extremely safe hedges against all that could go wrong. And, while their steadfastedness will probably be a drag on your portfolio returns, they balance out the volatility of your stock holdings. Cautious investors value their stability, especially those who believe that a big drop in the stock market is inevitable.

Besides, if inflation booms and the Federal Reserve raises interest rates - as some strategists foresee - those boring money market funds, Treasury bills, bank certificates, and even corporate bonds might be your best friend. They will maintain your investment capital while giving you a little something to account for inflation.

A study by Neuberger & Berman best explains the trade-off. In return for giving up a bit of stocks' historically high returns, you can significantly decrease your portfolio's volatility - that is, the size and frequency of your portfolios' price movements. For instance, if you had invested in a Standard & Poor's 500 Index fund from 1960 to 1996, you would have received an average 11.09 percent annual return with a volatility of 14.55 percent (its average deviation in price from quarter to quarter).

But if you had stashed half of that money in one-month Treasury bills, keeping the other half in stocks, you would have cut the portfolio's volatility in half while your compounded annual return would slip to 8.76 percent - only a 21 percent decline.

Other ratios of equities to one-month Treasury bills produce different results, but the relationship is always the same; the higher the equity allocation the higher the volatility. According to the Neuberger & Berman study, a 70/30 allocation of stock to cash would yield 9.75 percent a year, while allowing for a volatility of 10.16 percent.

With the stock market constantly rocketing to new highs, however, most investors - from Wall Street to Main Street - aren't interested in lowering their risk. Instead, they have largely dumped cash safeguards and embraced the risks of the stock market, because they haven't witnessed any prolonged market slumps in awhile.

"The art of using cash [to hedge against market risks] has almost disappeared in the last few years, because [cash] has so miserably under-performed stocks and bonds" says Roy M. Blumberg, chief investment strategist at Josephthal, Lyon & Ross. While the S&P 500 rose 20 percent last year, most cash investments gained about a fourth of that.

What's more, any one who has had a glimpse of the Ibbotson Associate's graph, comparing the 1996 value of a dollar invested in 1925, knows that stocks are the best long-term bet.

A dollar put into large company stocks was worth about $1,371 at the end of the period, while a dollar in Treasury bills would have appreciated to $13.54.

So, no wonder the mantra of the stock market has become much like that of the lottery: You have to play to win. And no wonder investors' snub of cash investments and the pressure put on many money managers to stay fully invested (that means using cash immediately to buy stocks).

However, now may be the time to listen to the skeptical rumblings of those who believe caution is advisable. More than a few financial strategists are predicting that this year strong economic growth will spur inflation, and the Federal Reserve will hike interest rates to contain it.

"In the next six months, I believe [the stock market] is going down," says Peter Anderson, chief investment officer at American Express Financial Corp., which manages $160 billion. "My economic scenario sees renewed economic growth and then the Fed tightening [rates] not just once but several times."

This conviction has compelled some money managers in his firm to raise their cash positions recently. The firm's Diversified Equity and Income Fund, for example, raised its cash allocation to 21 percent from 11 percent at the end of May. An economic boom and higher interest rates wouldn't hurt short-term debt, like T-bills or commercial paper, because after each security reaches maturity you (or a money market fund manager) can buy another one whose return has been adjusted to account for higher rates.

Managers at Josephthal are also going back to cash. "In the last couple weeks we have added some cash equivalents to even our aggressive portfolios," Blumberg says. "We don't care if we are a little early [preparing for a correction]."

"Earning a little less won't hurt you in the long run like participating in a large decline will" he adds.

Understanding different "risks"

- Market risk- An investment may lose its value when traded on financial markets. The result? You could receive less than you paid for an investment when you sell it.
- Credit risk- The issuer of an investment may not live up to its financial obligations. The result? A default by the issuing corporation could make you lose your invested capital or expected interest payments.
- Inflation risk- The value of a long-term asset (a stock, for example) may not grow enough to keep up with inflation The result? Reduced purchasing power.
- Reinvestment risk- Interest rates may fall as an investment matures. The result? You may be unable to reinvest matured assets at a rate you have become accustomed to receiving.
- Liquidity risk- You may be unable to liquidate an "asset" when you want and at the price you want. The result? You may be forces to retain the asset , or decide to accept less than you wanted to receive for the sake of liquidity.

South Shore athletes fired up for the Bay State Games

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

So what's an aspiring athlete to do?

It's the middle of the summer, school's out and all of the sports leagues are either filled up or too far away for you to take part and you can't get a decent game of hoop going down at the school yard, but you still want to find a way to get some time to work on your game.

What to do?

Hello Bay State Games.

Sponsored by the Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation, the Bay State Games is now in its 16th year. Established in 1982 to promote and nurture opportunities for personal development through amateur sports, the event now serves as one of the more visible opportunities for local athletes to show off their best stuff to friends, family and the occassional college recruiter.

The games kick off on Thursday, July 17 with opening ceremonies at the FleetCenter that include a parade of the more than 2,000 men and women who will compete this year.

Over 100,000 have taken part in the games since its inception and $122,000 in academic scholarships have been awarded since 1987.

Competition this year will be held among the thousands of athletes from all over the state in the following levels: junior, boys scholastic, girls scholastic, men's open, women's open and men's masters.

Events included this year are archery, baseball, basketball, juniors basketball, diving, fencing, field hockey, six-on-six field hockey, gymnastics, ice hockey, judo, lacrosse, softball, soccer, six-on-six soccer, swimming, synchronized swimming, shooting, tennis, table tennis, track & field, volleyball and wrestling.

"It's good competition, as well as a good way to be seen by scouts for some colleges," said 16-year-old Brian Maslanka, a senior forward from Abington who will be competing in the scholastic soccer competition for the Coastal squad in his first year as a Bay State games competitor.

"I'm was pretty excited to get picked for the team," said Maslanka, one of the leading offensive threats for the Greenwave soccer club. "A lot of people that I have talked to said the Bay State Games are great competition and a nice way to get in shape for the fall season."

Bill Dunn, a junior wrestler from Hanover agreed with Maslanka's assessment.

"Taking part in the Bay State Games has really let me work and improve a great deal of my wrestling technique," said Dunn, who will be in the games for the second year.

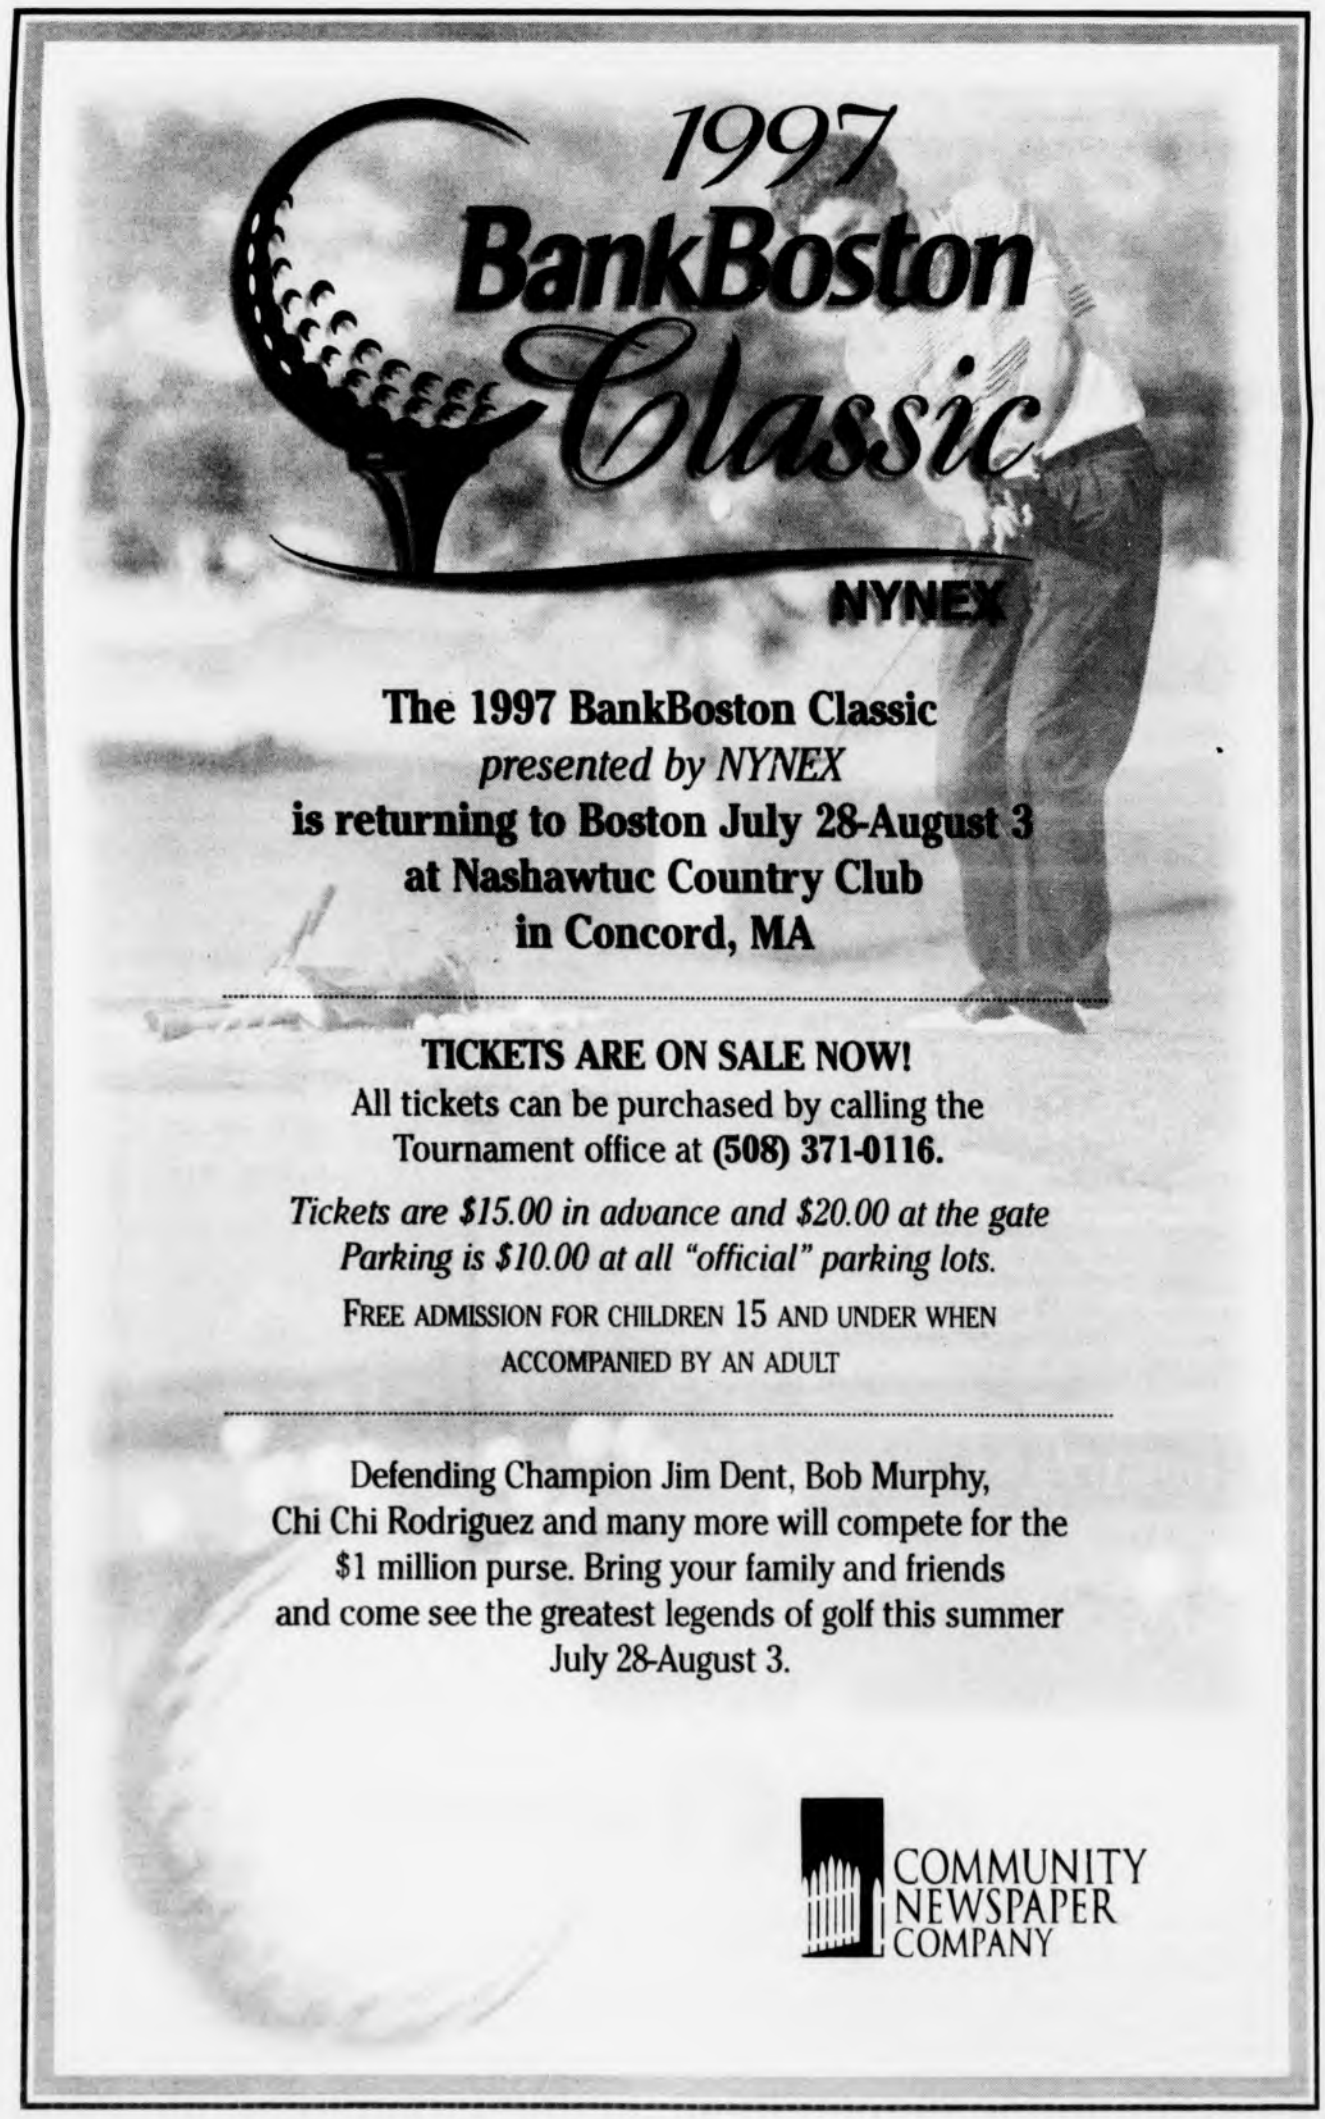
Last year, Dunn said he didn't do so well, winning one match but not placing in the final standings of the 135 lb. weight category.

According to Dunn, this year is going to be a different story.

"I've got a much better attitude and mental outlook this year. I'm more focused," said Dunn. "My goal is to place and I think that I'm going to be able to make it come true.

"It's good competition."

Besides the Bay State Games, Dunn also stays busy during the summer by wrestling with the Orange Crush wrestling squad out of Hingham.



The South Shore is extremely well represented in participants at the games.

Abington- Josh Clifford (lacrosse), Russell Comer (soccer), Neilinder Khunkhun (table tennis), Vinnie Khunkhun (table tennis), Nicolette Martin (synchronized swimming), Brian Maslanka (soccer), Stephanie Morrissey (juniors basketball), Sergio Perez (judo), James Rooney (track and field) and Stephen Slonia (ice hockey).

Hanover- Jason Antoine (baseball), Scott Bradley (ice hockey), Michael Byron (baseball), Greg Carr (ice hockey), Jay Craft (table tennis), Allison Crosby (Hanover), Bill Dunn (wrestling), Matt Dunn (wrestling), Jill Gilardi (field hockey), Michael Harding (table tennis), Gerard Hickey, Jr. (ice hockey), Anne Miller (synchronized swimming), Jonathan Peacock (basketball), Jessica Slyvia (basketball) and Michael Vickery (ice hockey).

Rockland- Michael Casagrande (ice hockey), Ivan Cheung (table tennis), Mike Cleaves (track & field), Bob Flynn (basketball), Melissa Marble (softball), Pauline Reichardt (synchronized swimming) and Michael Runetta (wrestling).

the next day. What could be behind this single-minded determination? Paul put it best, "I'm seeing some big keepers."

George Duhaime trailered down from Needham and took a dozen anacondas (seaworms) aboard. Using the now famous tube and worm rig, he nailed a 24 pound, 34 inch striped bass within sight of Peggotty Beach.

Kerry decided to do some fishing and not let Dave have all the fun. In the last few weeks she's caught four keepers, each larger than the last. The last? 45 and 1/2 inches. Grant Emde and Keith Jackson are putting in their time along the shore. Amongst the schoolies they did find a nice 31 inch fish that liked their mackerel.

Commercial rod and reel season opened yesterday. It ought to be a short season with the quantity of fish and the sheer numbers of anglers chasing them. Cohasset Ted reports bringing a few to market on the first day where prices hovered around $1.75 a pound. Ted, I advised, you ought to switch to bluefish. Paul White was getting $2 a pound for filleted Horseshoe Shoal blues.

To the south Ronnie reports from Ferry Street that the South River was very active. Four keepers were winnowed from the schoolies swarming the Julian Street bridge. The Friend's First motored across the bay to Wellfleet where the fishing is doing as well as here. Three generations of anglers were good-naturedly ribbed about bringing a ringer angler so they'd finally catch one. A beauty it was, scaling at 37 pounds, and 43 inches in length. The beach at Fourth Cliff and the North River Mouth have been hot.

Ryan Fay and Mike O'Brien of Scituate hauled a couple dozen shiners over to the Bound Brook bridge and caught two fine largemouth bass for their efforts. Unsubstantiated reports have a local angler catching back-to-back largemouth bass in the seven pound range at the dam at Aaron River Reservoir. The reservoir is accessible through Wompatuck State Park and access keys are available at Park Headquarters.

Elsewhere, Pete Whorisky and Greg Donovan combined to capture a 35 inch linesider on a mackerel chunk. Adam must have been successful too. He was in purchasing a filet knife, a sure sign of success! Rusty Starmer and Ollie Nivaud had a career day. The largest of their keepers topped the 26 pound mark by 4 ounces. The Scituate Harbor jetty was the spot for Rick "Taxi" Tomlinson. He used a mackerel chunk to get his keeper.

A short reminder to all anglers. Take the time to clean up and bring out any litter you create. And maybe a little more. There is currently a bill in the State Legislature seeking to outlaw the use of plastic bagging that is so commonly used. I've been trying to imagine what it would be like to pack bloody pogies in paper bags! I think we have all come across a beautiful angling spot from time to time that was left befouled by a previous user. Wrappers, plastic, fishing line and beverage containers all belong in the rubbish, not decorating the rocks, beaches and waters we hold so dear.

Catch one that's hard to carry!

Shore League All-Star selection with Scituate, has also been impressive, including pitching a one-hitter only to be the hard luck loser to an opposing hurler who tossed a no-hitter.

John Lonborg and Matt Lewis have also spent time of the hill this year.

On the offensive side of the diamond, Arnold singled out Steve Martin, 3B Mike James and utility man Larry Flynn as some of the hitting heroes.

"Flynn has really been a jack-of-all-trades this year," said Arnold. "He's hit well and has shined wherever I've put him out on the field."

Overall, Arnold said the one thing that has really impressed him about the team is their dedication to the game.

"Not everyone can play every game, but I think we've had 100 percent attendance at just about every game so far," he said. "This is a pretty high level of competition and you are playing the best of the best night in and night out. I've been impressed with the way that the team goes out there and hustles and does their best.

"We can give anyone a match," added Arnold.

South Shore Soccer Camp

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8 to 18. This is the South Shore Soccer Camp's sixth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering, it is suggested that you call the Cohasset recreation department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791, to be assured enrollment. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore Soccer will be offered to both boys and girls during the weeks of Monday through Friday, Aug. 4 to 8, and August 11 to 15. Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays through Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Miliken Field. The cost for camp is $175 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available.

South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

Mariner Advertising Works!

"I like advertising in the Mariner Newspapers because they are able to deliver the audience I want to target with my marketing efforts. Through the Mariner newspapers I can address local markets with my advertising message, and can change that message to reflect the needs of the individual communities.

Working with our Mariner Salesperson, Sandy McGowan, has helped us to focus our efforts in partnering with the communities. It is a true advantage to work with local professionals who really know the needs of the local towns."

IT'S HAPPENING

Paint the town plein-air

Christopher Gallery, located at Jonathan Livingston Square, Route 3A, Cohasset, is announcing its next event as a community oriented group show including many of its artists.

A double feature event is planned for Saturday, July 19. The public is encouraged to see the many artists paint outdoors (plein-air) at several different locations throughout Cohasset from noon to 4 p.m. Location maps will be available at the gallery. There will also be an open house in the evening from 6 to 9 p.m. where collectors are invited to purchase the paintings and visit with several of the gallery artists.

A portion of all sales will be donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry by the Christopher Gallery and participating artists.

Artists painting the town plein-air will be T.A. Charron, Robert Farris Jr., Michael Graves, Lois Griffel, Tom Hughes, John Kilroy, John MacGowan, Clement Micarelli, Sergio Roffo, Douglas Smith, Timothy Thies and others.

Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Collectors, students and browsers are welcome to visit our ongoing selection of paintings by well-known artists including Francis Golden, Robert Douglas Hunter, Michael Lynch, Kevin Macpherson and William F. Reese.

For more information call 1-800-383-1801.

ASP Volunteers in Tennessee

Yes, 78 volunteers from Cohasset were hard at work in Campbell County, Tenn., with the Appalachia Service Project. Of that 78, there are 46 teenagers, eight college age and 24 adult advisors. Now in its 10th year of service, the Cohasset volunteers, split up into 12 work crews, are in the midst of repairing roofs, building out-houses and porches, and tackling various other repair and re-constructive projects for poor families in northeastern Tennessee. They left bright and early Saturday, June 28, and arrived late Sunday afternoon.

"When they return, they will be changed by this experience — I guarantee it," says project director, The Rev. Gary Ritts, minister of the Second Congregational Church, before they left.

In a letter to the parents, Ritts explained, "With that change will come a greater sense of justice/injustice, a stronger self-image and increased self-esteem."

They will be returning to St. Anthony's parking lot Sunday evening (July 6) around 9 p.m. If you have the chance to speak with any of the volunteers (78 this year, a total of more than 300 in their 10 years of service), listen carefully and you will hear some wonderful stories. Special thanks to all of you who have helped out over the years, by purchasing Thanksgiving pies, Santa pictures at Village Fair, Supersubs, stock in their Cohasset ASP and had your car washed this spring. Now they ask for your thoughts and prayers as they partake in yet another example of our small community's efforts of generosity.

Local Author Signing

Hull resident Claire Sylvia will speak and sign copies of her book, A Change of Heart, Sunday, July 13 from 2 to 4 p.m. at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Route 3A, Cohasset.

In 1988, Sylvia received a life-saving heart and lung transplant, and soon began not only dreaming about her donor, but experiencing his cravings. Her taste in colors changed and her moods shifted dramatically. Sylvia chronicles these experiences in her book, and looks at the questions these events raised — Where does body end and spirit begin? Is it possible to live on after death in another person? How does one learn to accept this awesome gift?

Call 383-2665 for more information or to reserve your signed copy.

Beechwood Congregational

Soloist, David Norris, will be singing during church services on Sunday, July 13 and August 10. Sunday services are from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The Beechwood Congregational Church is holding a yard sale on Saturday, July 19 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 432 First Parish Rd. in Scituate. Come for reconditioned furniture and treasures. Anyone wishing to donate items to sell can call 383-9131.

Grape Island sunset cruise

Enjoy a sunset cruise, Tuesday, July 15, sponsored by The Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands Inc., from Boston's waterfront to Thompson Island, on Boston Harbor Cruises. Rain or shine, the boat will leave from Long Wharf (near the aquarium) at 6:30 p.m., (board by 6:15 p.m.) and return after 9 p.m. Wear comfortable shoes. Bring a picnic supper; beverages and snacks are available on the boat.

Tickets: general public $15; senior $13; FBHI member $11; children 3 to 12, $9; under-3, free. Tickets can be purchased in advance or at dockside. Tickets sold at dockside will be on a first-come, first-served basis.

For advance paid reservations, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with check to FBHI, 349 Lincoln St., Hingham, MA 02043 or call the FBHI office, (617) 740-4290.

Cohasset Farmers' Market

The Cohasset Village Farmers' Market, located on the Common, South Main St., will be open Thursdays, 3 to 7 p.m., to Oct. 9.

Enjoy organic produce, strawberries and seasonal fruits, herb plants, perennials, baked goods and jams, seasonal vegetables, "Peace Meal" bread, fresh and dried flower bouquets, honey products, French pastries, lobsters and more. Plus there are pony rides for the kids.

A free folk concert will be featured each month. July 10, "Two for the Show" will perform Americana classics.

For more information, call 383-1010

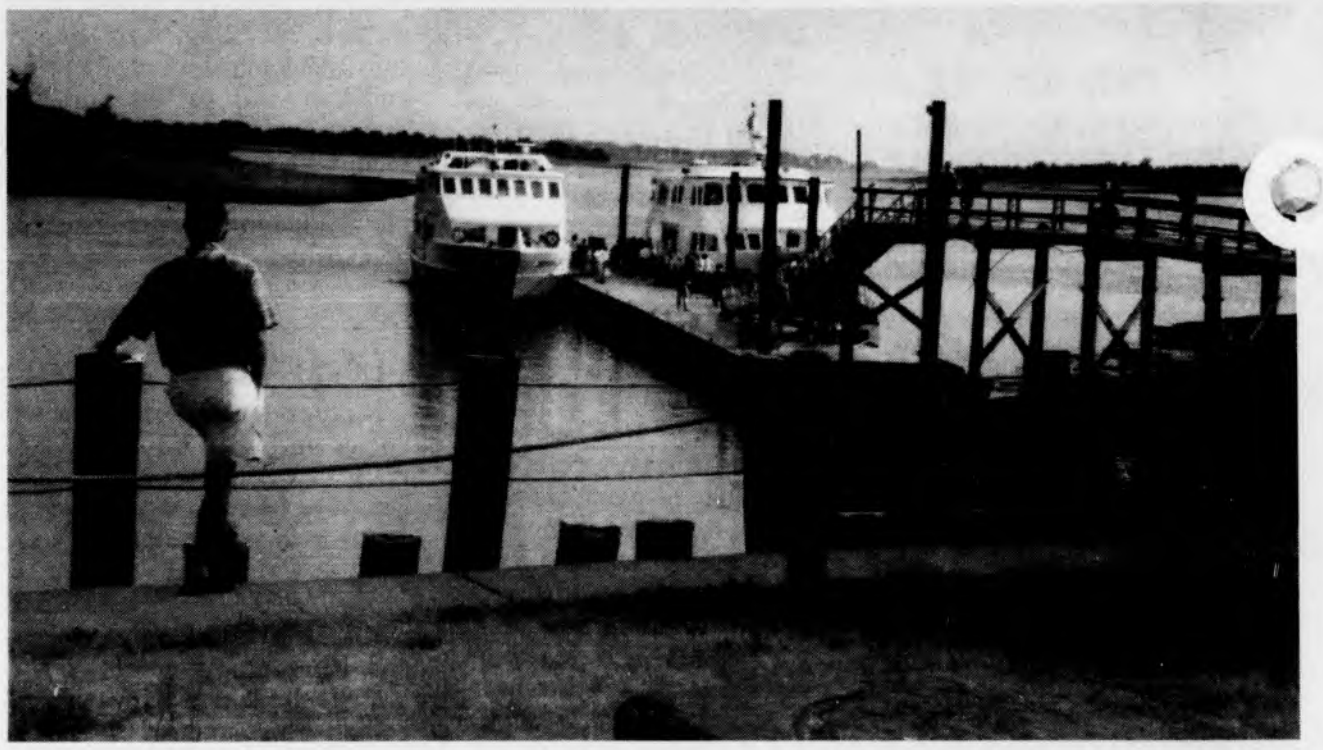
Commuters flock to familiar boats, crews

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Many commuters jumped ship this week to get on board the Hingham Commuterboat, the newest competitor in the commuter boat battle being waged at the shipyard.

So far, the commuters — who have more choice than ever in boat service — seem to be the beneficiaries of what is becoming an increasingly convoluted wrangle over contracts and harbor rights.



At center stage now is William J. Spence, who just last week launched the new Hingham Commuterboat service, an outgrowth of his Massachusetts Bay Lines. Mass. Bay Lines, an excursion and commuter boat company, has provided very limited commuter service from Hingham since Spence lost his MBTA subsidy five years ago.

Spence is leasing two boats and hired two crews from former competitor Boston Harbor Commuter Service which lost its contract to provide MBTA subsidized service July 1. BHCS owner, Dana Goodell, is suing the MBTA alleging it acted unfairly in awarding the contract to the low bidder, Boston Harbor Cruises.

The Hingham Commuterboat offers six shuttles in the morning and evening on the half hour. Harbor Cruises operates about 40 shuttles a day (20 each way).

Jim O'Leary of Boston Harbor Cruises, the new provider, isn't happy with the turn of events. Earlier this week, he watched as commuters, loyal to Goodell, turn right at the bottom of the gangway onto familiar boats rather than left onto his vessels.

O'Leary's numbers, which peaked last week with 150 riders on the 6:45 a.m. shuttle, dipped this week to 57 — there were even fewer passengers on the 6 a.m. and 6:30 a.m. boats.

A man watches Boston commuters choose between two rival boat companies at the Hingham dock this week.

Staff photo/Mary Ford

"It's a fundamental change in what was represented to us going in," O'Leary said. Harbor Cruises bid $4.9 million for the five-year contract with a certain number of passengers in mind, he explained.

"If the revenue is not there, we can't continue to run this level of service," he said.

In the meantime, the MBTA says its only issue is to provide the best service for the least cost. The T dismisses allegations that some of Boston Harbor Cruises' boats don't meet speed and capacity requirements.

"Again, it's early in the game," said T spokesman Brian Pedro.

But state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who said his fax machine was jammed with concerned commuter comments last week, took the matter a step further.

In a letter to MBTA General Manager Patrick Moynihan, he asked Moynihan to take "necessary steps to enforce the terms of the contract."

Hedlund, who along with his staff has been riding different boats to monitor the quality of service, cited specific areas of concern including travel time, inadequate seating area, and lack of interior cabin space.

A group of commuters, who have formed BRASS (Boat Riders Alliance for Safety and Service), plan to meet with Hedlund this week to air their concerns.

Nancy Ristuccia of Marshfield, who co-founded the group with Barbara Robinson of Hingham, said the issue is not the thickness of the seats but safety issues such as inexperienced crews and ill-kept boats.

But for Spence, the brouhaha provided him with the chance to put capitalism at work.

"We saw an opportunity to expand our service and we took advantage of it," said Spence, a former state representative.

While the MBTA owns the float and ramps at the Hingham dock, Spence has rights to operate his service from there through an act of the legislature.

What seemed to baffle O'Leary of Harbor Cruises is how the expanded service can be operated profitably without a subsidy. He points out that at $10 million, Goodell's bid was double that of his company.

But Spence says comprehensive service providing mid-day and late night boats will always require a subsidy. He explained that the convenience of off-peak service is a crucial part of the package to keep riders on the boats.

"If you provide a 7:30 boat at night with only 50 people, you must have a subsidy. It's important to provide this service for the people that have to occasionally stay late," he said.

Spence said with the numbers his boats were attracting this week, the Hingham Commuterboat, which only provides service at peak times, is "absolutely viable."

Hingham commuter Dennis Bottone, a Boston lawyer, said he had no trouble making his choice. A Red Line commuter before moving to Hingham and discovering the boat nine years ago — Bottone said reliability is paramount to passengers.

"You could set your watch by Dana's (Goodell) boats," he said. "I knew I'd be in Boston by a certain time and I knew I'd be home by a certain time — it was totally dependable."

Pencil Post Bed circa 1750-1780
Pencil Post beds were made throughout New England, during the second half of the 18th Century. Surprisingly, the posts have a functional origin. They were used to support fabric coverlets, which provided privacy and added warmth. Most often the posts were never seen. Our bed is based on an 18th Century post we found in a New England attic. The carved "lamb's tongue" decoration and the subtle taper of the chamfered posts are traditional design characteristics.

Sandy Beach is a popular spot

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

With more than a hundred tickets issued over this past weekend, Sandy Beach off Atlantic Avenue seems to be popular with residents and non-residents alike.

"Some may find it's worth it for a day and think $15 is not all that bad," said Police Chief Brian Noonan. The town requires residents to buy beach stickers for $7 ($3 for senior citizens) to park in the town-owned lot. Money collected from tickets and stickers goes into the town's general fund.

Showing it has a heart for children of working parents whose baby-sitters must use their own cars for the beach, the town recently started selling special "nanny" parking cards for the dashboard. They cost $7 and are not good on weekends or holidays.

The beach is owned by the Sandy Beach Association, governed by a board of six trustees. The association formed in 1917 to "hold the beach area for public use," according to the Narrative History of Cohasset Vol. II.

"A group of people got together to purchase the land which is held in trust for the benefit of the residents of the town," said trustee, Paul Corbett.

The cost of beach maintenance, lifeguards and upkeep of the bathhouse and bathrooms are covered through contributions. The beach association conducts a town-wide mailing asking for donations once a year, he said.

The town, which owns and maintains the 225-space parking lot, has issued more than 3,100 stickers to residents so far. The beach association sells a small num-

Lack of proof leads to host's acquittal

Not guilty.

The words rang through the courtroom 10 times, as John Lennon of Cohasset was found not guilty on nine counts of providing alcohol to minors and one count of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Lennon, an oil company executive, hosted a graduation party at his Surry Drive home June 22, 1996, to celebrate his son Michael's high school graduation from Thayer Academy in Braintree and his daughter Erin's graduation from college.

Driving home drunk from the party, Gregory Smith, 18, a recent graduate of Thayer Academy, died when his car smashed into a tree on Summer Street in Marshfield at 3:20 a.m., not far from his Emery Road home. Smith's blood alcohol level was .19 at the time of death, according to medical examiner James Weiner. The level is the equivalent of drinking 10 beers for someone Smith's weight.

One juror said she found Lennon not guilty because prosecutors never proved Lennon served or encouraged the teenagers to drink.

"If he had said to someone, 'Go get yourself a beer,' that would have changed the deliberation," said the juror, who refused to give her name. "There was no direct evidence he got those kids a beer. Most people figure that high school kids drink and if you leave a keg alone, they might get access to it. Hindsight is 20/20."

The juror also said Smith's death did not play a role in the decision.

The judge made it clear Lennon could not be convicted for merely being at the party. To convict, the jury would have to find evidence Lennon knew of the underage drinking, Judge Joseph Welch said.

The jury deliberated for three and a half hours, stopping after two and a half hours to ask Judge Welch for the definition of the word "delivery" of alcohol.

Judge Welch, reading from instructions he gave the jury earlier, explained that the word deliver, part of the charges against Lennon, meant to transfer alcohol from one party to another. The not guilty verdict was rendered less than an hour later.

Lennon showed little emotion after the verdict, rendered at 1 p.m. Monday after a week long trial in which guests at the party testified ast to what went on the night of June 22. Greg Smith's parents, Don and Donna Smith, emotional through

Ambulance bill chasing pays off for Cohasset

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

Jane Henderson could hardly be called an ambulance chaser, but her job does require her to chase ambulance receipts. Since taking over as billing administrator for the fire department in 1992, Henderson has converted Cohasset's billing system from one of the most inefficient in the area to the most efficient one on the South Shore.

Things were quite different in 1992. John Nadeau was fire chief five years ago when he first reported a $150,000 ambulance billing backlog. Nadeau requested a part-time billing clerk but money was tight at that time.

Two Cohasset residents, Elaine Coyne and Henderson, volunteered in 1992 to wade through every ambulance bill from November 1989 through July 1991. The two women discovered that the town's average collection rate was about 32 percent, far below the industry average of 70 percent.

Army Corps joins Greenbush debate

By David Tibbetts

Opponents of the MBTA's plans to restore rail service on the defunct Greenbush line of the Old Colony Rail Road are celebrating the Army Corps of Engineers decision to hold an independent hearing next month to discuss the impacts of the project.

The hearing will be held Aug. 14 in Lombardo's function hall in Randolph, 6 Billings St., beginning at 7 p.m.

Opponents of the rail project from Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate successfully battled an attempt by the MBTA to hold a joint hearing with the corps. Hingham officials have been particularly diligent in their efforts to keep the hearing independent.

Voter registration is ongoing

The Town Clerk would like to remind citizens that voter registration is an ongoing process.

Since July 1, 1994, new voters have been able to register without the need to come to town hall. Registration forms are available at the Town Hall, Registry, Post Office, Library, Department of Welfare, WIC, AFDC, Medicaid, Army Recruitment offices, and other offices that provide services to people with disabilities. Affidavits of registration are mailed to the clerk's office or sent electronically through the computer from the Registry. After certifying the affidavit, an acknowledgment notice is then mailed to the voter. The central voter registry maintains a statewide list of all registered voters in Massachusetts. This computerized listing is essential in prohibiting voter registration fraud.

In addition to broadening the opportunity to register to vote, the motor voter law also changes the way in which voters may be removed from the voting list. A voter may not be removed from the voting list on the ground that the registrant has changed his residence unless the registrant: Confirms in writing that he has moved to a place outside the registrar's jurisdiction registers in another city or town; or Fails to respond to a confirmation notice and has not voted in the second general election for Federal office after the date of the notice. Registration closes 20 days before an election and Annual Town Meeting (10 days before a Special Town Meeting). Citizens may register during this period, but will not be able to vote at that election.

Mosquitoes are out in force

Individual homeowners can assist in curbing the mosquito population by the following:

1) If you have a birdbath, shallow wading pool, pet's water dish, or any similar outdoor water container, change the water every two or three days. Mosquitoes breed only in stagnant water.

2) If the gutters on your house are clogged with leaves or debris so that water does not flow freely through the downspouts during a rain storm, clean the gutters.

3) If a stream or ditch runs through your property, make sure that the water is free-flowing. Remove debris, stones, brush, leaves, or other material which may clog the watercourse.

4) If you have a small pond (100 square feet or less), growth of mosquito larvae can be controlled by treating the water with a product containing Bacillus thuringiensis israelensis (Bti). Such products include Mosquito Dunks, Vectobac, Bionide (Bti), etc. These products are usually available at hardware stores or garden centers. Bti is not harmful to humans, pets, or other species which may feed on mosquito larvae.

5) If you have a larger pond on, or adjacent to, your property, it can be treated with the same larvicide by the Plymouth County Mosquito Control District, which can be reached at (617) 585-5450. The PCMCD will treat such areas with larvicide only if larvae exist in numbers sufficient to justify the application.

To supplement information already on file, the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee is trying to locate and map potential problem areas in the town where mosquitoes may breed. Please report any natural areas of standing water in your neighborhood by calling 383-9900, Ext. 121.

In spite of all these defensive measures, adult mosquitoes will inevitably appear. They are most prevalent during early morning and early evening, their natural feeding times. If possible, stay indoors during these hours and keep children indoors as well. Make sure screens on doors and windows fit tightly and that breaks are mended. If you need additional information, please call 383-9900, Ext. 121, or leave a note in the CMCC mailbox in town hall.

Life's a beach

Sifting through the South Shore's sands

STAFF WRITER

While a day by the sea may sound like a lovely escape from the daily grind, finding just the right beach to suit your fancy takes a little wading.

All over the South Shore, many beautiful expanses of golden sand and glittering blue waves await the office-weary. But often times, obstacles such as restricted parking and overcrowded beaches — made worse at high tide — stand in the way of the perfect day at the beach.

Fortunately, South Shore beach-goers seem to have cleaned up their act. Gone are the days of litter—laden stretches of sand, and broken beer bottles strewn along the shore. Beaches from Cohasset to Kingston now come equipped with trash barrels that sun and surf worshippers use to their advantage. Many towns also have beach associations helping to keep the South Shore's shores clean.

Several towns have also taken on sand dune restoration projects, including Rexhame and Duxbury beaches, which enhance the natural , but fragile beauty of the oceanside.

But clean, shipshape, spacious beaches don't come free — not if you plan to park and stay for the day. Most towns allow only residents with seasonal permits to park in beach lots, which are often cramped to begin with. A few towns charge daily parking rates, while other beaches have no parking at all.

Rexhame Beach off Route 139 in Marshfield is an exception to the inadequate parking standard. Beach-goers with no permit can pay for an all-day pass to park in the lot, which can hold more than 200 cars.

Another view of Cohasset's Sandy Beach.

Although it boasts one of the largest open parking lots in the area, the beach at Rexhame has plenty of space to accommodate the crowds that flock there.

"On the weekends it's more crowded, but you're not sitting on each other's laps," said loyal Rexhame Beach fan Joy Barnes of Whitman. "It's very secluded."

Barnes journeys 25 minutes from her home to spend the day with her children at the beach, the same beach she frequented as a child.

"It's a great family beach," she said. "The kids love it. The water's great. There are never any problems with the people around here."

The public rest rooms, lifeguards on duty and clean and not-too-rocky terrain are also reasons that keep her coming back year after year, she said.

Just down the road, Brant Rock Beach offers a different sort of haven for families who may have only an hour to devote to sun bathing. Located near a bounty of restaurants, shops and two ice cream stands, this rounded sliver of beach stretches out to sea with rock jetties that people enjoy exploring and admiring. Two-hour public parking in designated spaces along the sea wall can be nabbed early in the day. Other cars pay to park at a lot across from Brant Rock Supermarket. Restrooms are available at the "comfort station" next to the market.

Skipping over the town line to Duxbury, a long and winding King Caesar Road — off Route 3A — reveals sweeping seascapes worthy of a painter's canvas, leading to Powder Point Bridge. Hands-down one of the most exquisite views around, Duxbury Bay and Beach complement each other spectacularly.

Only beach-goers who are year-round or summer residents of Duxbury and hold beach permits have the pleasure of crossing this long, wooden landmark bridge — a popular fishing spot— to park at the beach. Out-of-towners are sent back to park at the foot of the bridge or, when that small lot fills up, to the public entrance on Canal Street in Marshfield for a fee.

"This is why I moved to Duxbury. It's a gorgeous town with a wonderful beach," said 28-year resident Jack Hamilton, who brings his grandchildren to the beach at least once a week when they visit during the summer. "It's a beautiful place to be."

The beach has a handicapped accessible ramp as well as life guards who patrol the area. With the proper permit, residents and non-residents alike can take their off-road vehicles for a joy ride along an exclusive four-wheel-drive trail from Duxbury to Plymouth.

A few exits down Route 3 South, follow signs to Gray's Beach in Kingston. While the beach itself offers little room to stretch out and relax, the surrounding park —maintained by the town's recreation commission — presents many recreational opportunities, including basketball and volleyball courts, picnic tables, benches and a playground area. The restrooms and concession stand are closed and parking is posted for residents only.

Around the corner from Cohasset harbor, Sandy Beach awaits its residents, who never want for parking in the generous lot. Speckled by small stones and nestled among large boulders, the beach lives up to its name. But loyal beach goers laud the safety and convenience of their favorite beach as primary reasons for spending the day.

"It's a well taken care of, safe place for kids," said resident Joanne Gavaza, who meets her children's play group at Sandy Beach at least one afternoon a week. "We can always get parking and space is no problem."

Other amenities at Sandy Beach include a bath house with showers, rest rooms and a pay phone, life guards and push cart vendors.

"It's definitely a family beach," agreed resident Judy Moore, who has returned to the beach for more than 20 years. "I can be confident that my children are safe at the edge of the water."

Minot Beach in North Scituate also tops the list of fantastic South Shore views with its rocky reaches and the famous lighthouse across the water. Locals love their beach even though high tide forces them up against the seawall.

Minimal parking for permit holders detracts from out-of-towners' enjoyment of the beach, but those who live within walking distance can take advantage of a railed walkway that stretches the length of the wall on Glades Road and flaunts the splendor of the ocean.

ber of out-of-town stickers to non-residents. Corbett said the waiting list for those is extensive.

Martha Gjesteby, Old Pasture Road, has gone to the beach for years, first with her four children and now with visiting grandchildren.

"I love the beach, it's wonderful," Gjesteby said. "It's our treasure down there."

Jack Armstrong of Weymouth holds one of about 150 coveted annual out-of-town stickers for which he paid about $250 to the beach association, he said. The money is well worth it, Armstrong says.

"It's my vacation, I go down there a lot. I like the beach," he says. "It's a family oriented beach in a bucolic setting."

Armstrong noted that there beach parking lot is rarely full so there is room for a few out-of-towners. That was corroborated by town clerk Marion Douglas of Beechwood Street who was at the beach during last weekend's hot spell and was surprised to see a fair number of empty spaces.

Another public town beach in town is Black Rock Beach off Forest Avenue Extension. That's a walk-to only beach, explained Chief Noonan, because there is no parking available.

Lack of proof leads to party host's acquittal much of the trial, left the courtroom immediately.

"On behalf of John Lennon we feel justice was done," defense attorney Bernard Hamill said outside the courthouse. "This trial did nothing but split open wounds."

Outside the courthouse, Hamill extended his sympathies to the Smith family regarding the death of their son. "This was a very bittersweet victory because of the emotional toll extracted from this case from all parties," Hamill said.

The Smith family has filed a civil suit against the Lennons, expected to be brought to court next year.

"Hamill stated in his opening statements these were '11 kids from hell'," Don Smith said in a bitter statement following the verdict. "Is my son from hell?" He read a list of his son's accomplishments, including nominations to the Air Force and Naval academies, receiving his pilot's license when he was 17, and learning to scuba dive by himself.

"Is this a kid from hell? The Lennons are a family from hell," he said. "Is this someone who is sorry for our son's death? Is this a man who cares? The public will find out very shortly the truth."

The Smith family vowed to press onward with their wrongful death case against the Lennons, and to keep fighting to change the laws regarding a social host's responsibilities.

"That is the biggest problem," Donna Smith said. "The law is written for commercial businesses and not social hosts. I will do everything in my power to keep this from going on."

"Not guilty does not mean innocent," Don Smith said. "The level of proof is limited by the current standards of the law. It restricts the Commonwealth in many ways."

During closing arguments on Friday, Hamill argued Lennon could not be found guilty without at least some proof Lennon provided alcohol or encouraged underage drinking.

"These kids knew how to drink. They were used to drinking," Hamill told the jury. "These kids knew how to party. They came (to the party) with a flotilla of beer." Several witnesses testified during the trial they had brought beer to the party.

Hamill also objected to the prosecution telling the jury of Smith's death, saying the case had been tried like a wrongful death suit. The defense tried unsucessfully the first day of the trial to keep Smith's death from the jury.

"The only reason Smith was brought in was to inflame prejudice or passion," Hamill said. "They put on evidence as if this was a wrongful death case or vehicular homicide."

While Hamill insisted the Lennon's party was essentially a family gathering, Assistant District Attorney Jon Barooshian told the jury that Lennon perpetuated an attitude that was anything but a family party.

"This party is exactly what the legislature had in mind when they wrote this statute," he said.

THE PROSECUTION'S CASE

Six students admitted to bringing their own beer to the party and drinking it outside Lennon's house from Smith's black Chevrolet Blazer and Thayer student Richard Azulay's sport utility vehicle.

Eight student witnesses called by Barooshian and Assistant District Attorney Joseph Harrington admitted to drinking beer from a keg on the back porch of the house, in full view of a yard filled with adults. None said Lennon had encouraged or served them alcohol. The students also admitted to obtaining mixed drinks from an unattended downstairs bar after the bartender had left for the evening.

Dr. Arthur Scheller, a Celtics team physician and father of a 1996 Thayer graduate, admitted on the stand to playing a drinking game with his son, Matthew Scheller, and other Thayer students at the party.

Two of the Thayer graduates at the party, Azulay and Jake Borden, admitted to driving home drunk that evening. Azulay changed his testimony from his pre-trial hearing, when he said he didn't drink at the party.

Borden, a Duxbury resident and Yale student, testified he arrived at the party at 6:30 p.m. and left at 2:30 a.m. In the interim he consumed four beers from a keg at the party. He testified he was never served or invited to drink while at the party. He drove home drunk.

Dr. Scheller said he ran into Greg Smith on the street in front of the house at 9:30 p.m., where he saw Smith with a six-pack of Bud Light in his left hand.

Nathaniel Banchiere, another teen witness and Thayer graduate, told the court he had served Mrs. Lennon a beer during the party.

Banchiere said he had seen Smith serve himself from kegs of beer at the party and that Smith had been "rowdy and wild." Banchiere said he and Smith had been friends since the sixth grade.

Meghan Mullin of Westwood said she drank three or four beers from a keg on the Lennons' patio. She testified she saw Smith and Azulay carrying bottles of beer they had brought to the patio.

Two witnesses, Kerri Mulligan of Marshfield and Courtney Wilkinson of Duxbury, broke down in tears on the stand. Both were longtime friends of Smith.

Captain Alfred Knight and Officer Paul Catanoso of the Marshfield police department both testified they saw no cans of beer or alcoholic containers in Greg Smith's car at the time of the accident.

Catanoso called the Lennon household at 7 a.m. June 23, 1996 to tell them of Smith's death. Mr. Lennon told Catanoso he would wake the students up and have them call him. They never did.

THE DEFENSE'S CASE

A request by Hamill for a required find of not guilty was denied by Judge Welch.

Hamill said the case should be thrown out of court after prosecution witnesses testified that at least six teenagers brought their own beer to the party.

"The mere availability of alcohol in a gathering with adults and minors does not constitute a violation," Hamill said. He said the state had shown nothing but the mere presence of alcohol, with no proof of acknowledgment or knowledge of underage drinking by Lennon.

Barooshian said the state had met its burden of proof. "We've gone beyond mere presence," of alcohol in the house, he said.

Jed Sheehan, a 1996 Thayer graduate from Braintree, testified he brought 10 Rolling Rock bottles and Bud Light cans to the party, which he drank in Azulay's car. Sheehan admitted to bringing phony identification to the party.

Thomas Welby, a 1996 Thayer graduate from West Roxbury, also admitted to bringing a case of beer to the party and drinking it outside the Lennons' house, in the back of Smith's car, with Banchiere, Smith, and Azulay. He said he saw Thayer student Chris Sullivan outside the house with a 30-pack of beer.

Welby also admitted to stealing a bottle of liquor from the downstairs bar, but said he got sick in the Lennons' bathroom not from drinking the liquor, but from the chewing tobacco he placed in his mouth after consuming the alcohol. Welby also did not consider himself drunk after drinking two to three beers off the keg and three to four shots of Buttershots.

"I was still able to think clearly," Welby said.

Janice Crowley, mother of a Thayer graduate, said she saw two cars outside the house, with six boys drinking out of coolers placed on the tailgates.

Michael McFadden, a licensed alcohol counselor in Florida and Massachusetts, attended the party to celebrate his niece and nephew's graduation. McFadden said when he left the party at 10:30 p.m., he noticed a sports utility vehicle with the back open and a cooler inside. Four to five young people were standing around the cooler drinking cans of Budweiser, he said.

McFadden said he told the group "I hope that's Coca-Cola you have in those cans."

"They told me to 'mind your own business'," he testified.

MBTA agrees to some Greenbush mitigation requests

In a letter to selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan dated June 30, MBTA General Manager Patrick J. Moynihan has officially confirmed that the T will agree to some of Cohasset's mitigation requests.

Moynihan said that while the MBTA would not agree to all of Cohasset's mitigation requests, he believed the two parties agreed on most of the major issues.

The MBTA agreed to:

• perform a runoff/drainage analysis detailing the impacts restored rail service will have on the James Brook Flood Control Project. The study should be completed by labor day.

• eliminate the North Main Street drop off area.

• design an emergency egress/access for the Rocky Lane cul de sac in case a train ever breaks down and blocks the grade crossing.

• work with the Massachusetts Highway Department to install a traffic signal at the train station entrance on Route 3A.

• submit a list of federally approved grade crossing mitigation options to prevent train whistles from sounding at private way crossings.

• replace one-for-one all parking spaces eliminated to make way for the train.

• guarantee that there will not be a second station in Cohasset even though the Scituate board of selectmen have asked the T to reconsider its North Main Street station plans.

Sullivan also received a letter from MBTA right-of-way manager Kevin F. O' Connor stating that geotechnical boring along the Greenbush right-of-way will begin on or about July 21. The MBTA has commissioned NFE Inc., to drill 65 holes along the right-of-way to test the ground for stability.

Drilling is done with a 30-foot-high drill mounted on a pick up truck or all-terrain vehicle. Each boring takes 3-4 hours to complete. It will take workers 3-4 weeks to complete all boring work. Boring crews begin work at 7 a.m.

Army Corps joins Greenbush debate

dent hearing but was unsuccessful," said Alexander Macmillan, Hingham's representative to the regional Greenbush Mitigation Committee and a vocal opponent of Greenbush.

"My prediction is that the outcome of this hearing will be that the MBTA's schedule will slip again," Macmillan added.

Macmillan said it was important to get state and federal regulatory agencies involved in the Greenbush debate. He said the MBTA only complies with state and federal regulations when it is forced to do so.

"They don't study alternatives," Macmillan said. "They spend their time trying to show that alternatives don't work."

Macmillan and other Hingham officials have said the MBTA wanted to hold a joint hearing so it could influence the corps' final decision on the project.

Andrew Brennan, manager of environmental affairs for the MBTA, said nothing could be further from the truth.

"This hearing is exactly what the MBTA has been asking for, which is full disclosure," Brennan said. "We wanted an opportunity for a hearing and we will be giving a 1/2-hour presentation."

Brennan also dismissed Macmillan's prediction that the Greenbush project would be delayed by the corps.

"I'm confident that this is a great project and I think the Army Corps of Engineers will agree," Brennan said.

The corps is involved in the Greenbush project because it has jurisdiction over federally protected wetlands and historic sites.

The Greenbush project will displace approximately 50,000 square feet of wetlands in Cohasset alone — 10 times the allowable limit — according to officials from the Cohasset conservation commission.

The MBTA also plans to run trains through Hingham's downtown area, which is listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation is also studying the projects potential impact on historic sites along the Greenbush line.

Much of the work to restore the Old Colony Rail Road has been paid for with federal funds, forcing the MBTA to comply with all associated regulations. Eighty percent of the costs of the Middleboro and Plymouth lines were paid for with federal money.

But MBTA officials have decided against using federal funds for the Greenbush line. Hingham officials claim the MBTA rejected the federal funds to avoid federal government regulations regarding historic places.

Brennan also rejected that assertion.

"We are already in the middle of a long historic review and we have been there for months," Brennan said. "This is a major public project and the Army Corps should hear everyone's concerns."

The corps does not normally hold an independent, public hearing on a municipal project. The corps usually solicits written comments from the public for limited period of time before issuing a finding.

Macmillan said he is optimistic the corps will require the MBTA to perform additional studies on the impacts of Greenbush.

"This project as it is currently proposed will cause severe environmental impacts and the MBTA is supposed to find alternatives," Macmillan said. "If the corps comes out of this project concluding that it can't be done without significant impacts, then the corps may require further study."

Macmillan added that another delay would push the project into a "gubernatorial election" year, 2000.

But Brennan said he is confident the project will pass muster with the Army Corps despite Macmillan's predictions to the contrary.

"He is a paid consultant for the town of Hingham and he's just saying what any paid consultant would say," Brennan said.

Cohasset selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said he thought the corps hearing would be beneficial because it would serve as a check and balance on the MBTA. Sullivan said many Greenbush opponents fear state regulatory agencies are not properly monitoring the MBTA's plans.

"The corps is a federal agency and not part of the same state bureaucracy as the MBTA," Sullivan said. "Some people are afraid that the Department of Environmental Protection for instance might not be impartial with the MBTA."

Sullivan said it was sometimes necessary to be a little flexible with major public works projects. He added that people should not get overly confident that the corps will halt Greenbush.

"Some people see this hearing as a potential means to halt the project, but I'm not sure that will happen," Sullivan said. "It will be interesting to see how much the Army Corps will apply its rules and regulations to a major municipal project."

Whatever the outcome, Macmillan said it is critical that residents attend the meeting to voice their opinion on the project.

"Other than this, the only public hearing on the project will be on the final environmental impact report," Macmillan said. "At that point it will be difficult to make changes."

PRUDENTIAL/HALLMARK SETS SALES RECORDS

Cohasset – Prudential Prime/Hallmark 100 Properties Ltd. reported a record-breaking volume of $50 million in sales for the first half of 1997 announced the firm's president, Chris Ford.

Number One Market Share

"Our year-to-date sales figures are 58 percent ahead of the same period for last year," stated Ford. "Our combined Prudential Prime/Hallmark 100 market share places us number one in the four-town market of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate where our four offices are located."

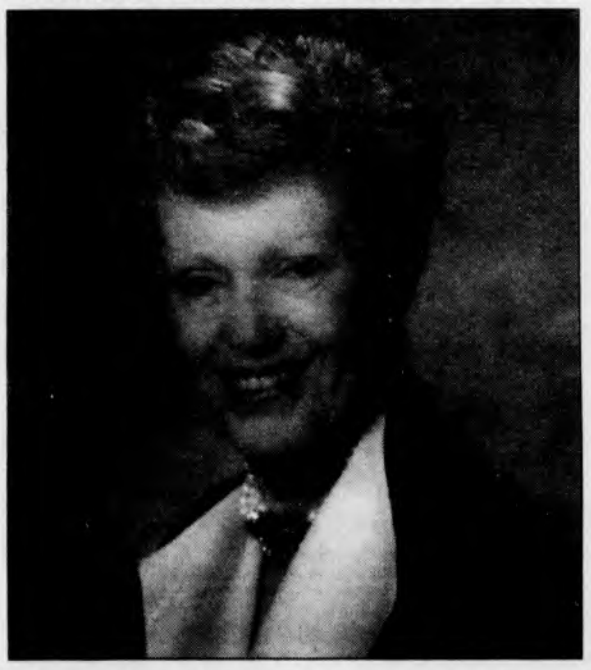
Prudential Acquisition

"In May of this year we acquired the Prudential franchise for our marketplace and we are already seeing a dramatic increase in relocation activity and inquiries to our expanded web site on the internet," stated Ford. "We are also seeing the benefits of a national TV marketing campaign for Prudential Value Range Marketing."

Record Internet Inquiries

"During the first two weeks of June we had a total of more than 20,000 inquiries at our site www.hallmark100.com including over 400 inquiries from Asia and Australia!" reported Ford. "In the first week of July we had a $500,000 contract in Hingham resulting from an internet inquiry that originated in London!"

Meallo Named Number One!



Paula Meallo was named the number one sales associate for the first half of 1997 with a record six months sales volume in excess of five million dollars. "This is the highest six-month volume by an individual agent in the history of the company," stated Ford. "Once again Paula has demonstrated that her formula of quiet consistency combined with quality relationship building yields solid long-term results."

Selectmen finally allowed Nadeau to hire Henderson as a part-time billing administrator.

Now in her fifth year as billing administrator, Henderson has increased Cohasset's collection rate from 32 percent to an average 90 percent collection rate for the last five years.

Cohasset has billed $553,588.06 in ambulance commitments since 1993, and Henderson has collected $495,206.87, leaving approximately $58,000 in unpaid bills.. Henderson said she expects to collect at least another $20,000 of the $31,141 still outstanding for 1997.

She added that $26,800 has been sent to a collection agency, Credit Recovery Collection of Waltham, to try to obtain payment.

Henderson said things were "pretty out of control" when she started working in 1992. No one had the expertise to deal with the complicated world of insurance billing and hospital billing. Henderson said she had some computer and accounting skills, but learned the rest of her skills on the job.

Other factors contributed to past billing problems. In 1992 the town did not have an official ambulance billing policy to serve as a guide.

Selectmen approved a policy in 1993 that billed everyone for ambulance runs. Town employees injured on the job were billed but not charged. The fire department began charging for expensive services like oxygen.

The policy allowed Henderson to establish exactly who was responsible for a bill and how much was owed.

The Cohasset ambulance gets ready to answer a call.

Henderson is rather modest about her accomplishments, but she admits that she is responsible for the outstanding collection rate. She lists several reasons for the high recovery rate.

"The most important thing I do is conduct a daily audit of accounts," Henderson said. "Above all I contact people personally so they are answering to a person and not a computer system. The reason for the good collection rate is perseverance by me."

Henderson said she has established relationships with people at insurance companies and with people who use ambulances frequently because of chronic health problems.

"By establishing relationships with people at insurance companies, I know who to call," Henderson said.

Henderson also shuns ambulance collection agencies. She does all her own collecting until an account exceeds one year past due, when she turns it over to a collection agency.

Insurance billing can get extremely complicated when car accidents are involved. Automobile insurance companies will not pay directly to ambulance service providers. Instead. most insurance companies pay the insured, who is supposed to reimburse the ambulance provider.

But in at least 50 percent of auto claims, the insured will spend the money rather than reimbursing the fire department. Henderson said collecting money from people in car accidents who needed an ambulance is one of her biggest billing problems.

"I think it's like a form of fraud," Henderson said. "Insurance companies should just pay us directly."

Riding in an ambulance is an expensive proposition. Cohasset charges the maximum fee allowed by Medicare regulations: $218.97 plus $9.80 per mile.

An average ambulance trip from Cohasset to the nearest hospital with an emergency room, South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, is 12 miles, adding $118.60 to the bill.

Oxygen costs the patient an additional $40.34.

While Henderson downplays her role, selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said she deserves most of the credit.

"We obviously saw a problem before Jane arrived, but no one deserves the credit but her," Sullivan said. "It's a great example of someone taking over a problem, focusing their energies, making recommendations and changes, and coming up with innovative solutions."

Henderson said she is pleased with the way the system has evolved.

"Everyone is billed the same and every single run is billed," Henderson said. "There is no discrimination."

Henderson also sends out a survey to each patient asking them to rate their experience with the ambulance and EMTs. She says the EMTs and paramedics also deserve a great deal of praise for providing a service people want to pay for.

"We always ask the patients if they were satisfied with their service and the EMTs always get glowing remarks," Henderson said. "They really deserve a lot of credit."

CHIROPRACTIC AND WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Most states have provisions that allow chiropractic care for on-the-job injuries to be covered 100%, and there is good reason for this. According to a study of workers' compensation cases in Utah, the care that injured workers received from chiropractors was significantly less expensive than that of medical doctors. The study, involving an examination of 3,062 cases, showed that the average chiropractic patient lost only three days on the job, as compared to the physicians' patients who lost almost 21 days. And, while the chiropractic patients received, on average, more than 2 1/2 times as many treatments as the physicians' patients, the cost per visit was less, as was the overall cost.

Anyone who has been in an accident needs a chiropractic spinal check-up. It makes sense to see your chiropractor after any injury. Millions of delighted patients can attest to the value and effectiveness of chiropractic care. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we provide safe, drug-free, and gentle chiropractic care for the entire family. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor. Please call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment.

P.S. Since chiropractors are recognized as experts in musculoskeletal trauma, it makes sense that they should be consulted in the event of injury in the workplace.

No water restrictions in sight

Although demand is at triple the normal rate, water department Supt. Richard Cohan says he is optimistic that there will be no water restrictions needed in Cohasset this summer.

"The reservoir water levels look pretty good," said Cohan. "At this time there are no restrictions on the horizon."

He explained there have been a few complaints about dirty water but that is to be expected because the increased demand stirs up the sediment in the pipes in different parts of town.

Cohan said recent improvements in the distribution system should keep the water flowing. The past two summers, ongoing construction caused some distribution problems but "that is mostly behind us," he said.

Cohan said the wet spring has helped keep the reservoir at a high level.

He stressed that residents should always practice conservation because water costs so much today.

Users are charged at a two-step rate. The first 2,000 cubic feet (15,000 gallons) is $4.07 per cubic foot and above that, the rate is $5.52.

EEE packets available

Packets containing basic information on Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and general measures for mosquito control are available at three Cohasset sites: Town Hall (in a receptacle mounted on the large billboard), the Community Center, and the Paul Pratt Library.

This information has been provided by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the Audubon Society, and the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee (CMCC). For further information call 383-9900, ext. 121, or leave a note in the CMCC mailbox in town hall.

Stay away from construction

School officials said construction of the new school behind the existing Deer Hill School is underway. They urge citizens to stay away from the site for safety reasons.

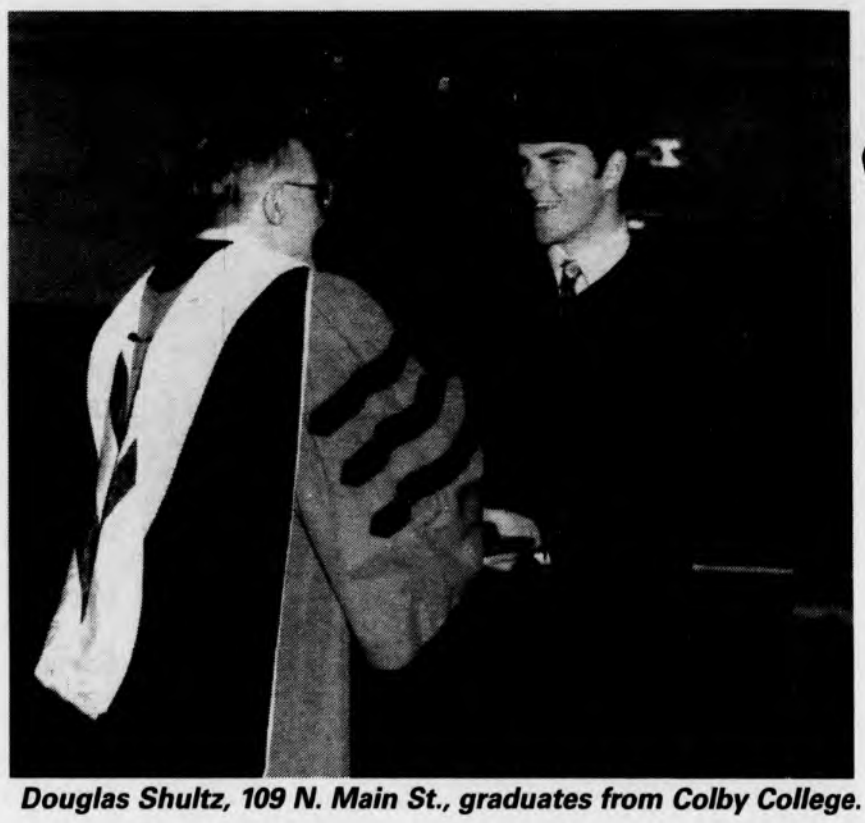
SCHRAMM GETS DEGREE



Elisabeth Schramm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin T. Schramm of 28 Atlantic Ave., Cohasset, graduated from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., May 23. Elisabeth received a bachelor's degree in Spanish. She is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School.

B.U. STUDENTS FINISH

Boston University awarded academic degrees to 4,103 students this spring! Receiving degrees were Cohasset residents Tara A. Gallagher, BS in communication disorders; Patricia A. Hart, MBA in health care management; Ana A. Mercurio, BS/BA in business administration and management; Marc A. Mercurio, BA in history; and, Charlotte N. Tilden, JD in law, cum laude. We congratulate all of you and wish you the best in your future endeavors!

Douglas Ellinger, 17 Surry Dr., receives his diploma from Colby College.

Douglas Shultz, 109 N. Main St., graduates from Colby College.

COLBY COLLEGE GRADS

Douglas R. Ellinger, son of George and Patricia Ellinger of Cohasset, received his bachelor of arts degree at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, May 25. Doug majored in administrative science, and achieved dean's list status. He is a graduate of CHS.

Douglas F. Schultz, son of Gerald and Regina Schultz, was also awarded a bachelor of arts degree from Colby College in Waterville, Maine. Doug majored in government and minored in environmental studies; he was on the dean's list, and also graduated from CHS.

XAVERIAN DIPLOMA

On Sunday, May 18, Xaverian Brothers High School held its Commencement Exercises for the 31st year and bestowed 158 diplomas to its graduating seniors. Todd C. Harrington, son of Cherylann Harrington of 159 Atlantic Ave., earned his diploma for all of his efforts. As this goes to press, he is undecided about his college plans.

DERBY ACADEMY NEWS

Derby Academy sends us good news this week, the second semester honors were announced and lots of Cohasset scholars were awarded. Headmaster's List certificates were awarded to Charles Anderson, Kara Gaughen, Corinna Noering and Jamie Simons; all achieved an average of A- or above! Second Honors, B or B+ average, went to Kristen Deane, Geoffrey McWilliams, Carter Noon, Elliot Noon, Katherine Schroeder and Wiley Wakeman. Congratulations to all of you for all of your efforts!

WATERCOLORS

Did you know that a number of watercolor paintings by JoAnne Chittick are on display in the Landmark Building at 160 Federal St. in Boston? The exhibit, which includes 12 works featuring familiar Boston buildings and scenes such as Faneuil Hall, doorways of Beacon Hill, Newbury Street facades and Copley Square, will continue until July 26. Everyone who knows JoAnne's work loves it and will want to see it, and those who don't, make an effort to see it, you'll be so glad!

Speaking of watercolors being wonderful, hats off to Mr. R.V. Laney. His watercolor, entitled "Taos Doorways," won first prize in that division in the Art Festival. Mr. Laney hasn't been an artist all of his life, but he has won first place for the last two years at the festival. He has studied under various artists in Maine, and he continues to do so. We cannot wait to see more of his work, maybe someday he will have his own one-man show! Wouldn't that be great!

HAT'S OFF TO PORTER

Congratulations go to Jim Porter of Cohasset. He was recently named vice president of account services at Dickinson Direct, a full-service direct marketing firm located in Braintree. Jim will oversee the management and growth of one of Dickinson Direct's five account teams, we wish him well in his new position!

ATTENTION ALL SENIORS

Attention to all senior citizens — did you know that every Tuesday and Thursday you can take water aerobics with Gini at the town pool? The classes began July 1 and are held every Tuesday and Thursday from 11:30 a.m. 'til 12:15 p.m. The cost is $2.50 per class. Gini suggests you bring water shoes, towel, a hat and of course, your bathing suit. Sounds like fun and great exercise!

One more thing — you can "swing and sway" with Sammy Kaye at the South Shore Music Circus July 23 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $14 per person. Call Cohasset Elder Affairs (383-9112) if you are interested, and they will have a bus if there are enough people who need a ride. It promises to be a grand time, don't miss it!

FARMERS' MARKET

Finally, don't forget the farmer's market — it gets better every week (something that is hard to do, it is always wonderful). It is on the Cohasset Common, from 3 'til 7 every Thursday!

Please call me with your news, we love to hear it!

SENIOR SCENE MARY LONDEGRAN

No summer 'R&R' for local seniors

Have you been looking for something to do this summer? Everyone thinks that summer is the time for R&R, but not at the Cohasset Elder Affairs. Here's a few items that the office has planned for your summer fun. You can just drop in and pick up a schedule of things to do and places to go. So don't stay home when you can join in the fun things to do this summer.

Here is just a sample — July 16, the Boston Harbor Island Cruise and lunch at the Hingham Bay Club. The cost is $6.50 for the cruise and lunch is on your own! Call if interested, the cruise may be offered again in August.

July 23, it's "Swing and Sway with Sammy Kay's Orchestra" at the 2 p.m. matinee. The cost is $15 with a ride, if you need it.

July 30, a lunch is planned at Schooners in Hull after the band concert. Then Aug. 4, a trip to the Braintree Plaza for a cool day of shopping. The group will leave Cohasset at 9:30 a.m. and return about 1:30 p.m.

In August, it's down to Plymouth for a fun time on the Duck Tour, then lunch on your own. Anyone interested in line dancing at the Bernie King Pavilion in Hull on Nantasket Beach? It's free! Come along and enjoy the summer breeze and happy feet! This is planned for Wednesdays, if there is enough interest.

Aug. 20, at 9:30 a.m., board the bus for Caldor's in Braintree and lunch after at Bug-a-Boo Steak House. Then Aug. 27, at 9 a.m., off to Boston on the Harbor Express with lunch in town and fun sightseeing at old Faneuil Hall.

By the way, the Senior Pharmacy Program has been extended until Aug. 31. The income eligibility has also been increased to 150 percent of the poverty level, which is $11,835.

If you have any questions on this program or need help with other health insurance questions, please call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 383-9112.

Picnic at beach pavilion

South Shore Elder Services, Inc., cordially invites all seniors to attend its fifth annual picnic on Nantasket beach Thursday, Aug. 21, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Entertainment will be provided by Joanne Sullivari, piano and vocals, sing-a-longs and line dancing.

All senior participants will be eligible for a free ride on the carousel, compliments of Friends of Paragon Carousel.

A boxed picnic lunch will be served at noon on the pavilion. The cost for lunch is $1.75.

If you would like to join us for our picnic, call our nutrition department at (617) 848-3910. All reservations must be made by Thursday, Aug. 14.

Family Fun Night Series continues at the Paragon Carousel

The Family Fun Night Series continues at the Paragon Carousel throughout the summer, with events every other Wednesday evening in July and August, from 7 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, July 23, the carousel will host Carousel Crafts. Children can enjoy stenciling, coloring and other creative activities.

August 6, children are encouraged to come dressed in their pajamas and join storyteller Randy Zella. Zella is the host of the local cable show, "Snuggle Up With Me." Stories will begin at 7:10 and 7:40 p.m. This will allow children to take a ride on the carousel as well, and wish their favorite horse goodnight! Zella will be taping for her local show, which will air Friday, Aug. 7, at 7 p.m., on Channel 3 in Hull.

The family night series will come to a close Aug. 20, with a family concert by local performer Dawna Hammers.

AN ARTFUL VISIT TO FRANCE

For some, France stands for fantastic food and world-class wines. For others, it's the historical sights and strong ties to our own country. For many, though, France is simply an artist's paradise, the place where the likes of Monet and Renoir created their immortal works. Two destinations stand out for experiencing the rich tradition of French art, particularly that of the well-known Impressionists. La Maison Fournaise is a recently restored property outside of Paris where Renoir did many of his most famous works. The restaurant and grounds where the painter lived and worked have been returned to their original state, and a museum has been established. Saving water

It's been hot, hot, hot — and dry, dry, dry — as local gardeners know only too well. This has been the second driest July on record (down 0.13 inches) and the third driest June ever (0.76 inches, which was down 1.86 inches.)

We desperately need two to three inches of rain to soak the ground and seep down to the roots of our thirsty plants. Trees and bushes are gasping for water as are our lawns and flowers.

The dry spell that began about May 20 is continuing into mid-July, according to Robert Skilling from the Hingham Weather Station. Total precipitation during that period has been just 2.02 inches compared to normal rainfall of 6.15 inches.

So even though it's quite a temptation to go out and turn on the sprinklers and hoses full blast, wash the car and fill up that pool, consider that conservation measures are needed for the benefit of all.

Dick Cohan, superintendent of the Cohasset Water Department, said there are no water restrictions in sight. But he notes it is always good to conserve water wherever possible if for no other reason than the fact that water costs so much.

Here's some interesting water trivia for you.

A human drinks a half gallon of water every day.

A 40-pound dog drinks one to 1-1/2 quarts a day in the summer.

A cow drinks 40 gallons a day.

A goat drinks four gallons a day.

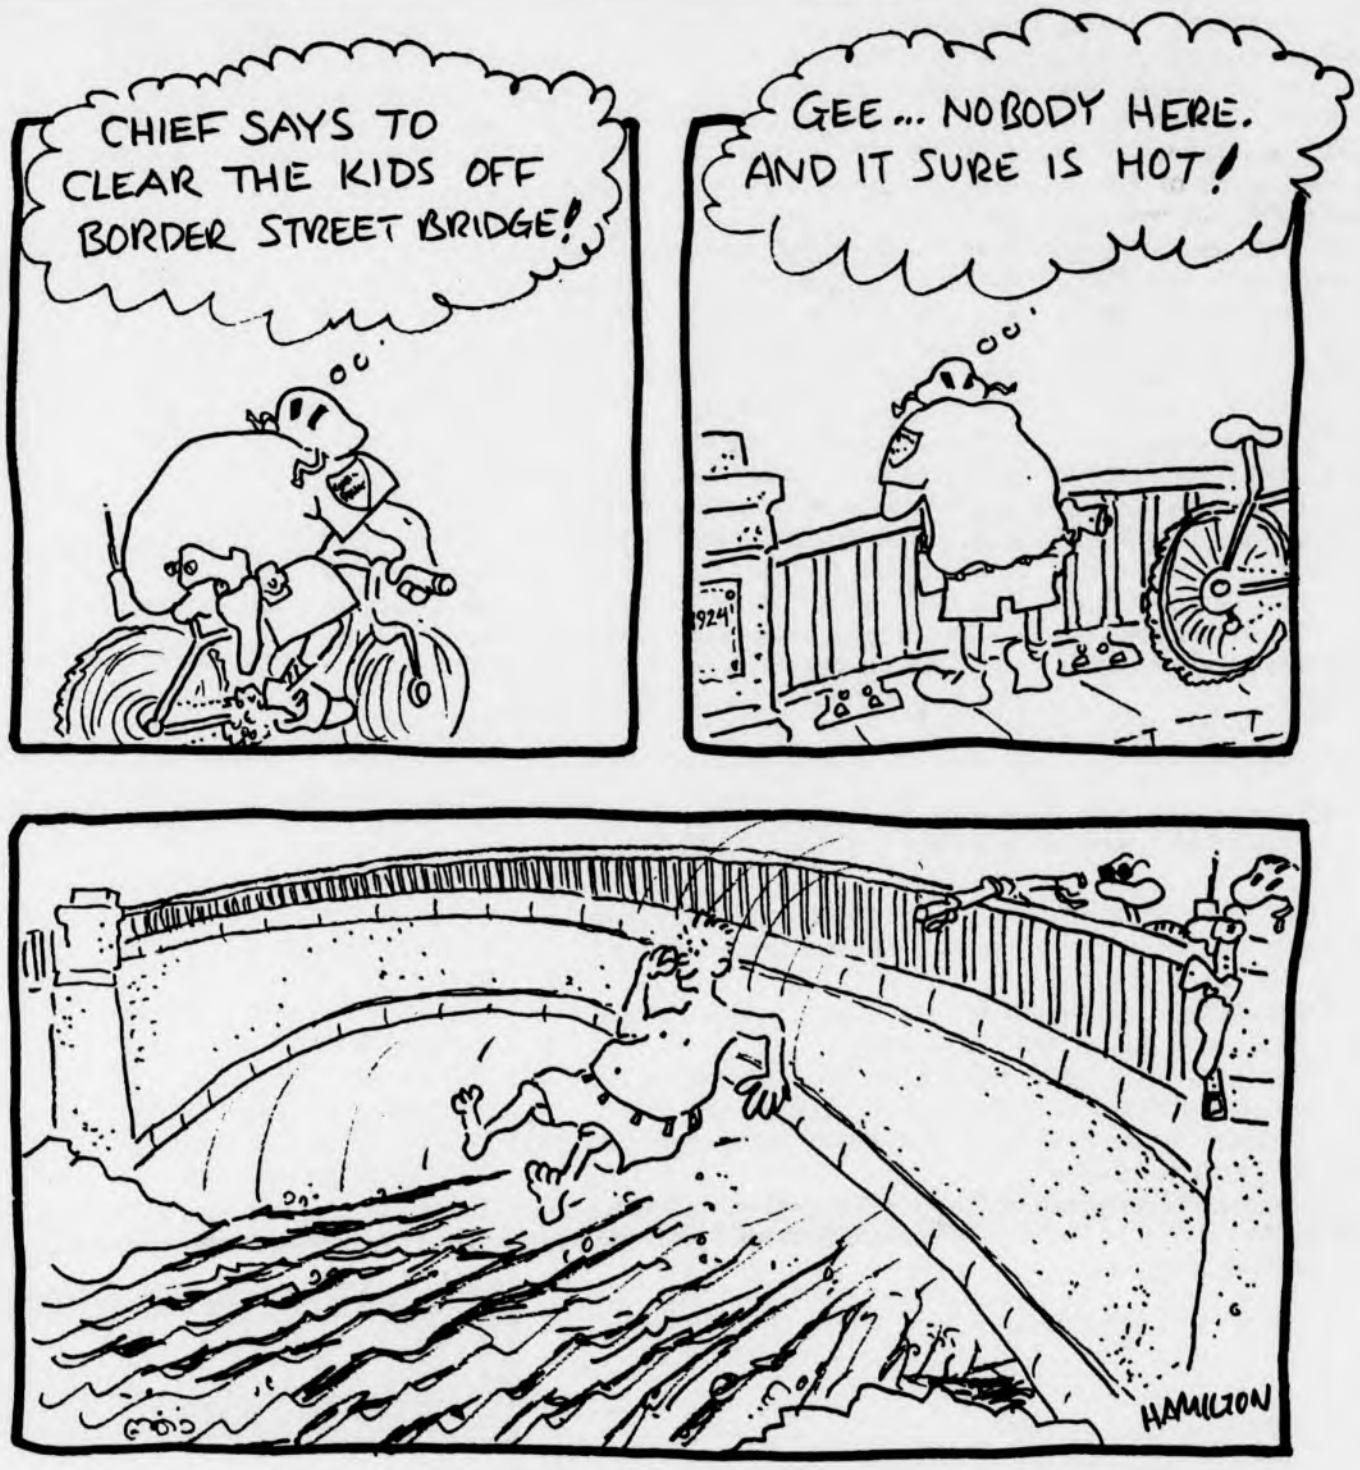
A 10-pound cat drinks one cup a day.

A house plant needs a cup of water a week.

And, now that you've digested those figures, here are some suggestions for conserving water: install a low-flow shower head; put a displacement device in your toilet tank or buy an ultra low-flush toilet; attach low-flow aerators to your kitchen and bathroom sink faucets; turn off the water while washing dishes, brushing your teeth or shaving. Running water wastes five to 20 times as much water.

If you wash your car yourself, use a sponge and bucket and save more than 100 gallons of water. Carefully inspect all plumbing, including your water heater and sprinkler system, for leaks.

In the garden, adding compost to the soil improves the water-holding capacity. Check hose connections and repair leaky hoses. Ask about low water using turf when replanting your lawn and also, the experts recommend, raise those lawnmower blades. Longer grass helps shade the roots and cuts down on evaporation.



Preserve existing trees, water trees and shrubs with deep root systems longer and less frequently than shallow-rooted plants, and use porous paving material such as brick, decomposed granite or gravel in patios and walkways to keep water in the garden rather than the gutter.

And, they urge, don't over-water. Established lawns and shrubs and most vegetables and flowers need just one inch of water a week.

So, let's pull together and let those brown lawns serve as a badge of honor to show that we conserve water and care about our universe.

Art Grant Is Appeciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the students at Cohasset High School and the Arts Boosters, I would like to thank the South Shore Playhouse Associates for their generous grant to our effort.

We are fortunate in Cohasset to have dedicated teachers and talented students and parents, who want to see that the arts continue to thrive in our community and in our schools. This grant will help us in our effort and will be used wisely by the Arts Boosters.

The South Shore Playhouse Associates and the South Shore Music Circus are true assets to the town of Cohasset. The members of the Arts Boosters send our sincerest wishes for the best season yet in 1997.

Restore commuter boat operator

To the Editor:

I was not surprised to learn this week that Robert Cerasolo, the State Inspector General, has "serious questions" about the new MBTA Hingham commuter boat line. Having ridden these boats a few times, it is clear to me and everybody else on board, that there are real problems. Cheese and crackers and dollar beers won't make them go away. (No boat I rode made the trip in under 45 minutes.)

This parting shot at Hingham from then Sec. of Transportation James Kerasiotes, is just the latest of many bad decisions. It is interesting to note that Mr. Cerasoli also challenged the controversial Greenbush rail project early last year. Referring to the low ridership numbers published by the MBTA, he responded, "I did the figures, and I figured that if we bought each of those people a Mercedes Benz, and gave it to them ... that we'd make out better."

The new Secretary, Patrick Moynihan, has inherited these problems from his former boss, who is watching closely from the wings. Let us hope that Mr. Moynihan restores the original boat operator and cancels the languishing Greenbush project which promises to spiral well above the projected costs.

The resurrection of famed Old Ironsides

South Shore man masterminds restoration of the world's oldest fighting ship

By Patsy Murray
STAFF WRITER

When Charles Mason Deans boards the world's oldest warship on Monday, July 21, he will receive the same tribute as the captain of the USS Constitution.

Four peals of the ship's bell will salute Commander Michael Beck. And the bell will toll four times for the North Weymouth civilian who has charge of the $12 million restoration of Old Ironsides and who will supervise her first voyage under sail in 116 years.

Both men will proudly stand by for the boarding of the nation's commander-in-chief, if as anticipated President Bill Clinton accepts the Navy's invitation to join in celebrating the 199th anniversary of the Constitution's maiden voyage on July 22, 1798, and the approach of the 200th anniversary of her launching on Oct. 21, 1797.

The ship's bell will ring out eight times, a low continuous beating of the drum will resound, embellished with the fanfare of ruffles and flourishes. On shore a military band will strike up "Hail to the Chief" as the 42nd President of the United States of America steps aboard the 44-gun frigate commissioned by first President George Washington onto the "deck, once red with heroes' blood/Where knelt the vanquished foe."

It won't be at all surprising if, as they take their places on the top deck of the beautifully refurbished Constitution ,the two men find themselves recalling from their schoolboy days such a stirring line from Oliver Wendall Holmes' 1830 poem "Old Ironsides."

Holmes' three brief, emotionally devastating stanzas, roused the nation and shamed the Navy into changing its mind about destroying the legendary fighting ship it had condemned as unseaworthy.

It was the first of many resurrections to come for the prototype of a new speedy breed of Navy fighter launched from Hart Shipyard, just across Boston Harbor from the Constitution's present day berth in the Charlestown Navy Yard.

That latest revival began in earnest in 1991, when the Navy Historical Center Detachment was established to carry out the preservation of the gallant ship that survived 42 battles, most of them in the War of 1912, without an enemy ever stepping on her decks except to surrender.

Charles Deans, the man picked to head the detachment and to carry out the restoration, has never served a day in the military.

Raised and educated in Quincy, he went to work at an auto mechanic after graduating in 1958 from Quincy High School. And that's what he might have remained if he hadn't been blessed with a persistent mother.

A civilian government employee for many years, the late Alice Deans goaded her son into applying for the apprentice program at the Boston Navy Shipyard. He was accepted as a marine mechanic apprentice. The first step had been taken that transformed a boy who spent his days fixing cars into the man responsible for fixing up the oldest ship in the Navy.

Deans has been with the Navy Department now for 34 years. After the shipyard closed, he was assigned to the supervisor of shipbuilding. Charles Deans first clapped eyes on the ship that has become to him as dear as a family member and as close as a best friend when his fifth-grade class went into Boston to tour the Constitution. He didn't see her again until 1985 when, as quality assurance director, he took custody of the by-now seedy vessel.

The relationship deepened and flourished with the directive to oversee restoration of Old Ironsides as a national treasure.

"The ship," Deans said, "has benefited tremendously" from the creation of the historical center detachment. She became the focus of full-time attention as Deans put together a team to rehaul her from top to bottom.

Working out of the long three-story granite, circa 1830, Building #24, adjacent to the Constitution Museum, Deans and his crew of shipbuilding professionals have systematically restored the ailing ship to mint condition.

To begin the job, he was asked how many people he would need to document repairs and catalogue the ship's needs.

"I don't need anyone," he said. "We'll take care of it." Famous last words.

The search for information took researchers from Greenwich, England, to the Library of Congress, to the historical societies of Pennsylvania and New York, to the national archives — anywhere that a smidgen of data about the Constitution could possibly be found. The exhaustive investigation resulted in more than 13,000 pages of documents and more than 800 engineering drawings.

The sail plan followed by sailmakers Dave Mullins and former art teacher Liz Frost, who hails from Kittery, Maine and a family of shipbuilders, dates to 1817.

On her historic voyage a few days from now, the Constitution will rely for power on six sails, the most widely used configuration on a ship going into battle. Two of them — the flying jib up front and the spanker in the rear — were designed and manufactured in Building #24.

Only about 15 percent of the Constitution launched in 1797 remains, most of that original material below the water line. Seventy-five percent of the upper deck has been replaced and the ship has been completely recorked.

Don't expect, though, to find tarred hemp in the cracks or sealing rigging. Some concessions have been made to the role of the Constitution as a floating museum. It wouldn't do to have any of the million visitors a year slip on melted tar or have it drip on them from on high.

The Constitution's beautifully crafted woodwork and iron work was accomplished in Dean's own workshops. The detachment employs its own blacksmith, adept at the art of his forefathers. The woodworking floor contains highly specialized, even one-of-a-kind equipment. Twenty-eight miles of rigging (lines and rope), along with five miles of running rigging actually used to operate the six sails, as well as the safety nets used to protect the crew from falls, were manufactured on site.

Deans will have a crew of some 250 working the ship next Monday or providing technical support, with a sailing crew of 150. The ship's complement ordinarily comprises 54 civilians and 52 military sails.

Safety nets are not the only anachronisms aboard the Constitution. Those early 19th century sailors who manned the guns and manipulated the sails aboard Old Ironsides had no safety nets to protect them from an inevitably fatal fall onto the deck or into the sea.

Subtly tucked out of sight in wooden boxes, modern firefighting equipment protects the ship and its crew. A damage control team ready to respond to any emergency will be aboard for Monday's voyage to Marblehead. Behind a closed door, a state-of-the-art computerized security system monitors the ship.

The iron bars used as ballast in the Constitution's heyday have been replaced with 100 tons of lead, hidden under a wooden box on the overlap or, in ship talk, orlop, the lowest of the four decks on a warship.

However, no sailor will be banished down to those lower depths to clean the ballast as a punishment feared only a little less than flogging or keel-hauling.

North Weymouth resident Charles Deans' smile reflects the pride he has in the USS Constitution, whose $12 million restoration he has lovingly supervised.

Staff photo/Carey C. Marden

But there's nothing inauthentic about the Constitution's guns. Those diminutive sailors (most of them standing well under the 5'6" height required for a marine snipper who stood on a fighting platform half way up the mast to harass enemy crews) would feel right at home with the cannonades on the top deck and the 24-pound cannons a ladder flight down on the gun deck.

Two of the cannons were fired during the Constitution's traditional 4th of July turnaround, a procedure that allows the wooden ship and its masts to weather evenly as it lies month after month in its berth.

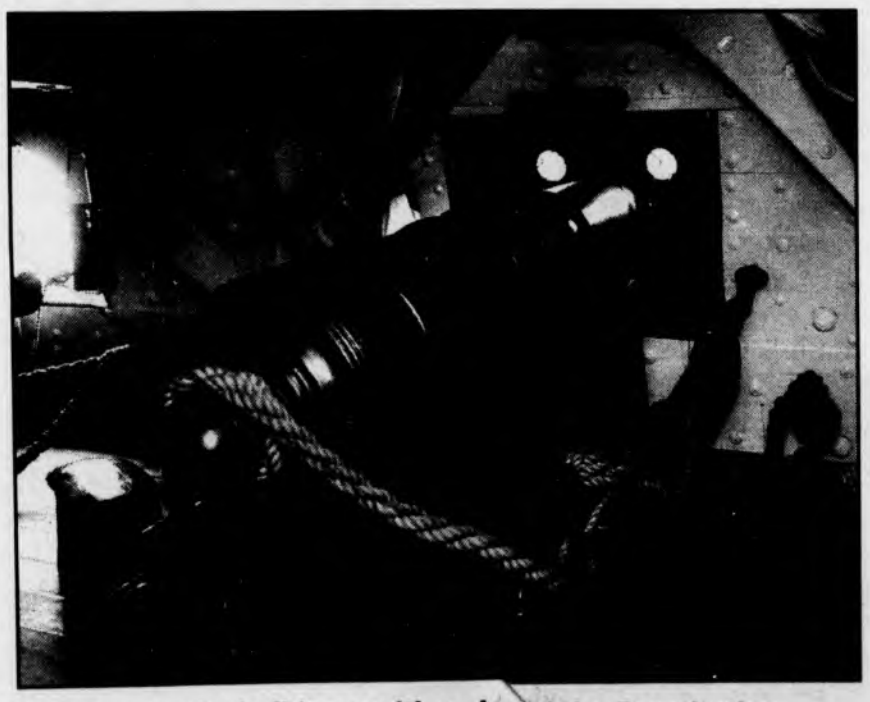
By now the preparations have been made and all that remains for Deans' detachment is to set sail on Monday.

But rest assured, the crew will know exactly what they are doing — each and every one of them.

They have been holding sail training for months, going out weekday mornings before 7 a.m. to practice for the day when they will unfurl 12,225 square feet of sail and let Old Ironsides ride once again with the wind.

The ship was taken on a brief practice run, under tow, last week. Among the invited guests was Della Fontana of Braintree, the mother of Charles Deans' friend, Mary Fontana of Weymouth. As a young girl, she was one of the thousands of school children who contributed to the penny campaign in the late Twenties to help refurbish the Constitution. Old Ironsides subsequently visited ports on both sides of the country, but was towed every inch of the way.

A similar penny campaign is now underway nationwide, initiated by the Charlestown American Legion Post. The other four sails being used for next week's voyage and much of the ship's rope was paid for with pennies of another generation of school children and awed visitors.



The President, an impressive array of top Navy brass and a plethora of politicians will sail with the Constitution on July 21.

But no one aboard the 200-year-old ship will radiate more pride than the former auto mechanic who has made his home in North Weymouth for the past 15 or 16 years.

Deans lives on Delorey Avenue with his wife, Liz. He has four children (the oldest son serves in the Army), three stepchildren and seven grandchildren.

Make no mistake about it, though, there's another intimate member of the Deans family.

"I believe all ships have spirits of their own and are unique," he said as a way of explaining the close relationship he has with the Constitution.

A cannon waits in firing position aboard the Constitution.

Unity on the bounty

Scituate, Cohasset clammers to pay same fee

By Jennifer R. Horan
STAFF WRITER

After three years of being stuck in the mud, a clamming fee dispute between Scituate and Cohasset has reached higher ground.

Officials from both towns have agreed to draft an accord that will allow Cohasset clammers to pay the same fee as Scituate residents to dig at the Bassings Beach clam flats. Selectmen will vote on the finalized agreement in two weeks.

"There always used to be a verbal agreement between Scituate and Cohasset up until the flats were closed, but there was nothing in the books," explained Cohasset Selectman Merle Brown, who will work with Scituate Selectman Richard Lane to hammer out the details of the agreement. "Cohasset clammers will be very happy about this."

The dispute arose in 1994, when the clam flats reopened at Bassings Beach in the south section of Cohasset Harbor after being closed for since 1978.

The area where the flats are open belongs to Scituate, and the town has been charging Cohasseters a $50 non-resident fee to dig for clams for the past three years, which has upset the neighboring town. Scituate clammers pay $20 to dig for mollusks.

Cohasset's flats are closed due to pollution and storm damage, which has forced willing clammers to pay more for digging privileges in Scituate. Flats at Little's Harbor and Whale Meadow — located across the channel from Bassings Beach — closed after the blizzard of 1978.

As part of the "inter-town cooperative," the town of Cohasset will continue its history of monitoring and patrolling the Bassings Beach clam flats, said Cohasset Town Administrator and Scituate resident Ed McCann.

"It's certainly not a give-away. Cohasset will be doing a service as well to the town of Scituate," he said.

Stafford Short heads out to the clam flats with his son Garrett.

Cohasset's harbor officials can more easily monitor the flats because they are much closer to them than Scituate, McCann added.

"It's an hour's ride from Scituate to the flats by boat. You can swim it in about 10 strokes from Cohasset," he said.

Cohasset officials, including Shellfish Warden Clifford Dickson, were instrumental in catching four North Shore men who illegally dug 726 pounds of clams — more than 10 times the legal limit — from the Bassings Beach flats in 1994, he said.

"It's good that we can be working together to come up with a good solution," said Brown. "We will be able to contribute (to law enforcement measures) a lot more now that we have the incentive."

While many glitches have to be worked out, officials are considering stamping "Bassings Beach" on Cohasset residents' clamming permits, since they will only be allowed to dig there. No other flats in Scituate are open at the present time, although there are flats in the North River. Officials are also considering limiting the agreement to a one-year trial period to see how it works.

Scituate Selectmen Chairman Joseph Norton said the town will not be entertaining opening negotiations to other towns.

Clammers are permitted to harvest up to eight quarts of mollusks larger than two inches in size during a day at the flats. Scituate's clamming regulations, which are based on state law, allow clamming activity once a week — either on Thursday or Sunday, the only days the flats are open.

Town Clerk Barbara J. Maffucci said 15 Scituate clamming permits have been sold to Cohasset residents since January and a total of 40 non-resident permits have been issued.

Cohasset Harbor could be dredged in the fall

Federal money is likely

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

There was good news for recreational boaters and commercial fishermen alike this week. The harbor they share could be dredged as soon as this fall.

An important monetary hurdle was cleared yesterday when the U.S. Senate approved $1.5 million for the project.

That followed news earlier this week that a key House Subcommittee approved a $1.3 million federal appropriation for the project. The full House Appropriations Committee is expected to review the proposal today.

"If we make to Thursday, we're in good shape," U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, D-Quincy, said in a press release.

Former Selectman Peter Pratt, who has tirelessly lobbied for the project, said because of approval in both houses, it is very unlikely funding will be pulled when the bill moves through conference committee.

Pratt is so optimistic that he predicts there's a very good chance the money would be available in federal fiscal year 1998 which starts October 1. Then dredging could occur during the "environmental window" of October through February to avoid disturbing certain migratory fish populations.

> 'We hope to get through the regulatory process and start in November of this year.
> – PETER PRATT.

"We hope to get through the regulatory process and start in November of this year," he said.

And the project can't come soon enough.

The federal channel, which is getting narrower and narrower due to silt buildup, hasn't been fully dredged in 35 years. There has been periodic maintenance dredging of the harbor and federal channel since then but the last time a federal/town dredging project of this magnitude was undertaken in Cohasset was in 1939.

With the state's financial help,the town is responsible for dredging areas in the harbor while the Army Corps of Engineers, a federal agency whose civil mission is to develop and manage the country's water resources, will tackle the harbor channel which falls under federal jurisdiction.

A total of $300,000 — including a state grant administered by the Waterways Division of the state Department of Environmental Management — and a $100,000 town match are expected to cover the town's dredging costs.

Pratt says the town must still get through the regulatory process.

There is entangled environmental permitting process for the two projects — town and federal which piggy back onto one another— involving about a dozen agencies. There have been several powwows with state, town and regulatory officials since the project was proposed three years ago.

There are 90,000 cubic yards of silt in the federal channel, which will be dumped in the ocean because it does not contain pollutants. The 7,500 cubic yards in the inner harbor which do not pass environmental testing must be disposed of upland.

The Cohasset Navigation Act, the law changing the federal lines of jurisdiction in the harbor making the involvement of the Army Corps and federal funding possible, passed the Congress last fall.

In his press release, Delahunt said after touring the harbor with town officials earlier this year, he was shocked to learn that the project was not a higher priority for the Army Corps.

The congressman believed that the annual harvest volume of the town's lobstering fleet — a key statistical factor according to Corps criteria for establishing funding priorities — was erroneously reported in the required give-and-take among state and federal agencies.

Delahunt said he reviewed the project in detail with Subcommittee chairman, U.S. Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pennsylvania.

Senator John Kerry pledged continued support.

"This is a positive next step toward restoring Cohasset Harbor, bringing more economic and recreational opportunity to the area," Kerry said. "Dredging the harbor helps the strong fishing community in Cohasset, giving fishermen better opportunities to support themselves and their families. Senator Kennedy and I will continue to fight for this funding as the House and Senate work toward a final budget package," Kerry said in a press release.

Cohasset Harbor is home to 45 fishing boats and is ranked tenth in Massachusetts in terms of tons of lobster landed, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Survey seeks residents' input on Osgood School reuse

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

What is the best use for the Osgood School once it is vacated? That is the question facing the town, and the Osgood School Re-Use Committee, as construction on the new school is scheduled to begin soon.

The Osgood School could be ready for reclamation by the town as soon as next year if the new elementary school is completed on schedule in the fall of 1998.

The Osgood School committee is planning to survey Cohasset residents for their opinions on the best use for the building once the elementary students move to the new school. The survey could be distributed before the end of the month, possibly through a mass mailing.

Joanne Adkins, chairman of the reuse committee, said she wants to get a feel for what residents would like to have the building used for.

"Some of the things we'll try to determine is whether people want to retain the whole building or just a portion of it," Adkins said. "We'll also ask their opinions on usage. Should it be used for senior citizens or families. What about rental use versus home ownership? Should it be used for low-income housing?"

Adkins said the committee hopes to assess residents' opinions on a number of issues related to the reclamation of the property to the tax rolls.

Boat riders want new subsidized service sunk

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

BRASS, made up of concerned boat commuters, wants to force a change in subsidized commuter boat operators at the Hingham Shipyard.

Nancy Ristuccia of Marshfield and Barbara Robinson of Hingham, the founders of the new activist group — Boat Riders Alliance for Safety and Service — plan to meet with state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, this week. They are circulating a petition asking that the state subsidy go to the Hingham Commuterboat, a rival operation to Harbor Cruises, which took over the MBTA subsidized service July 1.

"We're trying to get elected officials to recognize our concerns with more than just promises," Ristuccia said. "We need immediate action."

At issue is how to keep the standard of safety and service that Hingham boat commuters have come to expect.

Ristuccia said on one Harbor Cruises boat the seats are so high that a commuter complained that her legs went to sleep. Another commuter is circulating a humorous "top 10" list (a la David Letterman) with reasons to take the MBTA boat such as the free showers if you're on deck and no locks on the bathrooms for exhibitionists.

But despite the seats, the real issue is inexperienced crews and ill-kept boats, Ristuccia says.

Jane Daly, an owner of Harbor Cruises, disputes those claims. She concedes that some of the amenities may not be what commuters were accustomed to, but the company plans to change that.

"We've been asking commuters what they'd like to see and will probably undertake that in a more formal way," she said.

She said seats that are too high will be lowered or replaced with a different type of seating.

Daly said Harbor Cruises has overcome its performance problems that plagued it in its first week and is now "absolutely meeting the trip times" of 35 minutes.

Boat congestion with ships passing just beyond the dock is a concern which the MBTA needs to address, she said. During the interview three boats jockeyed for position, two outgoing and one inbound. Harbor Cruises and the Hingham Commuterboat are both running shuttle service at peak times.

"Our focus right now has been to operate smoothly and on time despite problems like this," said Daly pointing to the dock area.

BRASS contends that Harbor Cruises does not operate boats with two captains the way the Hingham Commuterboat does.

"It's like being in a plane with one person who knows how to fly," Ristuccia said.

But Daly points out that Harbor Cruises operates with a licensed captain and senior deck hand who is qualified to bring a vessel home.

The MBTA has maintained that the only issue is to provide the best service for the least cost. The T has dismissed concerns about Harbor Cruises. "It's early in the game," T spokesman Brian Pedro said last week.

Last month, Boston Harbor Commuter Services, which bid $10.5 million, lost the subsidy to provide the service when the MBTA awarded the contract to Harbor Cruises. Harbor Cruises bid $4.9 million. BHCS owner Dana Goodell subsequently leased two of his boats to William Spence of Mass. Bay Lines. The commuter boat and excursion company hired two of Goodell's crews and formed the Hingham Commuterboat which offers competing service at peak times.

Goodell, who has operated commuter boat service from Hingham for 13 years, is suing the MBTA alleging it acted unfairly in awarding the contract to Harbor Cruises. June 30, a superior court judge denied Goodell's request for a temporary injunction to nullify the T's contract with Harbor Cruises until a trial on the merits of the case could be heard. An appeal of that superior court decision is expected to be heard this week.

Daly doesn't think the appeal will succeed.

"We expect the appeals judge will uphold the superior court's decision," she said.

She said Harbor Cruises stands by its numbers and if there is an issue that drives the company beyond $4.9 million contract, it has to absorb the additional costs.

"If we were low, it's our problem," Daly said.

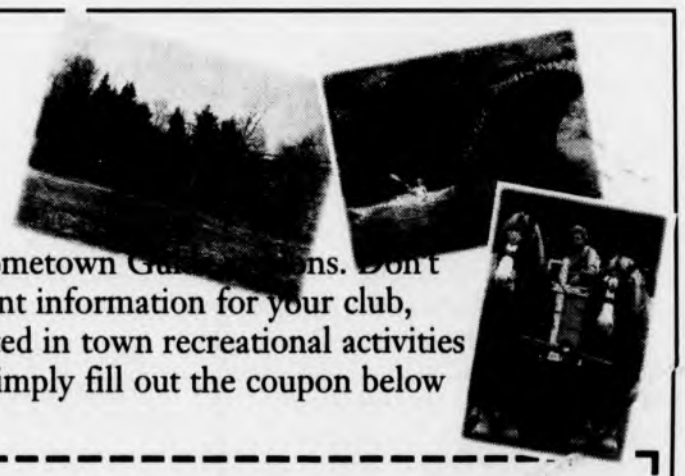
Library Notes

A mural featuring scenes of Cohasset and children reading books will be painted by award-winning artist, Becky Haletky. Cohasset children are invited to vote for three favorite book titles to be included in the mural. Pick up a ballot from children's librarian Suzanne Terry. The winners will be announced August 1.

Please note that the library will be closed Sundays during the months of July and August, however, it is now open Thursday evenings until 9 p.m. Open hours for the summer are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; closed Wednesday.



JFK Library pass now here

There is now available to Cohasset Library card holders a free pass for the John F. Kennedy Library. The pass, which was donated by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, admits four persons and is good seven days a week. It also allows a 15 percent discount on items purchased at the museum shop. Also available are free passes to the Museum of Science, Museum of Fine Arts, Children's Museum and Plimoth Plantation. A pass for the New England Aquarium is not available during the summer, but will again be activated in September. Please call the library or come in to reserve your pass.

Ageless Leonard continues her quest for Senior Olympic gold

By Joe Reardon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Competing in her 15th Senior Olympics in May, 83-year-old Ann Leonard showed she's just as much an athlete as she was as a young girl growing up with her four brothers and one sister in Cambridge.

The personable Elm St. resident brought her medal count into the 90s by turning away the cold, bitter weather in Quincy's Veterans Stadium and winning five golds in the javelin, shot put, standing long jump, running long jump and softball throw.

For Leonard, slowing down in her golden years has never been an option. She believes the Senior Olympics are proof of just what people are capable of achieving.

"Its amazing to see the competitors get up and try," said Leonard. "Good for them.

"Even as the years go on you may lose something, but you have a basic philosophy that you're not going to sit and knit all day or watch the stupid television. What would I be doing if I didn't get into something like this?"

Leonard's performance this year is only one of a string of strong showings in the annual event. She has won medals in a variety of events, including the 60-yard dash, 3-mile walk, mile run, horseshoe pitching and basketball shooting.

"I just happened to get gold," she said.

Leonard prefers the walking events, but found she has been surprised at just how much she has enjoyed some of the others.

"Sometimes I like the running long jump if I can get a good run going," she said. "If you're good in something, that's usually your favorite."

Leonard stays active by taking one-hour walks through Webb Park in Weymouth and Hingham's Wampatuck Park with her daughters, Susan and Patty. Walking, Leonard said, is probably the best form of exercise because it can be done at any age and is inexpensive.

"All you need is a good pair of shoes," she said. "You just go out there and walk."

Leonard also stays fit by lifting light weights and taking part in other activities at the Beechwood by the Bay community center twice a week in Wollaston.

Leonard's healthy lifestyle stems from her younger years when she skated on the Charles River and Spy Pond in Arlington with her four brothers, Edward, Henry, Martin and William, and her sister, Mary. The memories she has of

THE FISH STORY

By Mark Trask

Show me the big fish

The day's light was a mere glimmer on the eastern horizon as the group scrambled gingerly down the rocks that created the great seawall. Rods and buckets were held high out of harms way. The slimy black rocks were treacherous but the promise of that spot of shoreline was worth the hazard. To the north the strong beacons of Boston Light and Graves Light winked their silent message. Way down to the east Minot's Light answered dimly in the misty morning haze.

Mike waded out to a promising spot and his line hissed as he cast into the dark water. Shortly after, the others had taken up spots inside his and their baits splashed into the water. The water was very quiet, almost oily it was so smooth. Scarcely a ripple gave hint to what lay below. Overhead young gulls circled and swooped in the brightening sky seeking an easy meal.

There it was! The gentle bump and the line shivered for a moment on the surface. As Mike bowed the tip the line picked up speed and the reel positively screamed as he leaned back hard to set the hook! The fight was on. The fish ran hard to deeper water and suddenly reversed its course. Mike reeled frantically trying to gain on the suddenly limp line. Then the rod snapped around to his left and the drag screamed again as line was taken by the hard fighting fish. The anxiety of the fight became shouts to the others to look out, the fish was headed right towards them.

The fish ran into the dark shadow of the seawall, ensnaring the three other anglers. What a nightmare! Then just as suddenly the fish swung right and into clear water again. By now the fish was tiring and Mike was able to get it close and eventually gill it and maneuver it onto a rope stringer. All four anglers chortled and hooted with glee at the circumstances. Several hours later the wild striper swung from the scale at 21 and a half pounds and 39 inches.

Rory MacDonald and son Colt had a great week of fishing. Everyday each was able to harvest a keeper fish. Rory was smiling despite shredding his knee on a barnacle encrusted rock. Their biggest was a 17 pounder. Talk about cookie-cutter bass. Dean Harrold introduced his striper to a pogie chunk near West Shag rock. His striper went 39 inches, 23 and one-half pounds. Closer in shore Scott Coughlin set aside the fly-rod for a trip to Little Harbor. A 20 pound, 38 inch linesider gobbled his pogie chunk.

Robby Ross of Cohasset picked up his first keeper and it was a hefty 41 inch bass. He was

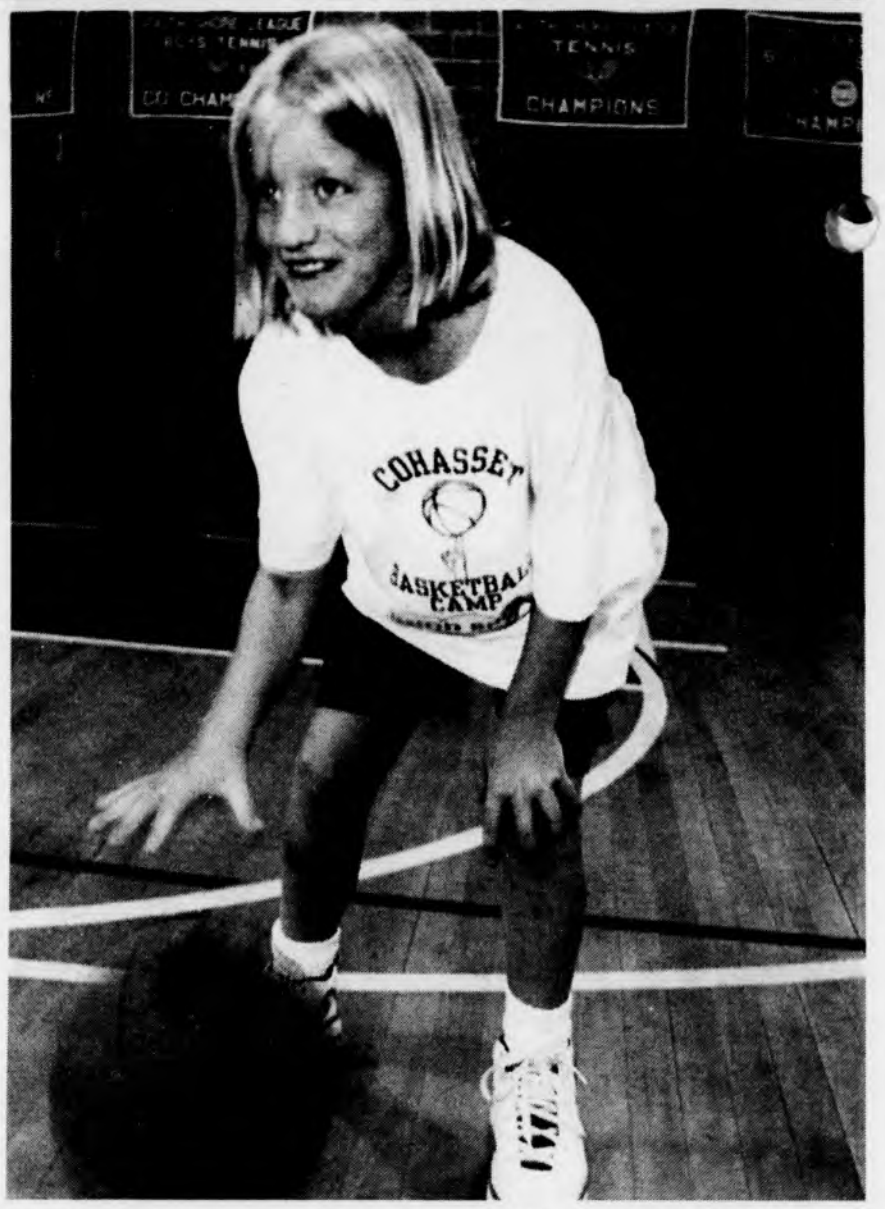
Two receive coaches' awards

Seven students at Derby Academy received Coaches' Awards for spring sports at a recent morning assembly. The award is given to one student from each team for "contributions benefiting all who take part in athletics." The recipients were praised for their selflessness, skill, thoughtfulness, daily endeavor, attitude and genuine love of the game.



The recipient for boys' varsity lacrosse was eighth grader Morgan Pierson of Cohasset. Seventh grader John McLoughlin of Hanover was the recipient for JV lacrosse. Ninth grader Tim Gravel was the recipient for varsity baseball and sixth grader Peter Roy, for JV baseball; both boys are from Hingham.

The recipient for girls' varsity lacrosse was Adie Kriegstein and for girls' varsity softball, Renee Courchesne, both girls are eighth graders from Hingham. The recipient for sixth grade girls' lacrosse/softball was sixth grader Kate Lewis of Cohasset.

Derby recognizes girls athletic achievements

Derby Academy in Hingham held its annual Girls' Athletic Banquet to recognize the achievements of girls in grades 6 through 9 in field hockey, basketball, lacrosse, softball, aerobics and ice hockey.

The intramural and team captains were recognized for their leadership. For field hockey they included varsity captains Christine Harlow, Adie Kriegstein of Hingham and Corinna Noering of Cohasset; junior varsity captains Cameron Burnham of Duxbury and Pam Wessling of Hingham; and grade 6 captains included Laura Mangurian of Hingham and Jody Miller for the varsity team; Dorothy Billings of Hanover and Caroline Curtis of Hingham for junior varsity; and Lauren Cahill and Leigh Ann Gardiner, both of Hingham, for grade 6. Varsity lacrosse captains were Beatrice Ghita of Weymouth and Kate Smith of Rockland; varsity softball captains were Renee Courchesne of Hingham and Jody Miller and grade 6 lacrosse/softball captains were Nacie Carson of Marshfield and Anne Gaughen of Hingham.

Chelsea Grossman works on her dribbling skills earlier this week at the Cohasset basketball camp.

Lacrosse lessons available

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a full-contact, full-equipment lacrosse clinic this summer under the direction of Mr. Chuck Jaffee of Cohasset, for youngsters entering grades five and six during the fall of 1997.

Clinics will be held Monday evenings, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. through Aug. 18.

Participants will need a helmet, stick and pads for participation in this clinic. The fee for the eight-week opportunity is $35 per person.

Registration forms and details are available at the Cohasset Recreation office, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall. Early registration is advised due to a limitation in participation.

Getting a kick from soccer

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7 years old.

VIP soccer camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4- and 5-year-olds and meets from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 21 to 25. The cost is $50 per week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 21 through 25 for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $80 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the Front Field of Cohasset High School. For brochures and registration forms, come to the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor, Town Hall.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Protecting your retirement investment is no easy chore

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

All retirement accounts are not created equal. You don't have to be a finance whiz to realize the benefits of tax-deferred growth in accounts such as a 401(k), IRA and Keogh. But the relationship between taxes and pensions have gotten trickier in the 10 years since the government created "success" taxes to penalize those who accumulate wealth beyond what the government thinks is reasonably required for a comfortable retirement.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Here are the rules. As the law stands under the Tax Reform Act of 1986, any investor who has accumulated more than $1.2 million (in today's dollars) in a tax-deferred retirement account by the time they are 65, could have to pay excess distribution taxes of 15 percent - on top of income tax - when they withdraw money. This is because under current law, any withdrawal or payment from all pension and retirement accounts that exceed $160,000 per year (that's the level in 1997; it's indexed to inflation) get whacked with this excess-distribution tax.

Why not simply take out less than that and avoid the tax? Remember that the minimum size of withdrawals from retirement accounts is mandated by a formula based on life expectancy; a retiree that has aggressively saved may be forced to make withdrawals that trigger the tax.

The sacred canon of personal finance is that savers should defer paying taxes during their working lives - when they are in a high income tax bracket - until after retirement, when they are in a lower income-tax bracket. Yet workers who build a nest egg so big that they trigger the success tax will find themselves at retirement in a higher effective tax bracket than they were while working.

What's more, if the retiree dies with too much money in the tax-deferred account, something called an excess-accumulation tax kicks in. This extra 15 percent penalty can push marginal tax rates to the point that more than 90 percent of the estate is carried away. The excess-accumulation tax is deferred if assets are transferred to a surviving spouse; the tax applies after both have died. The definition of "too much money" changes with age; it is currently any amount over $1.2 million for a 65-year-old, and $1 million for a 75-year-old.

"It's not just a pension but an estate planning issue" says Steven Lockwood, a New York pension attorney whose firm, Lockwood Pension Services, deals with success-tax problems

These two taxes contradict the widely held belief that investors should stash as much money as they can in their 401(k) and similar accounts. While the serious saver may still be financially secure in retirement, tax-deferred accounts may actually produce a smaller nest egg in the end than a non-tax-advantaged saving could have provided.

This may seem like a dilemma for the rich. But you don't have to be a millionaire to potentially feel their effects, according to a study on taxation of pensions by the Center for Economic Policy Research at Stanford University. Co-authors John B. Shoven and David Wise found that people with annual incomes as low as $25,000 to $40,000 are likely to get hit with the penalty tax thanks to the power of tax-deferred compounding and the stock-market's rallies of the 1980s and 1990s.

So, what can you do to protect your pension from the Internal Revenue Service? Shoven and Wise suggest that investors consider setting up a non-tax-advantaged retirement account in conjunction with their IRAs and 401(k) plans.

You'll need to calculate when you'll hit the ceiling that triggers the success tax, and limit your contributions to your IRAs and 401(k)s accordingly. Then, put your additional investments in the non-tax-advantaged retirement account. If you've already got too much in your tax-deferred accounts, re-allocate your investment assets both inside and outside the retirement plan, keeping in mind the tax repercussions.

For instance, you should avoid including high-earners like small-capitalization growth stocks in a tax-deferred account. Their growth in value might catapult your portfolio into the success-tax zone. Moreover, withdrawals from the account will be taxed as income at retirement (age 59 1/2); in a non-tax-deferred account only the dividend payments are taxed as income--appreciation is taxed at a lower capital gains rate. And small growth stocks typically don't pay out dividends.

So, if you were to keep your growth stocks in a non-tax-deferred account untouched until retirement, you would only pay a capital gains tax of 28 percent on their price appreciation when selling the stock - which would be less than the income tax you would have to pay on a withdrawal from a retirement account.

As you might expect, stocks with dividends pay-outs and corporate bonds (with their interest payments) belong in the tax-deferred account. They stand to gain the most from tax deferral. Normally the payments would be taxed as income, but in a 401(k) they can be 100 percent reinvested.

This tax-conscious allocation among funds can actually earn you money. Shoven and Wise found that putting equity-income mutual funds in your tax-deferred retirement account and growth stock mutual funds in your non-tax-deferred account (provided you don't accept dividend payments and incur capital gains) would perform better than two accounts that each mixed the two funds 50-50.

Because of the tax advantages explained above, the value of withdrawals after taxes from the - let's call it - efficient savings plan would be nine percent higher than those from the inefficient plan. And, if the excess-distribution tax kicked in, there would be a 15.7 percent difference inthe two plans. The key is to minimize taxes while preserving wealth.

If, you are at least 60 years old and worried about getting hit with the success taxes, there is still some thing you can do. Take advantage of the three-year moratorium on the excess-distribution tax (inserted into the 1996 legislation that raised the minimum wage), and withdraw the amounts over $160,000 that will keep your tax-deferred plan below excess levels in the future.

all smiles as it stretched the scale to 23 pounds. Meanwhile Ken McGrath was the victor in a battle with a 44 pound striper that inhaled his tube and worm rig near the western ledges. The Hassen crew did well in the same area to open the commercial season. Chummed pogies and chunks were used to bring in 40 keepers.

The Second Annual Beachcomber Bass Tournament will get underway August 2 and will run through the weekend of October 4. This tournament is held yearly to honor the memory of Sheldon Sladen, a well known local lobsterman and angler. Many have fond memories of Sheldon and often stories of how he helped others enjoy fishing can be heard in the store. Entry forms are available at Trask Tackle in North Scituate. A nicely designed T-shirt is produced by Goodwin Graphics for the event and are issued to each entrant. T-shirts are also available for those who would like to support the Tournament Fund. Last year's winner was Dana Infusino who took top honors with a 26 pound, 15 ounce bass. Each year the winner receives a trophy and the anglers name is inscribed on the big trophy.

As the summer has progressed it has become apparent to many that this a great year for fishing both weatherwise and in terms of the numbers of fish being caught. Increased grumbling about lines being cut by passing boats and crowded conditions around popular ledges certainly attest to that. Let us all respect each others right to the pursuit of happiness and display common courtesy on her siblings and the times they spent together as children are still fresh in her mind.

Leonard's quest for gold,

"We had a great family," Leonard said. "We were one for all and all for one. Maybe that's why I can't sit down now.

"I got to this point in my life because I've always been active. I had four older brothers and I did everything they'd do."

Leonard, though, probably would have been just as active on her own. She competed on her grammar school's track team and as a student at Saint Mary's School in Cambridge during her high school years, Leonard remembers taking the 10-minute walk from the campus to the gymnasium. Along with rest of the girls, she would practice her basketball shooting under the close scrutiny of the nuns, who were never shy about commenting on the girls' form in trying to put the ball in the net.

Leonard also delved into tap dancing as a youngster and practiced on the stage of the Metropolitan Theater, now the Wang Center.

"If we were good enough we got to be in a show," she said. "but that never materialized. Mary and I would come home and practice on the bricks in front of the fireplace."

One interesting aspect of Leonard's life has been the strong resemblance to legendary actress Katherine Hepburn she has carried with her through the years. The inevitable stares and double-takes have been backed up by humorous stories from Leonard.

Leonard was on a date in a Boston restaurant several years ago when she noticed a man a few tables over staring at her. She felt uncomfortable until he came up after and apologized to Leonard, explaining he thought he was in the same restaurant with Hepburn.

"I've been mistaken for her for years," Leonard said with a laugh. "It's fun sometimes."

But it's Leonard's sense of humor that has kept her going at full tilt over the years. She's a strong believer that it's just as easy to dwell on the good things about your life and the people around you than the negatives.

"Life is what you make of it," she said. "Have some laughs along the way, it's good for you."

South Shore Soccer Camp

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8 to 18. This is the South Shore Soccer Camp's sixth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering, it is suggested that you call the Cohasset recreation department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791, to be assured enrollment. Brochures and registration forms are available at the recreation office.

South Shore Soccer will be offered to both boys and girls during the weeks of Monday through Friday, Aug. 4 to 8, and August 11 to 15. Should a camper wish to attend both camps, this is now possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camps must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays through Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Cohasset's Miliken Field. The cost for camp is $175 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available.

South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

Swing north for family-oriented golf vacations

By Jim Woodworth

Ah, summer. It's vacation time, and you know exactly what you want to do.

You've had the clubs out of the closet since February. You've added a new pair of shoes and a few boxes of shiny new golf balls to your bag.

You've been working on your swing every weekend at local courses. Oh heck, admit it: you took a sick day or two to work on that swing. And it's paid off. Tiger Woods has nothing on you.

Now, you're going to take your family and your new, improved game for a week or two of fun in the sun. You plan on hitting the links while the rest of your family members swim, hike, shop and otherwise entertain themselves. In New England, that can mean just one thing:

Time to head for the hills

And when it comes to golf vacations, there's no better hills than those found in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Long known as a haven for skiers, the small towns and mountains of northern New England are also home for an impressive collection of golf resorts during the warmer months, with Maine's Sugarloaf /USA course topping the list of must-play courses.

Following is just a small sample of some of the best courses and resorts the commonwealth's neighbors to the north have to offer.

Sugarloaf/USA

Think of skiing if you must when you hear the name, but also know this: Sugarloaf USA's golf course has been named the best in New England by no less an authority than Golf Digest.

Also weighing in with high praise for this mountain wilderness course in western Maine are Golf Illustrated, Golf Week and Golf Magazine.

So what's all the fuss about? A par-72, Robert Trent Jones Jr.-designed course with challenging terrain in a beautiful mountain setting, for starters. The mountain views are nothing short of spectacular, with Sugarloaf's signature 11th hole grabbing the spotlight.

It is at this par-3, 200-yard hole that players face the unique challenge of hitting their ball over the Carrabassett River to the green 128 feet below the tee.

The rest of Sugarloaf's holes range from par 3 to par 5.

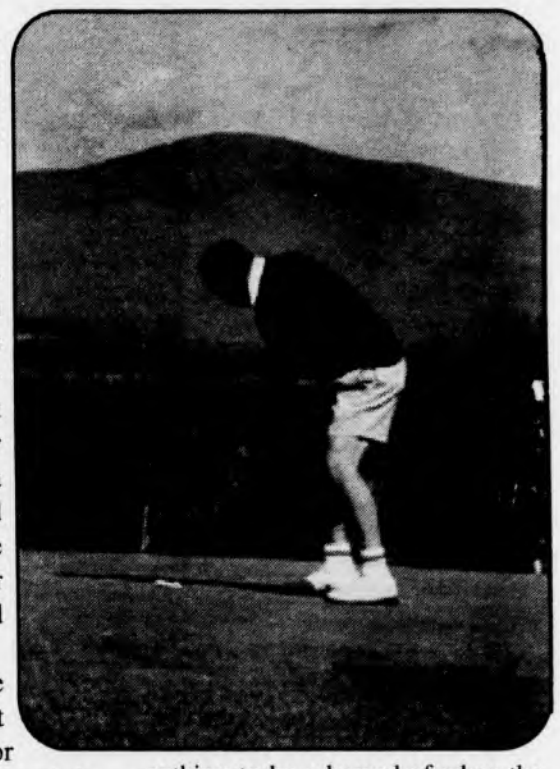
Call (800) THE-LOAF for more information, or visit Sugarloaf/ USA's Web site at www.sugarloaf.com.

Killington/Mt. Snow/Sugarbush

Vermont's hills come alive in summer with the sound of clubs smacking balls on three distinguished courses featuring designs by Robert Trent Jones Sr. (Sugarbush) and Geoffrey Cornish (Mt. Snow and Killington).

These three resorts combine with Sugarloaf to form the American Skiing Company's Golf Resort Group. All four courses offer vacation packages starting at $89 per day.

Sugarbush offers golfers a feeling of solitude and serenity as they play the fairly long (6,500 yards) course while surrounded by a scenic view of the Green Mountains. The course features dramatic elevation changes, a dozen doglegs and tight, tree-lined fairways.



Long known as a haven for skiers, the small towns and mountains of northern New England are also home for an impressive collection of golf resorts during the warmer months, with Maine's Sugarloaf/USA course topping the list of must-play courses.

For more information, call 888-97-GOLF-4, or visit the Sugarbush Web site at www.sugarbush.com.

Mount Snow Golf Club has been host to numerous PGA and LPGA tournaments, and features water hazards on 11 holes. While the front nine is open and the back nine features hilly terrain, the entire course features spectacular mountain scenery.

For more information, call 888-97-GOLF-4, or check out the Mount Snow Web site at www.mountsnow.com.

The final course in this Vermont mountains trio is Killington, which features dramatic elevations and a panoramic view of the mountains. The 6,300-yard course is a great test of golf skill, no matter what level, and features a covered driving range and practice area. Also on the menu: a full range of other recreational activities and a vibrant night life.

Check out the Killington's Web site at www.killington.com, or call 888-97-GOLF-4 for more information.

The Balsams

The Balsams Grand Resort Hotel in Dixville Notch offers Golf Digest's top-ranked course in New Hampshire coupled with a top historic hotel.

Steve Barba, president and managing partner at The Balsams, notes the resort has 27 holes, a far cry from the six holes the resort started with more than 100 years ago. Donald Ross designed an 18-hole course for the resort in 1912, while a nine-hole executive course was added later.

Barba says the 18-hole course is actually built on the side of a mountain, giving players views of Vermont and Canada.

The resort's signature hole is 18, which has a vertical rise of 1,800 feet from tee to green.

For more information, call (800) 255-0600, or visit the resort's Web site at www.thebalsams.com.

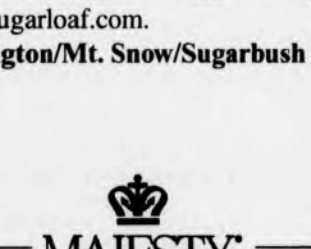
Samoset Resort

This course is consistently ranked number two in the state of Maine by several golf publications, but that's nothing to be ashamed of when the top course is Sugarloaf.

Located on the coast in the scenic town of Rockport, golfers get something here they aren't able to see at Sugarloaf: a beautiful view of the Atlantic Ocean. The resort has benefited from a $2.5 million renovation of its golf facilities, including a $1 million clubhouse that houses a video golf simulator.

The renovation included four new holes, replacing four of the resort's weaker holes, according to Michael Lynch, marketing director at the Samoset Resort.

The course is a championship par 70 featuring four sets of tees, while Rockport and surrounding communities offer a full slate of recreational activities for the whole family, as well as some of the best seafood found anywhere. Lynch points to the activities in neighboring Camden and Rockland as popular attractions for families, adding, "Of course, there's always the shops and boutiques."



For more information, call (800) 341-1650, or visit the Samoset Web site at www.samoset.com.

CRUISING, TOURING OUR SPECTACULAR 49TH STATE

By Judy Enright

You might not remember every last detail about your visit to Alaska but you will never forget the images of the trip. If you have the chance to go, take it. This is the experience of a lifetime.

Our 49th state is everything you imagined it would be and nothing like you could conjure up in your wildest dreams. The seascape and landscape stop you dead in your tracks.

The glaciers and inlets and mountainous skylines are indescribable, as are the wild animals — fox, grizzly bear, otters, bison, caribou, reindeer, moose and Dall sheep. Everywhere you look, you see something even more fascinating than whatever you had just been watching.

Want adventure? There is plenty here. Our Star Princess Cruise, for instance, offered white water rafting near Denali National park, helicopter flights from Skagway onto a glacier, travel to lunch via seaplane from Juneau Harbor to mention a few. There's so much to do and, if you're like we were, you'll want to experience every single thing because you don't know when you'll ever return.

Our entire trip — a 15-day sea and land cruise — was arranged through Princess Cruises on the Star Princess out of Vancouver, B.C.

We set sail for Seward in a downpour of confetti and streamers on the most glorious late May afternoon. The sun is shining and there's scarcely a cloud in the sky.

The ship is a virtual floating city and offers every amenity from live entertainment and gaming to dancing and dance lessons, formal dinners, a captain's cocktail party, gift shops and more. Our favorite hideout was a spectacular forward lounge with windows all-around where we spent many a teatime ogling the passing glory of the Inside Passage.

The Star Princess crew excels at service. Donnelly said that on her Regal Princess trip, a woman left a camera on the bus after a land tour. Donnelly reported the loss that night and in the morning, the woman had her camera back — in the next city. This attention to detail and caring makes the cruise line so popular and the cruises such a success.

Food and drink is plentiful on the ship and available at any hour of day or night. The crew on our voyage was Greek. The two waiters for our table of six exemplified the graciousness of the staff. They were at your elbow every second anticipating every need.

Two Canadian pilots come on board and direct us through the Johnstone Strait and Queen Charlotte Strait along the north coast of Vancouver Island, we learn from the daily Princess newsletter. We later pick up an American pilot and cruise through Nichols Passage to arrive in Ketchikan, our first port.

The double inside cabin I booked was spacious and well-equipped with closets, a safe, a private bath with shower but it had one drawback. I couldn't tell from my room whether it was day or night or what was going on outside. My friends, who had an outside cabin with a lovely window looking out on the fabulous views, had to alert me to every happening — such as docking in Ketchikan, the salmon capital of Alaska. The next time, even though it's much more costly, I will definitely opt for an outside cabin and I would recommend the same for anyone.

Ketchikan was a fascinating introduction to land-cruising with its gold rush era buildings and native totem poles. We happened upon a Memorial Day parade while on our way back to the ship from the Tongass Historical Museum and Totem Pole and were reminded of home.

Juneau was next — the state's capital and the most amazingly beautiful city with snow-capped mountains as a backdrop. And even though you could see the snow, it was hot — and humid in Juneau.

Alaskan weather runs the meteorological gamut depending on the season and Mother Nature. We were in Alaska for two weeks and had only one day of rain — in Skagway.

The fabled Inside Passage defies description. From the deck of the Star Princess, we watch and hear mammoth chunks of ice, as tall as city blocks, "calving" as they crash into Glacier Bay from gigantic glaciers and become icebergs.

While we are in Glacier Bay, National Park Service naturalists board the ship and offer lectures on the flora and fauna, animals and birds, glaciers and history of the area.

If you're looking for a future adventure, put Alaska, the last frontier, on your must-do list.

COHASSET BUSINESS

Harbor loses one hardware store and gains another

Joseph's moves to Cohasset, Satuit Paint and Hardware opens on Front Street

By Jennifer R. Horan
STAFF WRITER

Contrary to rumors circulating town, Joseph's Hardware II, has not gone out of business — it's just moved its hammers and and nails over the town line.

Business owner Barron Joseph has relocated his five-year-old Scituate business to Cohasset in the former Barn at Bound Brook on Route 3A.

"It's a beautiful building and a better location," said Joseph, who owns a store in Norwell and co-owns a Boston store with his brother.

Despite Joseph's move, the landmark hardware store on Front Street has no vacancy. A new business has already moved in.

Michael Sheskey, owner of the Coffee Corner and the Cleaning Corner, has taken over the building with partner Doug Smith. The two have named the business Satuit Paint and Hardware.

Joseph expects his new store, located near the soon-to-open Shaw's supermarket, will do well its new location.

"The traffic on 3A is phenomenal," he said. "It's conducive to doing business."

Joseph's Hardware II closed its doors in Scituate a few weeks ago. The Cohasset store has already opened for business, though a grand opening is planned for the next two weeks.

"Scituate Harbor is a nice place to do business. But it's becoming touristy and it's not able to support two hardware stores," said Joseph, who has been in the hardware business for 15 years.

True Value Hardware also operates out of Scituate Harbor, just off Front Street at 188 Mill Wharf Plaza.

But Sheskey said he thinks the new business will thrive in the harbor, despite the competition around the corner.

"I think if you're just pleasant to the people, offer good service, a good product and a good price, you can make things work," he said.

Although the shelves of Satuit Paint & Hardware are not yet fully stocked, Sheskey and Smith are keeping the store's doors open to customers looking for supplies. They plan to have the store fully operational within the next few weeks and a grand opening date by Labor Day weekend, he said.

Joseph said many of his Scituate customers have already patronized his new store and he expects more customers to come through the door once they learn of his new location.

"They've kept our spirits up," he said. "We know our customers will follow us."

Sheskey and Smith are confident they can attract a core of local customers to their new store as well.

"It's a new ball game for us, but we've hired some very knowledgeable people," Sheskey said. "I think once we stock up our inventory, we'll get that loyalty back."

Resident opens enchanting eatery in North Scituate

By Jennifer R. Horan
STAFF WRITER

In Homer's, "The Odyssey, the heroic mariner and his crew find themselves entrapped and enchanted by a goddess named Circe, who cooks them a "delicious, outstanding" feast.

"It's one of my favorite parts of the book," said Cohasset resident Maura Bulman, who grew up in Scituate.

Bulman hopes to cast a healthy spell on North Scituate this month, when she opens a coffee and sandwich shop called Circe's Grotto.

In the morning, she plans to offer fine coffees, bagels, scones and coffee cakes. By midday, the menu will expand to include fresh sandwiches.

"It's going to be back-to-basics healthy food, like roll-ups and fuccachia sandwiches," explained Bulman, who planned to open her shop yesterday. "I'm not really a health nut, but I don't like the taste of a cold cut sub either."

Bulman envisions a 10-seat food shop at Gannett Marketplace, 344 Gannett Road, similar to the eateries she patronizes in the city.

"I go to Cambridge and Boston a lot, but I'm not a city person. I like what they have to offer — which I can't get around here," she said.

While the offerings will resemble that of the metropolitan scene, the atmosphere will not, she said.

"One reason I wanted to open my own business is that I hate when people who work in shops aren't friendly," she said. "I go out of my way to go to the places where they say hello and smile. I think we're losing that. And I think it's important."

In her own odyssey, Bulman has come full circle to open her first business.

"I have a most interesting and varied resume," she said, smiling.

A Spanish and journalism teacher at Marshfield High School for nine years, Bulman has a bachelor's, master's and doctoral degree. Throughout her career, she has held jobs as a flight attendant, waitress, caterer and fisherman.

She has always wanted to carry out her own dream in the food industry, however.

"It's something that's always been in the back of my head," she said. "And now's the time. I never see myself doing one thing forever."

Before she went to college, Bulman asked her parents to help her open a restaurant in Scituate harbor instead of paying her college tuition.

Three higher education degrees later, she found herself sitting on the curb in front of a vacant builder's office on Gannett Road watching the cars go by.

She liked what she saw.

"There's a good traffic pattern here," she noticed. "People are driving through here before leaving to go to Boston. Trucks are making deliveries all through this district. It's an untapped resource."

Although she had originally favored Scituate harbor as the launching pad for her endeavor, she decided North Scituate village would better suit her needs.

Maura Bulman of Cohasset plans to open Circe's Grotto in North Scituate this month.

"The harbor has a lot going on and the businesses sort of compete against each other," she said. "There's a lot going on in North Scituate, too, but I think I'll be offering something that is not exactly the same as anything else here."

Carpenters are now working on tranforming the interior of the building space to accommodate Bulman's vision. She has all kinds of ideas for the future of Circe's Grotto, such as a delivery service and a night-time coffee house.

"I'm really excited. It's like being a freshman all over again," she said.

Health board is scolded for breaking trust

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

Selectmen lambasted the board of health Monday night for promising to work as a team with the sewer department, then apparently reneging on that promise.

The selectmen were referring to a letter dated July 11 that the board of health sent to the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs complaining that it hasn't been included in the wastewater facility plan discussion.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan and other selectmen lashed out at the health board for sending the letter without talking to selectmen and sewer commissioners first.

Sullivan said the health board and sewer commissioners met with selectmen two weeks ago and promised to work as a team. The health board pledged to bring its complaints to sewer commissioners and selectmen before contacting state agencies, Sullivan said.

He said the letter violated the entire sense of trust forged between the three groups.

"We need to get both boards in and ask the health board what is the purpose of this letter and what did they expect as an outcome," Sullivan said. "This shows bad judgment on the part of the board of health and it shows they didn't review the sewer information."

Selectman Diane Sullivan was less diplomatic.

"This is somewhat resolved because MEPA has approved the plan," she said. "We'll be able to handle this in spite of this miserable letter. I was appalled that a town board would send this letter after our ef-

Painting the town Plein-Air

Town is artists' inspiration

By Robert Ziff
CORRESPONDENT

The multi-faceted idea, "Paint the town Plein-Air" was the brainchild of Adele Kilroy, the director of the Christopher Gallery on Route 3A.

Her idea was to have more than a dozen artists set up from noon to 4 p.m. in shop in the town's village as well as down by the harbor. She thought it would be an opportunity for the public to watch them at work and ask any questions they have.

"It also opens up the door for these artists, who may be familiar with each others' works, but have never met, to meet each other in person for the first time," she said.

Her idea went further to include a gallery open house, from 6 to 9 p.m., where the artists' work would be displayed and placed on sale,

Harbor dredging to be postponed one year

Officials say money for project is assured

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The Army Corps of Engineers needs more time to get organized for Cohasset Harbor dredging, so the project must be put off a year, officials learned last week.

The town must also re-test silt samples from the inner harbor, a complicated, time-consuming process.

But $1.34 million in federal funding for the project is virtually assured.

U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, D-Quincy, met with local officials and the Army Corps at town hall Friday to report on the project's status.

Former Selectman Peter Pratt, a prime mover behind the project, explained that the money would be available in federal fiscal year 1998 which starts October 1.

But dredging must occur during the "environmental window" of October to February to avoid disturbing certain migratory fish populations.

So although the money is there, the Army Corps needs more time to design and put the project out to bid.

"It was an extremely productive meeting," Pratt said.

"The bottom line is that is has been confirmed by Delahunt and (Senator John) Kerry that they are in 100 percent agreement that the town will get the money in federal fiscal year 1998, which starts Oct. 1.

Eastern Edison installs new poles

Eastern Edison is planning to install two new support poles on Route 3A in the vicinity of Bergson's Ice Cream. The two stub poles will be used to anchor two existing poles across the street with metal cables. Eastern Utilities representative Jim Huxley said work to widen that section of Route 3A would make the poles less stable, requiring the stub poles for stability. Selectmen approved the request 5-0.

Papa Gino's gets new manager

Ed Meighen of Dorchester has been named the new manager of Papa Gino's in Cohasset. Meighen has served as a manager for the pizza chain for the last 10 years, working at restaurants in Hanover and the Harbor Light Mall in Weymouth. Selectmen approved the changeover 5-0. Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan asked Meighen if he could "keep it (Cohasset Papa Gino's) a little cleaner" in the future.

Selectmen also approved 5-0 a change in the company's board of directors, new stockholders and the issuance of stock. Papa Gino's has changed its corporate name from Papa Gino's Acquisition Corp., to Papa Gino's Inc.

Selectmen reappoint board members

At their July 21 meeting, selectmen reappointed several people to local boards and announced a number of openings.

Jeff Waal and Susan Cope were reappointed to the conservation commission.

The arts lottery council needs five new members because five of the seven current members have served the maximum number of terms allowed. Allison Moskow, Susan DeMichele, E. Sine Pounder, Harold E. Coughlin and Paula M. Kozol must all vacate their positions when new members are appointed.

Jacquline Hart, Gail Parks, David Buick and Mary Jane Larson were reappointed to the Cohasset Commons Historical Commission.

Helen Nothnagle, Linda Ingram, and Frances F. Andrews were reappointed to the seven-member commission on disabilities. Nothnagle was reappointed to only a one-year term. Acting Town Manager Ed McCann said he wanted to even out the number of people reappointed each year to three member one year and two members each of the following years.

There is one vacancy on the council on elder affairs. T. Gerard Keating was reappointed, but Austin F. O'Toole told selectmen he did not wish to be reappointed.

There is one vacancy on the Government Island Study Committee because James "Russ" Bonetti does not wish to be reappointed.

Peter Wood, Gail Parks, Lorren Gibbons and John F. Bertolami were reappointed to the harbor study committee. Wood was reappointed for only one year to even out reappointments in the future.

Rebecca Bates-McArthur, Ellen M. Freda and David Wadsworth were reappointed to the historical commission.

Judith P. Volungis was reappointed to the registrar of voters.

Lobster Lab proposals are in

The town has received one response to its request for proposal seeking bidders to help the town construct a lobster laboratory at the Hagerty Property. The Cohasset Lighthouse Keeper's Corporation submitted the only proposal. Acting Town Manager Ed McCann said the town would now try to negotiate a favorable program with the Lighthouse Keepers. Town Counsel Paul DeRensis also cleared up some confusion about whether the new town manager would be in charge of securing deeds and leases for town buildings. DeRensis said the town manager would be in charge of operating an managing buildings, but selectmen, as the local licensing authority, would be in charge of leases and deeds.

Smoking bans attempt to snuff out smoking

By Paula Woodhull and Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITERS

While the major tobacco companies and the U. S. Surgeon General do battle over regulating the cigarette industry, local boards of health have been on a mission of their own in search of new ways to curtail smoking.

Almost every town on the South Shore has already banned, or is in the process of banning, cigarette vending machines. But that's about where the similarities in fighting the war against smoking ends.

There is an enormous disparity from town to town when it comes to banning or eliminating smoking in restaurants. Many local communities are reluctant to impose too stringent a regulation for fear it will hurt business. And officials are feeling the heat from restaurateurs.

But communities like Hingham, for example, are pushing ahead to snuff out smoking.

Hingham has one of the most stringent smoking bans on the South Shore. Like Cohasset, the town has a smoke-free policy in municipal buildings and vehicles and bans cigarette vending machines and displays.

Both towns have also instituted a 75 percent smoke-free policy in restaurants and only allow smoking in designated areas at worksites. Neither town allows advertising, samples or single sales of tobacco products.

"The board of health is mandated to protect public health," said Bruce Capman of the Hingham Board of Health.

"Smoking is a big health issue for both non-smokers and smokers alike. We deal with it as a public issue, which the board takes seriously."

Capman said society in general has dictated a change in smoking policy.

"Fifteen or 20 years ago, 80 percent of the population smoked," he said. "Now it's the other way around. Now let's prevent kids from picking up the habit."

Dawn Sibor, director of the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program, which serves 14 South Shore communities, said most of the regulations already in place involve selling to youth and not having vending machines accessible to them.

"If they're not there, hopefully kids won't start smoking," she said.

The South Shore Collaborative has just published an updated, expanded guide to smoke-free dining in more than 200 restaurants from Avon to Weymouth.

The guide is available at local restaurants, health care facilities and tourist information centers and is the collaborative's latest strategy in its anti-smoking campaign.

Where there's smoke

With so much attention put on smoking in the last several years, including the impact of second-hand smoking, more and more groups are leading the charge to eliminate smoking in public places.

When smoking regulations came out in 1994 in Hingham, Capman said the town was 25 percent smoke-free. By 1995, it was at the 75 percent smoke-free level.

Capman said there was tremendous opposition in Hingham when smoking regulations first came out. Now there are some restaurants which have opted on their own to remain smoke-free.

The Town of Marshfield, however , has taken a less stringent approach. The town bans smoking in public buildings — such as the library and town hall — but requires only the state minimum (25 percent smoke-free) when it comes to smoking in restaurants. And, according to health board chairman Gerry Maher, the pressure to change doesn't necessarily come from townspeople.

"It's definitely not from the business owners either," he said, noting that pressure tends to come from such organizations as the South Shore Collaborative and other smoking coalitions. "We've been asked to step up the regulations, but we have no plans to do so."

If that does happen, he said the board will invite business owners to participate in the process. But for now, the board is content with the town's regulations.

"Our goal is to stop teenagers from smoking, not adults," he said.

"We don't want Marshfield to Group launches all-out war

Organizations like the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative, which includes Scituate, have emerged since the state imposed an additional 25-cent tax on every pack of cigarettes back in 1993, launching an all-out war on smoking.

The cigarette tax went into effect when voters approved an initiative petition on the statewide ballot known as Question 1.

Alarmed over the health care costs associated with smoking, voters decided to increase the state tax on cigarettes by 25 cents a pack in order to fund the Health Protection Fund.

This fund would finance a statewide plan to educate the public about the risks of smoking and second-hand smoke and would help pay for public health tobacco control programs such as the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative.

The state decided it would use the classic carrot and stick approach to advance its anti-smoking agenda. Health boards that showed an interest in curbing smoking by enacting smoking regulations would be eligible for grant money dispersed by the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program.

In 1996, more than $70 million from the state's tobacco control program went to fund anti-smoking efforts and about $7 million went directly to nearly 200 health boards in the state.

The explicit goal has been to reduce cigarette smoking by 50 percent by the year 2000 using a variety of methods, including a steady drumbeat of anti-smoking advertising, legislative initiatives, local health board regulations, public education and health fairs.

turn into a Gestapo-style state. If you smoke it should be your right to do so," added Maher, who is a non-smoker.

Those who smoke, some suggest, should also not be treated as second-class citizens. Smokers are often made to feel ostracized, often forced to sit by the kitchen or a dark corner in restaurants.

Norwell's Pat McKinley, who operates Strawberry Fair Restaurant in Queen Anne's Corner, said she consistently has people who leave her establishment because the town has strict regulations governing smoking in restaurants. Two years after the regulation was imposed, she said every week one or two parties will come in, discover it's smoke-free and leave.

"The jury is still out for me," she said. "I can't put my finger on how much business I've lost.

"Most people can get through lunch without a cigarette, but it definitely affects my dinner business. A lot of people want to have a cocktail, a fine meal and then relax over a cigarette."

Right now, McKinley views the smoking restrictions as another obstacle, another challenge "along with bad parking and traffic congestion in the Queen Anne's Corner" for her to overcome in order to be profitable.

The biggest issue with eliminating smoking in restaurants is that diners can go to other towns where smoking is allowed, he said.

"But I haven't seen any indication of that in Hingham restaurants," Capman remarked. "Hingham hasn't been hurt more than any other town."

But Thomas Harrington, owner of MacArthur's restaurant and president of the Hingham Restaurant Association, said Hingham's 75 percent smoke-free policy has caused problems for local restaurants, especially those located on the borders of other towns which have less stringent policies.

"Hingham's policy causes competition and problems with being able to satisfy our customers," Harrington said.

He said there doesn't seem to be a pattern in non-smoking and smoking situations.

"Sometimes a smoking room will be half empty while we're turning away people from the non-smoking section because it's already filled," said Harrington, "and vice versa."

In his opinion, Hingham's policy is not a plus for the restaurant business, and he'd like to see the state implement consistent regulations.

Harbor dredging to be postponed

"But the project will have a physical start in September 1998."

Due to disagreements among federal agencies about testing protocol, such as water temperature, the town must perform a third round of testing silt samples in the inner harbor.

The town is responsible for dredging about 7,500 cubic yards of silt from the Parker Avenue boat ramp, Cox's Point, Lawrence Wharf and the area between Cox's Point and the Yacht Club.

"There is a disagreement among the three agencies — the Army Corps, Environmental Protection Agency and Dept. of Marine Fisheries — in interpretation of the results," Pratt said. "But the good news is only a portion of the testing will have to be redone."

Pratt said at issue is the need at the federal, political level to make sure that this doesn't happen again.

"We need one set of marching orders," he said. He said engineers will work out a joint letter to be signed by the three agencies and overseen by Delahunt to make sure protocols are clearly established.

Another issue which must be resolved is the two private sector, commercial encroachments, Pratt said.

He explained the Army Corps said the Chart House and Cohasset Marina docks are encroaching on federal waters. The town must figure out what its legal enforcement powers are, he said.

Pratt said the delays and retesting are a hassle but "that's the price you pay for using someone else's money."

The federal channel, which is getting narrower and narrower due to silt buildup, hasn't been fully dredged in 35 years. There has been periodic maintenance dredging of the harbor and federal channel since then but the last time a federal/town dredging project of this magnitude was undertaken in Cohasset was in 1939.

With the state's financial help, the town is responsible for dredging areas in the harbor while the Army Corps of Engineers, a federal agency whose civil mission is to develop and manage the country's water resources, will tackle the harbor channel which falls under federal jurisdiction.

A total of $300,000 — including a state grant administered by the Waterways Division of the state Department of Environmental Management — and a $100,000 town match are expected to cover the town's dredging costs.

Delahunt shepherded money for the project through at the federal level when he discovered flaws in the reporting system among state and federal agencies, which set national priorities for federal assistance to coastal navigation improvements.

"I am forced to conclude that local communities cannot necessarily trust that they are being credited fully for the volume of shellfish they are actually landing — which is a key part of the formula that sets national funding priorities," Delahunt said in a press release.

Cohasset Harbor, ranked 10th in the state in 1995 for catching lobsters, landing 570,000 pounds last year. With 39 lobster men fishing out of the harbor, Cohasset is ranked 11th in size of ports out of 40 in the state.

Harbormaster John Winters said delaying dredging will have an adverse effect but it's a fact of life.

"It's not possible this year. that's straight from the Army Corps and they rule the roost," he said.

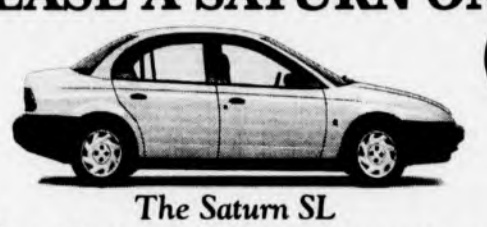
Chart House ordered to move its docks

Selectmen have denied a request by the Chart House to implement corporate officer changes. Selectman Diane Sullivan said the Chart House was going to have to move its docks and floats out of federal waters so dredging could begin before she would approve the corporate changes.

Sullivan said she was annoyed that the Chart House hadn't done anything to move the floats and docks. She added that she wouldn't approve their licenses for renewal next year unless the docks are moved.

"We should send them a letter telling them to move the docks or we'll move the docks and charge the Chart House," Sullivan said.

The Army Corps of Engineers has tried to contact the Chart House about moving the docks, but to date has received no response.



Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said the Chart House would either have to show that it has a state chapter 91 license to place the docks in those waters or it would have to move the docks.

"If they don't have a chapter 91 license, then they have an illegal structure," DeRensis said.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said selectmen would send a certified letter to the Chart House ordering them to produce a valid permit or move the docks.

"We'll send a certified letter to their corporate lawyer and let them decide what to do," Sullivan said.

Train mitigation committee limits communication

New board members sought

By David Tibbetts
STAFF MARINER

Members of the Cohasset Greenbush Mitigation Committee have decided to let only one of their members answer questions from the press: selectman Diane Sullivan.

Former mitigation committee Chairman Dean Rizzo was criticized by selectmen for continuing to lobby for a downtown train station while he served on the committee. In an article that appeared in the May 22 Mariner, Rizzo and several downtown business people felt a downtown station should be reconsidered. (Plans are underway to restore the old Greenbush railroad line through Cohasset to allow for better commuter access on the South Shore.)

Selectmen called Rizzo in and informed him that as far as they were concerned, the downtown station was a dead issue. Rizzo was told to stop lobbying publicly for a downtown station or step down from the committee.

Rizzo resigned from the committee last month.

When asked if the incident with Rizzo had anything to do with the decision to have only one member speak to the press, Sullivan answered, "No, I don't think so."

Mitigation committee member Michael Dick informed selectmen at their July 21 meeting that he agreed with Sullivan and mitigation members Martin Corry and Fire Chief Roger Lincoln that only one member should speak for the committee to reporters.

"We agreed that rather than have individuals talk to the press and give personal opinions, we would let one member speak for the committee," Dick said.

Sullivan said committee members wanted her to serve as press liaison because she was the newest member of the group.

Rizzo, a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and employee for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, served as business representative to the committee.

The mitigation committee is looking for new members to help them with issues related to Greenbush. The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce informed selectmen it does not wish to send another member to serve on the mitigation committee.

> "We agreed that rather than have individuals talk to the press and give personal opinions, we would let one member speak for the committee.'
> — MICHAEL DICK, MITIGATION COMMITTEE MEMBER.

Sullivan said she would like to see someone with civil engineering experience on the committee.

"It's important to get people who know the issues," Dick said. "All points of view have been represented even if those who represent certain points of view feel they haven't been adequately represented."

After the meeting, Dick would not answer any questions related to the mitigation committee. He directed all questions to Sullivan.

In other mitigation committee-related business, Dick submitted a working request for proposals (RFP) document to selectmen for a consultant to the committee.

Sullivan said the mitigation committee is looking for a professional consultant to look at all Greenbush issues and advise the town. Sullivan said the consultant would work directly with the mitigation committee, and the mitigation committee would update selectmen.

Town meeting would have to allocate funds to pay for the consultant.

Health board

forts to work together."

She also referred to the letter as "backstabbing."

The health board was unable to submit its proposed $13.5 million wastewater management plan to town meeting because of a conflict with state regulations. The plan would have placed all septic systems under the town's jurisdiction. Homeowners would have paid a user fee similar to a sewer bill.

Town meeting did approve the sewer commission's plan to provide $3 million in state loans to replace septic systems in areas of town near water supplies, specifically the Lily Pond and Nichols Road area.

The health board plans to pursue a town-wide plan again sometime in the future when funding can be acquired.

In the letter, the health board complains that the sewer department has not included it in discussions about the wastewater facility plan approved at town meeting.

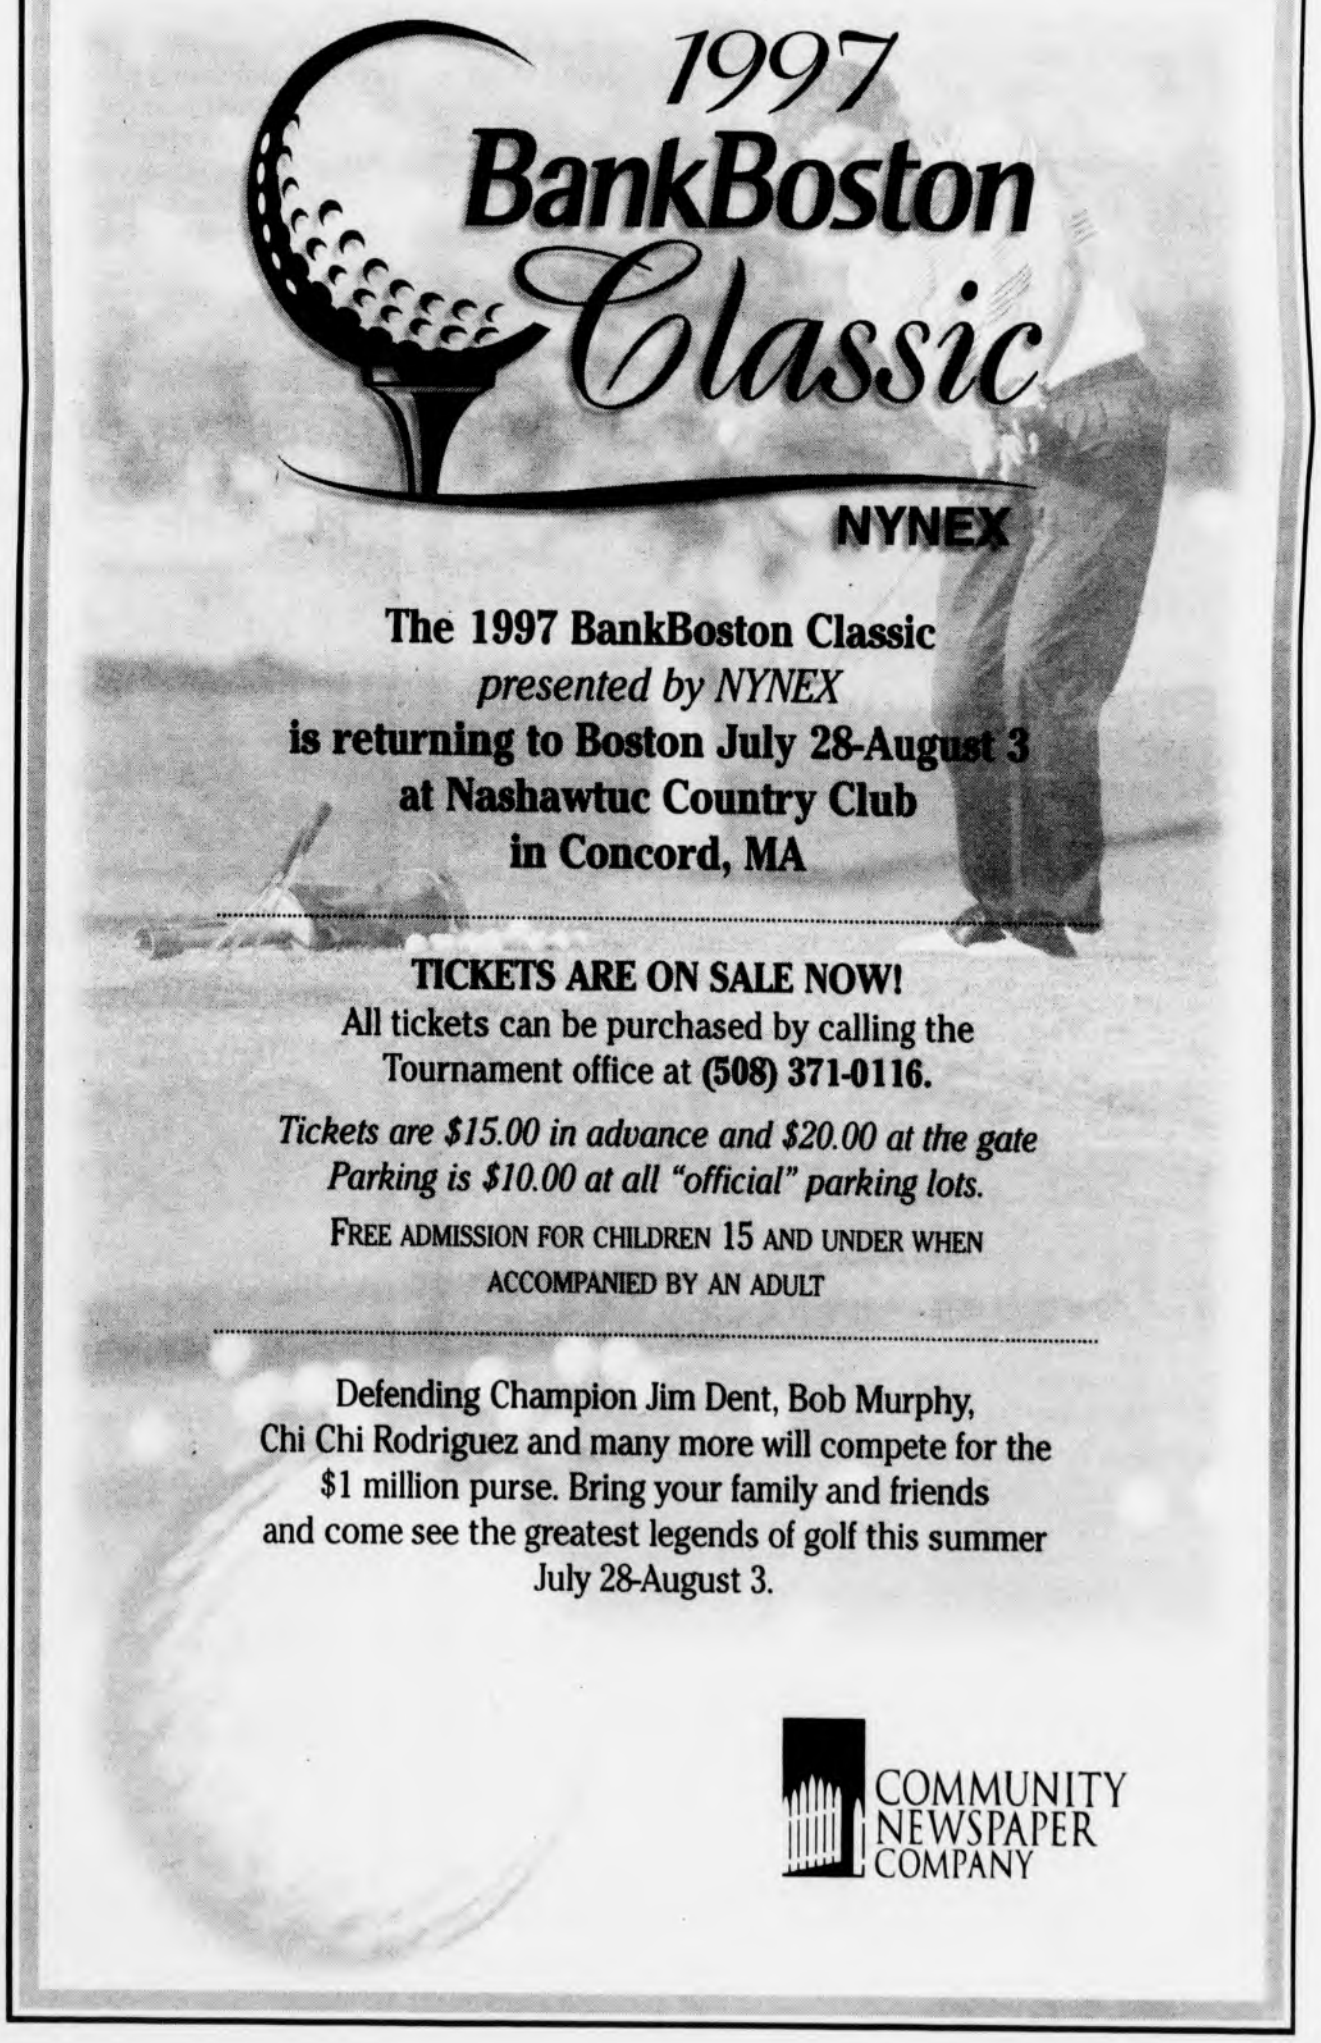
"While the (environmental impact) report states that long discussions between the sewer commission and the board of health took place, it is the board's position that these discussions were rather minimal and generally took place at the board's request," the letter states. "The board feels that it possesses valuable information and has well documented opinions about areas which could benefit from connections to the municipal sewer. The board is concerned that possible future modifications to the facility plan will not include its' input."

The letter goes on to state that references to health board regulations in the facility plan are inaccurate or non-existent.

The health board also criticized the areas to be sewered as "somewhat convoluted." The letter states that there is no evidence showing that Border Street and Parker Street areas should be sewered because of their possible affect on nearby shellfish beds.

"On the other hand, the Whale Meadow area, which is closed to shellfishing because of high bacteria counts is not being sewered because of David Gray's report in which he concludes that the bacteria counts may be of animal origin," the letter states. "This conclusion is based on inference, not hard data."

The letter goes on to say that septic failure along Route 3A is not adequately addressed in the EIR. It concludes by saying that the health board should be included in all wastewater planning, including sewer plans.



The letter is signed by Dr. Joseph Godzik on behalf of the board of health.

Michael Sullivan expressed great disappointment at the health board's actions.

"We had them in and they agreed to get along and do the same approach, then they send off a letter to a state official after they verbally agreed to discuss such matters with us first," he said.

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said she wanted the health board to come in and sign a written agreement promising to work as part of a team with other town agencies.

Selectmen will have the health board and sewer commissioners in at their next meeting.

Fitness Center at high school takes first step forward

By Kerry Herlihy
CORRESPONDENT

The new flooring for the high school's fitness center has been ordered and will be installed in August. The $4,000 rubber padding is 3/4 inches thick and will protect the floor and the equipment. This is a big step in the development of the new fitness center but much more is still needed in terms of equipment which leaves the future of the fitness center in the hands of those willing to help with the funding.

The estimated cost to develop the new facility at the high school is $100,000. Eric Kupperstein, who plans to move to Cohasset, donated $2,000 worth of quality equipment to the center. The PSO and the Police Patrolman Union each donated $1,000 towards the center. However, the new center is still in desperate need of funding.

The fitness center as it stands is now located in the previous senior lounge. Due to education reform, study halls have been cut, therefore the senior lounge will have no use. The space allows room to establish the intended model of the center; aerobic floor, cardiovascular station and weight training area. Ideally the space will comfortably hold 25-50 people exercising simultaneously.

Health education coordinator, Mike Gill, sees the focus of physical education moving away from team sports.

"Our vision is to gear physical education towards personal wellness and fitness as opposed to its traditional format of teamed sports. Of course team sports should play a part in physical education but they should be taught as a result of personalized training," Gill said.

> 'Teamed sports are not for everybody. Instead of excluding those who do not thrive in the team setting, we should be offering an alternative where everyone can succeed.
> — MIKE GILL, SCHOOL HEALTH EDUCATION COORDINATOR.

"Teamed sports are not for everybody. Instead of excluding those who do not thrive in the team setting, we should be offering an alternative where everyone can succeed," he said.

Financial donor, Eric Kupperstein, is a world-class power lifter. His interest in drug-free lifting, youth fitness and sports motivated him to make a donation to the proposed project.

"I started to work out when I was in eighth-grade for football. However, it did a lot more for me than just prepare me physically, it gave me a sense of discipline and self-esteem," Kupperstein said.

He believes that once students start to pay attention to their bodies, they learn to respect and take care of themselves. This awareness will hopefully prevent them from doing anything to counteract their success.

The long-term goal of the fitness center is to make it available to the Cohasset community. The center could be open to students during the day. After school it could open up for athletic teams, faculty and town employees. Between 5 and 9 p.m., the center could be open for use by the public.

Keeping the center open Saturdays and during the summer would not only keep people on track with their fitness, but give people, particularly students, an alternative activity, proponents say. A membership plan would then be created in order to keep the facility open after hours.

With the adoption of the 90-minute block schedule which takes effect this September, the physical education department will be able to devote a large portion of class time on fitness.

"The timing to develop a quality fitness center couldn't be better. Physical education is undergoing tremendous change throughout the country. We are in the process of restructuring our curriculum to incorporate fitness as a major part of physical education," said Clark Chatterton, physical education teacher and athletic director at the high school.

The center currently has a universal machine, free weights, leg press, squat rack, basic stationary bikes, a nautic track, and two rowing machines that are being lent to the center for one year by Concept II Rowing for research purposes. "We don't want to fill the room with outdated equipment. We are looking for commercial models with which we can obtain service contracts. But without funding, we will be working with what we have," Gill said.

Due to the lack of cardiovascular equipment at present in the fitness center, the curriculum changes in physical education will be gradual. At this point, a 90-minute period focusing on fitness will be spent on some free weight work and maybe an aerobic class.

Gill talks about the importance personalized training has on individuals and why we need to provide our students with a quality fitness environment.

"Enhanced learning, improved concentration, greater self-control and self-confidence, as well as the promotion of healthy, positive, and lifelong attitudes toward physical activity, are well-documented benefits of quality physical education in schools. Exercise should be a way of life [illegible] with a new and improved fitness center all of this becomes possible," he said.

"Organizations or private citizens with an interest in the project will hopefully support the goal of preparing our students to be physically and emotionally fit for life," Gill said.

If interested in assisting with the fund-raising, call Mike Gill at 383-6107. Donations my be sent to the Cohasset Schools Fitness Center, c/o Gill, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, 02025.

Arts lottery council needs members

Selectmen said this week that the arts lottery council which distributes state moneys for the arts needs six new members. Interested citizens should call the selectmen's office at 383-9900 or stop by the office, which is on the second floor of town hall.

Selectmen seek to remove buildings

Selectmen would like to remove at least two of the town's dilapidated buildings by September. Selectman Nancy Roth said she would like to town to act quickly to remove the metal shed at the Hagerty site, the old highway barn in the town parking lot and the West Corner fire station in North Cohasset. Selectman Merle Brown said the Hagerty shed may have to wait until the beginning of the year so the town can advertise for demolition companies to remove the building. Town meeting would also have to approve the demolitions.

Town common flagpole update

An anonymous donor has offered to pay for a new flagpole on Cohasset Common. Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said three companies have submitted bids to replace the pole. The donor has offered to pay the low bidder the full cost of purchasing and installing a new pole. Sullivan said the town would have to go with an aluminum pole rather than a wooden or fiberglass one. Wooden poles of that size are difficult to find and bow in the wind over years of use. Fiberglass poles deteriorate in direct sunlight. Sullivan said aluminum poles can be painted any color, an outfitted with rubber coatings to prevent banging noises. The cement base will have to be repaired because it is cracked and fractured.

SARAH KRAMERS

Name: Sarah Kramers

Occupation: Head instructor at the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Goal: For the sailing club to be a place where kids come to have fun while learning to sail.

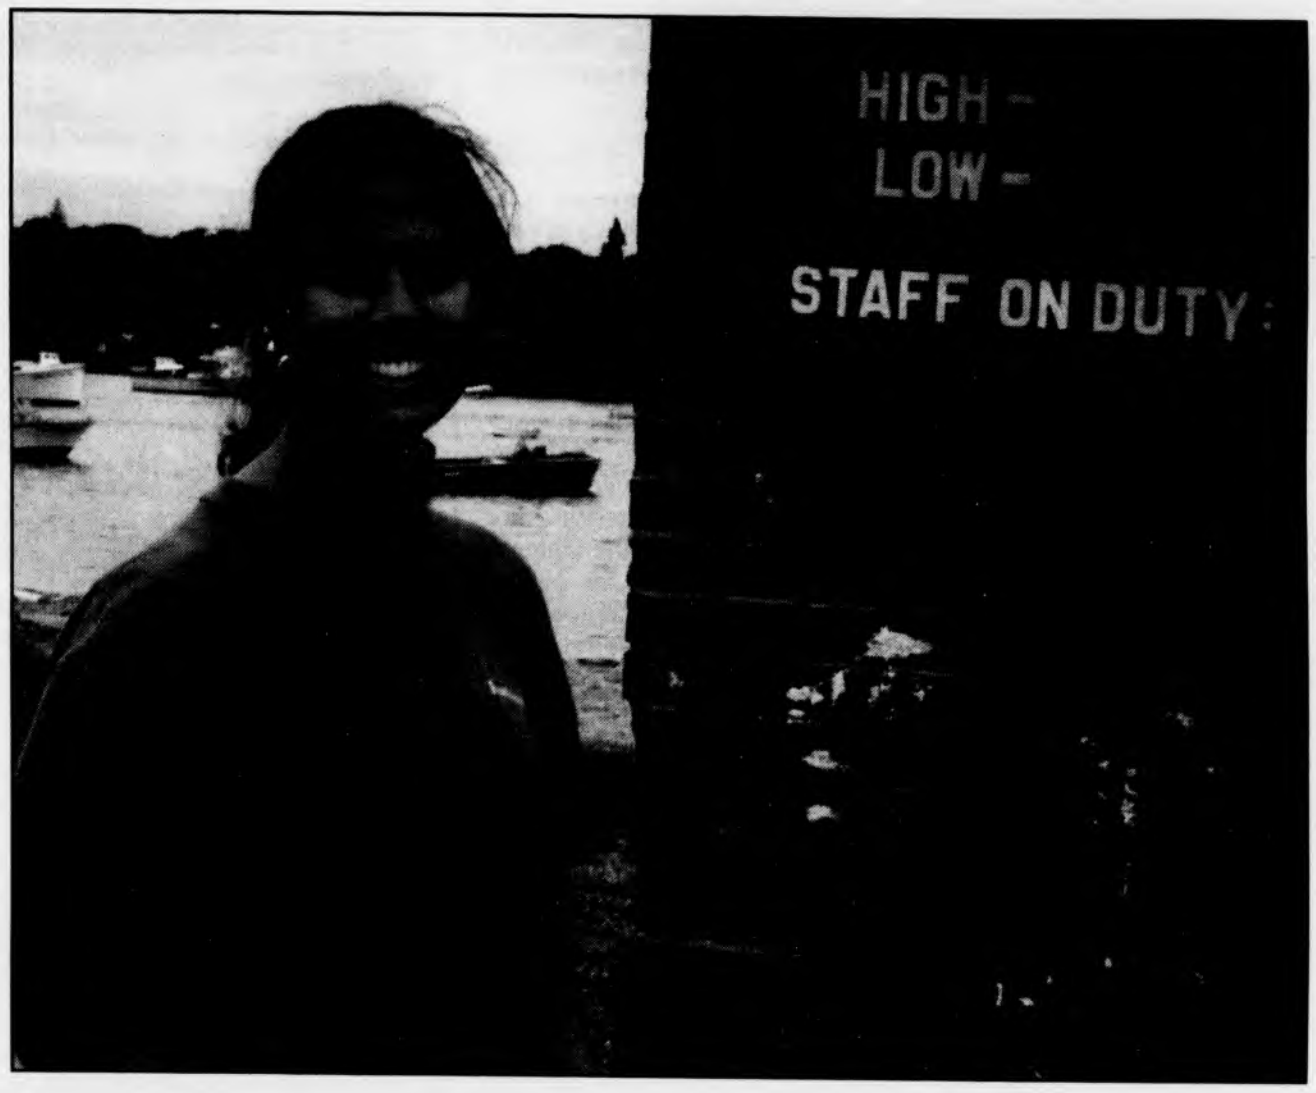
Best day of your life: A day skiing in Toas, New Mexico where the weather and conditions were perfect.

Best vacation: A sailing trip to Maine with my family.

Biggest worry: That kids won't learn how to sail.

Favorite book: Anything by Dr. Seuss.

Favorite movie: National Lampoon's "Christmas Vacation."



Favorite TV show: "Seinfeld."

Favorite junk food: Pringles.

Pet peeve: Life jackets that aren't buckled.

Person you'd most like to meet: Michelangelo.

Most embarrassing moment: I do stupid stuff all the time, so it just doesn't bother me.

STEERING IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

▶Before owners of older cars submit them for wheel alignments to correct a pull to one side on flat roads or uneven tire wear, they should have their cars' steering components examined. Cars that have been driven for 75,000 miles or more are likely to have endured significant wear to such steering components as ball joints, tie rod ends, and control arm bushings. Before a wheel alignment is undertaken, it makes sense to verify that no excess wear is present in any steering parts and that no parts are bent or otherwise damaged. If an alignment is performed on an automobile having one or more of these problems, the car may steer well for a time, but will then likely start to pull to one side shortly thereafter or develop other steering difficulties.

▶Wheel alignments are essential in the long-term care of your tires, as well as making your steering easier. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO (383-9090), we don't use high pressure sales tactics — we don't have to, because our high customer satisfaction index brings folks back to us again and again. If you think your car is underperforming, you're probably right. Come to us for a thorough checkup and diagnosis to improve your vehicle's driveability. Stop in at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte 3A (open Thurs. eves).

HINT
If a car sags to one side, it usually indicates a weak or broken spring.

ALLISON KORNET COACHES CREW

Allison Kornet is back in town for the summer, she is coaching crew at Community Rowing on the Charles. One of her oarsmen is Cohasset's Patrick Gaughen, whose Junior Four boat placed first at the Independence Day Regatta in Philadelphia. Allison earned her Masters in English (Teaching of Writing) from Georgetown last year and has been free-lance writing and coaching on the Potomac. She has been a regular contributor to "New Women" magazine since her stint there two summers ago, and her most recent article appeared in the May/June issue of "Psychology Today." Later in August she heads out to Los Angeles to teach at Harvard-Westlake, an independent school in North Hollywood.

Abi Kornet, now 6' 1/2" tall, rowed varsity crew this spring at Northfield Mt. Hermon. She also had a lead role in the spring comedy, "The Actor's Nightmare."

BOY SCOUT JAMBOREE

Three area boys are very excited for the end of this month to get here, we'll tell you why — they will be attending the 14th Annual Boy Scout National Jamboree in Fort A.P.. Hill, Va. Will McArthur and Alex Schmidt (both of Troop 28, Cohasset) and David Krueger (Troop 78, Norwell), along with Wayne Schmidt, Assistant Scout Master who is on the staff, will be part of the 35,000 scouts who will form a tent city. The theme for this Jamboree will be "Character Counts, Be Prepared for the 21st Century." The gents will leave July 26, make stops in Gettysburg, Washington, D.C., Quantico FBI Center, then continue on to Virginia, to arrive July 28, and return Aug. 6. They will have tons of things to do, there is shooting, archery, cross-country biking, propelling, fishing, aquatics, merit badge center and more. And, while there, they are going to try to break the Guiness Book of Records for the largest fire bucket brigade! Hopefully, we will hear all about it upon their return!

HAT'S OFF TO BRETT MACQUARRIE

Let's all give Brett MacQuarrie a big round of applause this week, he has earned it! Brett is a 1997 graduate of Northfield Mount Hermon School — he is a student leader, he has received the 1997 Thompson Blanket Award for outstanding sportsmanship and leadership in athletics. He served as co-captain of the varsity soccer team, participating in the 1996 New England Prep School Tournament. A member of the 1997 Northern New England league champion varsity lacrosse team, he earned All-League lacrosse honors. He was co-captain of the Southeast Team in the 1995 Bay State Games.

Brett was a member of NMH's "As Schools Match Wits" TV quiz show team, he studied advanced placement economics and has volunteered through the Appalachia Service Project. He also earned academic honors for all three terms this year. Brett will attend Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., in the fall. His mother and stepfather are Jane and Chris Kyricos of Cohasset. His father is Stephen MacQuarrie of Wellesley.

HONORS ARE NOTED

Congratulations go to Caroline Klier, a Junior at Stonehill College, who was recently named to the dean's list for the spring 1997 semester.

Thayer Academy announced its honor roll for the third term, and we have some students to give accolades to: Ashley Wilfand, Class of '98, and the daughter of Robert and Wendy Wilfand, made the honor roll. Also, Jeffrey Schneider, class of 2001, received an effort award, as did Leigh-Anne Walsh, class of 2002.

ASP VOLUNTEERS RETURN

The town is still a-buzz with various stories from the 78 volunteers who went to Campbell County, Tenn., with the Appalachia Service Project. Even adults who we have talked to, said that their lives will never be quite the same again, that the impressions made on them left indelible marks! All ages state how wonderful an experience and feeling comes from doing such good for others — and lets them all know how lucky we are to be here — again, thanks go to the project director, The Rev. Gary Ritts. It surely makes you realize how fortunate we are to have Gary and his family in our town and a part of our lives! Oh, be sure to ask any of the volunteers about their adventures!

BAY STATE GAMES

By the time you read this, you may also know the results — but, let's be proud of the Cohasset athletes who participated in the Bay State Games, which started last Thursday — they are: Matt Belson (lacrosse), Lucius Caldwell (wrestling), Brandon DeVoe (lacrosse), Jimmy Figueirdo (wrestling), John-Paul Laugelle (wrestling), David Leahy (lacrosse), Brittany Novak (synchronized swimming) and Craig Sheerin (wrestling).

Carillon concert presented by Liesbeth Janssens

The fifth recital in the current Sunday evening summer series will be presented by Liesbeth Janssens Sunday, July 27, at 6 p.m. on the 57-bell Taylor carillon at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset. Ms. Janssens makes her home in Temse, Belgium, and is a graduate of the Jef Denijn Royal Carillon School in Mechelen. She is secretary of the Flemish Carillon Guild, the organization which will host the meeting of the World Carillon Federation in Mechelen in the summer of 1998. She has participated in two Dutch carillon playing competitions, and has given recitals in Belgium, The Netherlands, Austria, Germany, New Zealand and at the Bok Tower in Florida.

The recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. It will take place rain or shine; in case of rain, listen from your parked cars. Printed programs, schedules of coming recitals and the new brochure describing the Cohasset Carillon, will be distributed on the Cohasset Common and at the entrance to Stagecoach Way, the pedestrian walk beside Hunneman Realty on Main Street. A program stand containing all materials may be found on Highland Avenue at the entrance to the church courtyard. Listeners are invited to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers to all listening locations. Following the recital, a tower tour will be offered to all interested persons.

For further information, telephone St. Stephen's Church at (617) 383-1083 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., or phone the carillonneur of St. Stephen's, Sally Slade Warner, at (508) 475-2599; or the assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy, at 383-9599

Historical and architectural walking tour

The historical and architectural walking tour series will continue Sunday, July 27, at 3 p.m. This walking tour will be of the Lincoln National Register Historic District. The tour group will meet in front of Old Ship Church at 90 Main St. and will view historical and architectural highlights of Hingham Square. Included on the tour will be Old Ship Church, Memorial Bell Tower, St. Paul's Church, Old Ordinary, New North Church, The Community Center, Derby Hall and Loring Hall. The tour group will also spend a lot of time in the shady confines of the Hingham cemetery to stay as cool as possible if it should be a hot day.

The tours are free and open to all interested. For more information call Rick Desmarais, 749-2463.

OBITUARIES

Dorothy V. Graham

Dorothy V. Graham, 75, of Cohasset, a retired secretary for the Town of Cohasset Assessors Office, died Wednesday, July 9, at Jordan Hospital in Plymouth after a brief illness.

Miss Graham was born in Lynn, daughter of the late Winthrop L. Graham and the late Ola (Litch) Graham, and moved to Cohasset when she was 12. She lived in Cohasset for 63 years.

She worked for the Town of Cohasset for 42 years.

Miss Graham leaves three nephews, Douglas Graham and Robert Graham, both of Plymouth, and David Graham of Oregon; and a niece, Eleanor Graham of Alaska. She was the sister of the late Winthrop "Bud" Graham.

A funeral service was held July 12 at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Interment was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations may be made in Miss Graham's memory to the Joslin Diabetes Center, 1 Joslin Place, Boston 02215.

John H. Dean

John H. Dean, 86, former chairman of the Cohasset school committee, died July 18 at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Jamaica Plain.

Mr. Dean graduated from Harvard College in 1934. He was captain of the Harvard football team and was elected to the Harvard Hall of Fame for his performance in track and field during his senior year.

After attending Harvard Law School for two years, he went to the New York office of Halsey-Stuart, a Chicago-based bond broker.

During World War II, Mr. Dean served with the Navy in both the Atlantic and Pacific. After the war, he remained in the Navy's selected reserves until retiring in 1963.

Mr. Dean served as president of the Municipal Bond Club of Boston and became a member of the luncheon group, Longtable Syndicate. He was vice president and trustee of the former Cohasset Savings Bank and a director of the Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance and the Danbury Insurance Company.

He served on the Cohasset School Committee for five years, two as chairman. He was a member of the Cohasset Golf Club, Cohasset Yacht Club and a life member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He leaves his wife of 55 years, Elizabeth (Webster) Dean; two sons, Charles W. Dean and John S. Dean, both of Cohasset; a daughter, Emile E. McBride of Chevy Chase, Md.; and several grandchildren.

A memorial service was held July 22 at St. Stephen's Church.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to charity.

Tax relief program may be reconsidered

The tax relief through work program may be revived for the next annual town meeting. Selectmen would like to look at the program again to provide tax relief to needy and/or elderly residents. Tax relief programs provide tax abatements in exchange for municipal work. Selectman Ronnie McMorris said the program would have to be revived because of the added tax burden from Proposition 2-1/2 overrides to pay for the sewer project and the new elementary school. Selectmen plan to have the new town manager explore the possibility of creating a program.

Old Ironsides & us

Ay, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky.

That ensign. no longer tattered, waved on high again this week as the USS Constitution, "Old Ironsides," unfurled her sails and sailed under her own power for the first time in 116 years.

And many an eye (an estimated 100,000 pairs of them), not a few of them brimming with tears, danced to see the banner wave on the voyage from her berth in Charlestown to Marblehead and back.

"This has been perhaps the greatest experience of my life; I'm just grateful I could be part of it all," said Seaman Craig Cole, age 20.

"Patriotism seems to be going to the dogs; I hope the Constitution can help bring it back," said Hosiah Towery, age 87.

"The thing I like about this ship is that there is nothing negative about her. She has had tough times but always came through," said Deck Captain Joe Wilson, a black man from Mississippi.

Indeed, it was a microcosm of America, young and old, black and white, immigrant and native son, who banded together to sail Old Ironsides from Boston to Marblehead — and to save the old girl from a watery grave.

It was the Boston Brahmin Yankee, Oliver Wendell Holmes, who penned the words quoted above in 1830 and helped rally a rescue of the then-33-year-old veteran of the nation's wars from rotting at her dock.

It was Cong. John Fitzgerald, the son of an immigrant Irishman, who stepped in to save the craft on her 100th birthday when she was in danger of sinking from neglect at a dock in Portsmouth, N. H.

It was an Armenian immigrant, Moses Gulesian, who led the public protest in 1905 when the secretary of the navy proposed that the 108-year-old Constitution be used for target practice.

And it was the pennies, thousands of them, collected by the nation's school children, that enabled the restoration of the 128-year-old ship in 1925.

And its the pennies of school children and one million tourists a year that have helped to make the $12 million restoration a reality in 1997 in time for the 200th anniversary of Constitution's launching.

Can you draw any conclusion from all that?

Joe Wilson can.

"I think it shows that, when we all pull together, look what we can do," he said. "It's what America is all about."

Response to Journal smoking story

To the Editor:

In response to the recent articles appearing in the Mariner newspapers. Dr. Maher makes reference to smokers having a right to do so. Let's not forget that nonsmokers have an equal right not to be subjected to secondhand smoke, which has been classified as a Class A. Carcinogen, in the same group as asbestos. We agree with and applaud Dr. Maher's desire to keep cigarettes out of the hands of teenagers in Marshfield and would also stress that our goal is not to "stop" adults from smoking if they wish to, but rather to be there to help them when they desire to stop. A free smoking cessation and quitter's support group are continuously offered at our offices in Hanover for that reason. We would also like to assure the public that we do not use "Gestapo-style" methods, but treat all smokers with respect and dignity and would be happy to supply Dr. Maher with a list of former clients, both smokers and nonsmokers, who would attest to our style.

We would suggest that Ms. Woodhull and Ms. Meyer speak to Jim Wells, owner of Abbadessa's in Hingham and Richard Stilphen, owner of Piasano's in Kingston and DiNero's in Cohasset. These restaurants are completely smokefree, have been for a number of years, and have not suffered from a lack of patrons. In fact it is not unusual for customers to wait for a considerable amount of time to dine in Paisano's on any given evening. Mr. Wells has told us that not only has his clientele increased, but his cleaning costs have decreased. He feel strongly that the smoking ban is not a "rights" issue, but a health issue — the health of his loyal customers and that of his employees.

The Massachusetts Restaurant Association attempted with their bill mentioned in the article to wrest the power of determining health regulations from the very board elected or appointed to do so in each town — the board of health. This bill would also have required all restaurants to have at least 40 percent smoking areas, regardless of the wishes of the boards of health. It is important to remember that when there is secondhand smoke in the air, your risk of getting lung cancer can increase by 34 percent. In a study conducted by the University of California in 1993, it was found that waitresses have a 3 1/2 to 4 times greater risk of developing lung cancer and 2 1/2 times the expected heart disease mortality rate.

We are excited about the idea of a new tobacco collaborative forming in our neighboring communities and would look forward to working with them in our quest to "make smoking history on the South Shore."

Dawn Sibor, Hingham
Susan Cronin, Norwell

(Ed's Note: Dr. Gerry Maher is chairman of the board of health in Marshfield. The story appears on page 3 of this week's Cohasset Mariner).

Schools to make auditorium wheelchair accessible

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

The school auditorium may not be wheelchair accessible now, but it will be by September.

A state official from the Office on Disability, Jim Dougan, has written a letter to the school department advising it that the high school is inaccessible to wheelchairs. Dougan recommended that school officials move all public meetings held in the high school somewhere else until the situation is corrected.

In response to Dougan's letter, the school committee held its July 17 meeting in room 10 next to Superintendent Steven Hart's office because it is accessible to wheelchairs. The restroom near the superintendent's office can accommodate handicapped needs, Hart said.

"We have done what Jim (Dougan) has requested, which is why we are meeting in this room," Hart said at the meeting.

Dougan noticed the problems with wheelchair accessibility when he attended a school committee meeting June 19. The meeting Dougan attended was held in the high school's audio-visual lab so it could be aired on live cable.

Dougan said all meetings held in the high school should be moved to a location that provides accessible parking, a clear and accessible path of travel, an accessible entrance and an accessible bathroom.

Hart said the school department will renovate parts of the high school auditorium to make it accessible to wheelchairs by the time school starts and well before October's town meeting.

Hart said the gymnasium is already accessible to wheelchairs, but something will have to be done with the bathrooms. Annual town meetings have traditionally been held in the gymnasium.

Hart said a unisex bathroom will be installed on the first floor of the high school by September.

A wider door to the left of the main door and to the right of the auditorium will be in place by September as well, Hart said. Ramps and railings will also be installed to improve access.

Workers will also extend a small, asphalt ramp which leads to the ground level to improve wheelchair access.

Other town officials said the town has tried to accommodate people with disabilities.

Building commissioner Robert Egan said the high school has made several changes to accommodate a girl with cerebral palsy who will attend the school next year.

Egan added that the girl also has a professional aide who can help her navigate difficult areas.

Hart said the school department will do whatever is necessary to make the school "program accessible" for the girl and other handicapped individuals.

The state has exemptions that allow schools to move programs to accessible areas for handicapped students in certain cases.

School committee Chairman Maureen Jerz said the schools have always tried to make buildings program accessible.

"We will do whatever we have to make areas accessible," Jerz said. "We have a lift in the junior high wing to accommodate a student in a wheelchair. In this case, questions were raised that if the building was not accessible, should our meetings be held there?"

Jerz said the school department is also planning to move some biology and chemistry classes from the inaccessible second floor to the first floor so the girl in the wheelchair can take sciences.

Bids solicited for water main relining project

The Water Commissioners have advertised for bids to complete the Water Distribution System Improvement, Phase IIIA. Bids must be received by noon July 24 at the offices of the Town Manager in Town Hall and will be opened immediately after receipt at noon at Town Hall.

"This project, when completed, will increase water flows and water pressure for our water customers throughout the Town of Cohasset," said Water Commission Chairman Robert Kasameyer. "Fire flows and fire protection will also be improved. We hope to get this project underway and complete it this summer."

The project includes the cleaning and lining of water mains on Pleasant Street, Depot Court, a large section of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue, and replacement of water valves at Summer Street and at the intersection of Ripley Road and Depot Court. Fire hydrants will also be replaced along the length of the pipes being cleaned and relined.

Cleaning and relining pipes is necessary to remove accumulated sedimentation which reduce the inside volume of the pipe and reduce the flow of water by increasing head loss due to friction.

This project, estimated to cost about $500,000, was authorized by the Cohasset Special Town Meeting April 5, 1996, and in the 1995 Town Meeting, and is based on the 10-year plan of water system improvements outlined in the Water System Report prepared for the Water Commissioners by Tutela Engineering Associates.

Domestic violence is no private matter

To the Editor:

One way society undergoes change is through lessons learned from public figures. When Red Sox player Wil Cordero returns to court this week, there will be another opportunity for the public to learn about the issue of domestic violence.

In 1992, it was widely reported that 63 percent of males, ages 11-20 who are serving time for homicide, killed their mother's batterer. Last month, as Wil Cordero's history of domestic violence was being reported in newspapers around the country, a young Rockland man was sentenced to prison for killing his father after years of witnessing domestic violence in his home.

The June arrest of Cordero involved a 15-year-old witness — his stepson. Fortunately for him, society is changing. Thus, the cycle may be broken.

The legal system is more willing to recognize domestic violence for what it is — assault and battery. Even more importantly, the court of public opinion is also challenging the belief that it is a private matter. As men suffer serious consequences for these acts of family violence through criminal charges, damaged reputations, and threats of job loss, there will be fewer children affected by family violence. None of us — friends, neighbors, employers — should continue to condone domestic violence through our inaction.

Upgrades to Hingham commuter boat fleet are slated

But riders still want old service back

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

The commuter boat war in Hingham took a new turn this week when Harbor Cruises said it would invest $2 million to upgrade its service.

However, concerned boat riders say they wonder why they have to be part of the learning curve for the new company which took over July 1.

Boat Riders Alliance for Safety and Service (BRASS), a grassroots commuter group, planned to meet with local legislators at the Hingham Shipyard Wednesday evening after the Journal went to press.

"At this meeting we're going to present our petition saying we're not happy and we'd like the subsidy to go to the Hingham Commuterboat," said Nancy Ristuccia, a founder of the group.

Last month, Boston Harbor Commuter Services lost the five-year MBTA contract to provide the subsidized commuter boat service to Harbor Cruises. BCHS has since joined forces with Mass. Bay Lines to provide competing service at peak times under the name Hingham Commuterboat.

James O'Leary, a partner in Harbor Cruises, said riders surveyed last week said upgrades in seating, ventilation and restrooms were needed. Harbor Cruises will make $500,000 in improvements to existing boats and will spend $1.5 million to add a new vessel.

The company has also retained the services of maritime expert Barry O. Fuller Sr. For 15 years, Fuller was the general manager and CEO of the Woods Hole, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket Steamship Authority.

Ristuccia says upgrades planned by Harbor Cruises come too late.

"Why should commuters suffer through their learning process when we had safe, reliable service on board?" she asked.

Meanwhile, on Monday a state Appeals Court judge upheld a Superior Court decision denying BHCS' request for a temporary injunction to nullify the T's contract with Harbor Cruises until a trial on the merits of the case could be heard.

BHCS owner Dana Goodell, who operated the subsidized service for 13 years, is suing the MBTA alleging it acted unfairly in awarding the contract to Harbor Cruises.

Goodell's attorney, Kevin Moloney, said he will now take the matter before the full appeals court, a panel of three judges. He explained this step takes more time and involves more in-depth review.

O'Leary said the judge's denial of the appeal sent a strong message.

"In our mind, this reaffirms we were within the guidelines established by the MBTA," he said.

O'Leary said Harbor Cruises is attracting about 50 percent of the boat commuters. Most are carrying tickets for both carriers and whichever is available they use, he said.

"We feel we are holding our own," he said.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said there is little likelihood BRASS will succeed in getting the T to award the subsidy to Goodell.

"That would open them up to all sorts of legal action," Hedlund said.

"The fault is not entirely with the new operation," he said. "The T is to blame for this unfolding. These guys found themselves winning the bid with no time to right their fleet.

"Harbor Cruises appears to be making corrections to that and I think they are sincere in their attempt to get the service where it could be as good as or better than before," he said.

Brian Pedro, MBTA spokesman, said the boat contract was won "fair and square."

"Harbor Cruises is adhering to the contract and making $2 million in improvements without being asked," he said. "In America, how could anyone take that away?"

Pedro pointed out that the new service hasn't even been on board a month.

But that's not important to Paula Leaverton of Scituate. Leaverton, who is pregnant, is on a shortened work schedule, so she takes Harbor Cruises home at 2:30 p.m. because there is no choice in carriers at off peak times. She arrived in Hingham, Monday 20 minutes late.

"I was late picking up my daughter at day care," she said.

Boat riders disembark from a commuter boat at the Hingham Shipyard. BRASS, a group of concerned commuters, planned to present a petition to state legislators urging the subsidy be awarded to the Hingham Commuterboat, Wednesday evening (after the Mariner went to press).

Painting the town Plein-Air

wet paint and all.

"This way," she said, "someone can end up owning a piece of artwork that they watched being created earlier in the day."

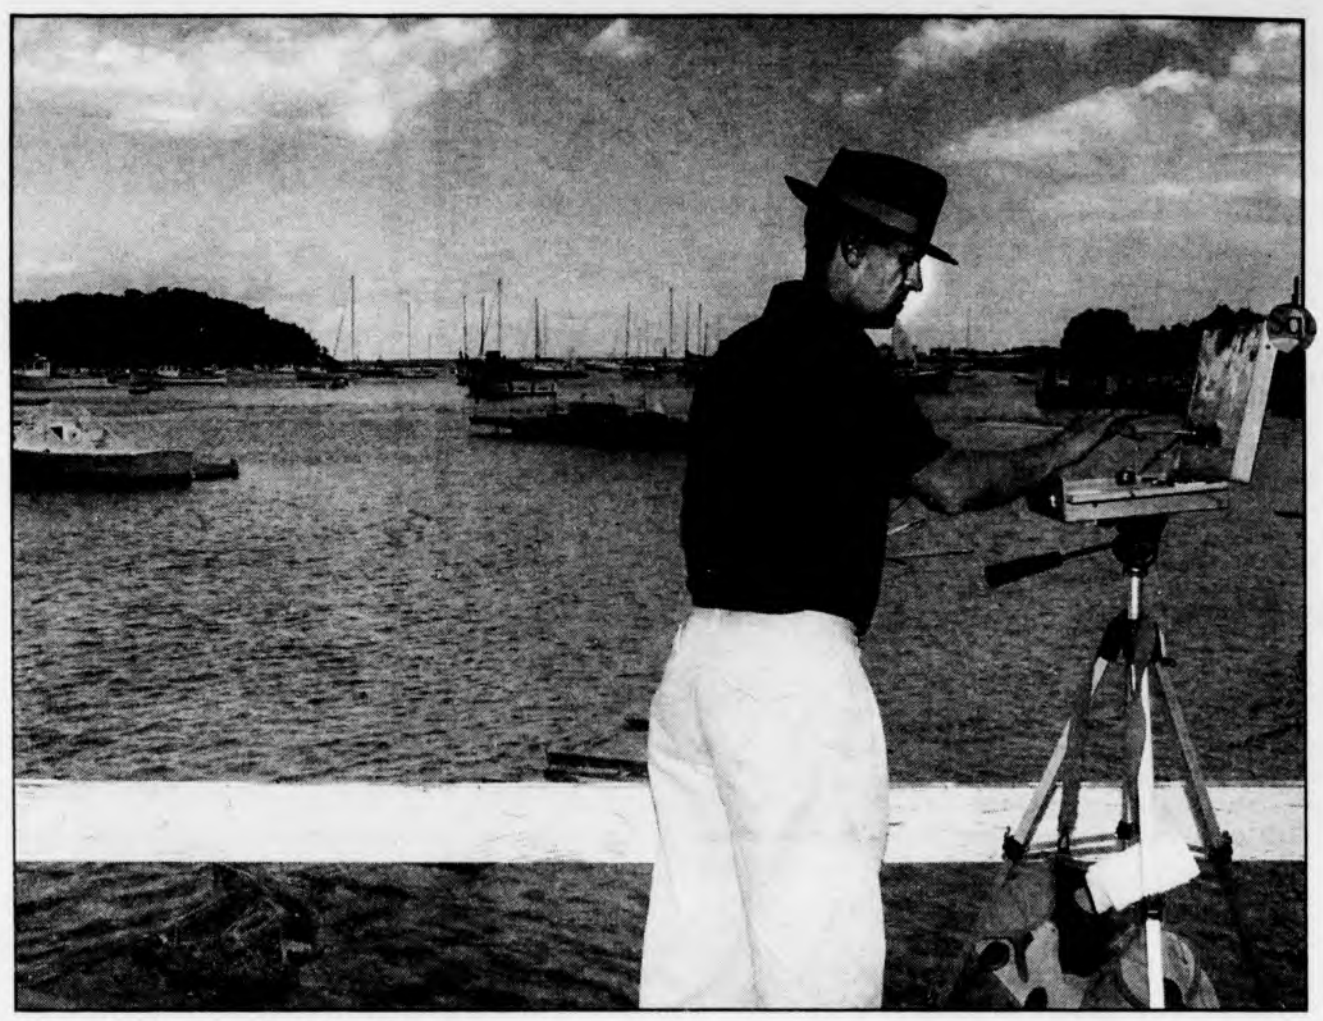
A portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Under a sky of scattered cotton ball clouds, a blustery breeze buffeted the town Saturday where the first Plein-air exhibition/demonstration took place. Even Claude Monet would have been impressed to witness the local artists, as well as other artists from around the country capturing the moment, painting the picturesque scenery that belongs to this part of New England alone.

Some stood behind their traditional French easels supporting pouchade (sketch) boxes that act as a canvas support as well as a carrier for their equipment. Others were behind modern camera tri-pods with bags or buckets by their sides filled with neatly organized tubes of paint and brushes. The idea was the same either way, in their own unique styles, in open air, to use their skills to put down on canvas what they see and feel before them.

John Kilroy, a local artist who quit his 10-year career as a commercial artist 12 years ago to paint strictly what he termed "fine art," painted the old Gaffey yachts building in the harbor where the Mill River Marine Railway is now housed. In the parking lot of Kimball's by the Sea he spoke passionately about his work as an artist.

"The idea of recounting and responding to what's going on as well as maximizing time and effort is exciting," he said.



He also expressed concern about the direction the field of art has turned.

"There are so many artists who have gone commercial, painting from a photograph or a photographic image projected onto a canvas and when that happens there is something lost in the translation. It's like computer-generated music, there's no life in it."

In France, the invention of the "Tube Paint," in the mid 1800s, allowed artists, for the first time, to leave their studios and paint outdoors, spawning the French Impressionistic period from which some of the greatest artists, including Monet, Manet and Renee, emerged. The genre on Saturday was of this nature — the paintings were by no means precise yet truly grasped the essence of what was being seen.

On the other side of the Gaffey's, Douglas Smith could be found, with brush in hand, stroking away behind his easel. From Old Lime, Conn., the artist who has been painting for the past 25 years said he sometimes would use his Plein-air pieces as field sketches and work up a larger version back in his studio. He agrees completely with Kilroy's interpretation of what is going on in the art world and said that "the experience of being there, on site, somehow gets translated onto the medium and there's no substitute."

That evening the normally quiet rooms of the gallery were filled with a festive atmosphere. Champagne, French wines and cheeses were available for those a little parched or experiencing pangs of hunger from the day's activities. For the most part, the work created that day, quickly framed, and hanging on a wall, consisted of oils on canvases painted at various locations around the harbor, "The Rip" under Gulf's Bridge, and the dilapidated Gaffey building. The artists who painted that day, spoke amongst themselves and with the numerous guests who were in attendance.

Douglas Smith paints the Harbor.

Staff photo/Bill Wadsworth

Kilroy's final product consisted of an unmistakable image of the Gaffe building. Contained within its thickly applied strokes of color one could sense, not only the feel of the day, but also the underlying beauty of the yacht house. Its title read "Still Worth Saving."

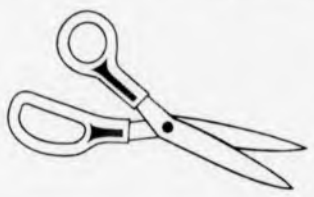
John MacGowan, Lois Griffel and T.A. Charron, three of the artists who painted with each other in a group that day, stood off to the side admiring their work from afar.

Charron, who is known more for his graphite drawings than his paintings, said, "Everyone sees things differently and because of this everyone will have a different interpretation of any given subject."

He also said that he sees himself belonging to a semi-underground movement where he and the others are "getting back to basics and producing art that has a sensation and experience that can not be matched by commercial art."

All three had a good laugh recounting the single time that each of their easels were blown over by the strong gusts and eddies during the four-hour period.

"Paintings are like a bagel with cream cheese on it," MacGowan had said. "When one falls on the floor you can only hope that it lands right side up."



At one point Griffel almost lost her painting off the bridge into "The Rip" where the three had set up.

At the gallery, at the event that was scheduled to end at 9 p.m., by 11:30 p.m. there were still guests enjoying themselves and the "fine" art around them. Three paintings had sold and the others will be donated to the food pantry if they do not sell within the next 30 days.

COHASSET MARINER

Cohasset team swims to another big win

On July 18, the Cohasset Swim Team continued its winning season with a resounding victory over the South Shore YMCA Sharks.

Excitement ran high as two pool records were broken. Kate O'Brien set a new 12-and-under girls I.M. record at 1:06.73. Allison Berg set a new girls 17-and-under 50-yard butterfly record at 0:31.53.

Come cheer the team tomorrow (Friday) at noon as they face Scituate Yacht Club at home.

Last week's results were as follows:

In the girls 8-and-under medley relay, the team of Caren Garber, Abigail Markert, Alyssa Campbell and Lindsay Durken came in first, the team of Vanessa Plant, Devin Smith, Samantha Lehr and Megan Sacks came in second and the team of Maura Regan, Mary Previte, Grace Steele and Anna Speed came in fourth.

In the boys 8-and-under medley relay, the team of Peter Ernst, Reed Dickenson, Bryan Rafferty and Nick Zappolo came in first, the team of Jon Coffey, Ben Flynn, Austin Lanzillotti and Fletcher Smalzel came in second and the team of Jon McCarthy, Cliff Musto, Nathan Porter and Cameron Cunningham came in third.

In the boys 10-and-under medley relay, the team of Noah Wilcox, Zach Markert, Parker Berg and Teddie Straughn came in first, the team of Colin Regan, Joey Durkin, Zach Etkind and Willie McCarthy came in second and the team of Dan McCarthy, Jon Grimm, Jake Previte and Kevin Roach came in fourth.

In the girls 10-and-under medley relay, the team of Jenna Larson, Casey Anderson, Becca Lehr and Rachel Garber came in first and the team of Miranda Lanzillotti, Emilie Shea, Callie Ernst and Lisa Musto came in second.

In the boys 12-and-under medley relay, the team of Parker Berg, David Crowley Buck, Bryan Bilton and Tommy Anderson came in first and the team of Nate Wilcox, Chris Flynn, Tommy Meyers and Mike Ernst came in third.

In the girls 12-and-under medley relay, the team of Alexis Bugley, Yazzi Afshar, Kate O'Brien and Courtney McDonald came in first, the team of Laura Kondrat, Taylor O'Brien, Elisa Jerome and Emily Simmons came in third and the team of Tess Foley, Arianna Dedes, Caroline Carr and Julie Shea came in fourth.

In the boys 17-and-under medley relay, the team of Jeff Schneider, John Crowley-Buck, Justin Golden and Derek Bugley came in first.

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

What cool weather means to hot fishing

The three H's, hazy, hot and humid, have gone on vacation, much to everyone's relief. The cool northwesterly that replaced it has monkey wrenched many fishing trips, however, and new locations have had to be explored as the brisk breeze whipped up the formerly placid surface. Dave Alexander ventured out Saturday, and Sunday was ruing the experience.

"I got beat to hell," he said. Sunday was going to be a relaxing day of flounder fishing in closer calmer waters, as he departed with his seaworms.

Bob Clemens was leading the Jackson clan into the fray. Barnacle Bill has been laid up with back trouble at the worst possible time, the opening of the commercial season. Bob had a fine striper for the scale. Measured off at 43 inches, it weighed an even 31 pounds. Tube and worm? I asked, as I ID'd the picture?

"No," Bob whispered conspiratorially, "mackerel chunk!"

"He laughed at my mock surprise.

"Chunks are good right now," he said, "I had one spool me to the point I could see the brass of the spool through the remaining line."

"Shall we weigh in that one?" I needled.

"Nope, it's still swimming around out there on the Grampuses.

Frozen mackerel have been in good supply and have been a good bait for shore bound bait chuckers. Tom Lemaire took advantage of the mirror-like conditions last week and rowed out to Sutton Rocks a few hundred yards outside Cohasset Harbor. Nestled right amongst the ledges, he tackled a tough-fighting 41-inch bass that inhaled his mackerel. Back inside the harbor, youngsters wielding freshwater-sized gear tested their skill, casting from the low tide beach off the Charthouse parking lot with great success on mostly schoolie bass.

Sunday, one shopper commented he had never seen so many people fishing along the shore. He had just come from the Scituate Harbor jetty, where anglers were cheek to jowl in the beautiful weather. Another commented the big Plymouth Harbor jetty was similarly adorned, unspoken testimony to the fun of catching striped bass, a fish that has little reservation about coming in close to feed.

Some boating anglers are now starting to use deeper running lures, umbrella rigs and 9er bars. Trolling lures are being incorporated inline to gain greater depth. Deep running hoochy-style squids, Jawbreakers and Rapalas are seeing more and more use. Giant parachutes jigs, some as big as a pound, are being bounced off the

FISH STORY, PAGE 21

Striped bass return in a big way

By David McKee
STAFF WRITER

They're baaaaack!

Just when you thought it was safe to go in the water this summer, huge, hungry striped bass have swarmed the area causing fishers of all ages to run and grab their rods and reels in hopes of catching a keeper.

"This is the best fishing in 30 years," said Scott Sinclair of J & B Tackle in Marshfield. "It's unreal and truly has to be seen to be believed. The striped bass have been out there for awhile in pretty good numbers but now there are 30-inch-plus fish all over the place. Just about anyone can go out for a couple hours and bring home a big fish."

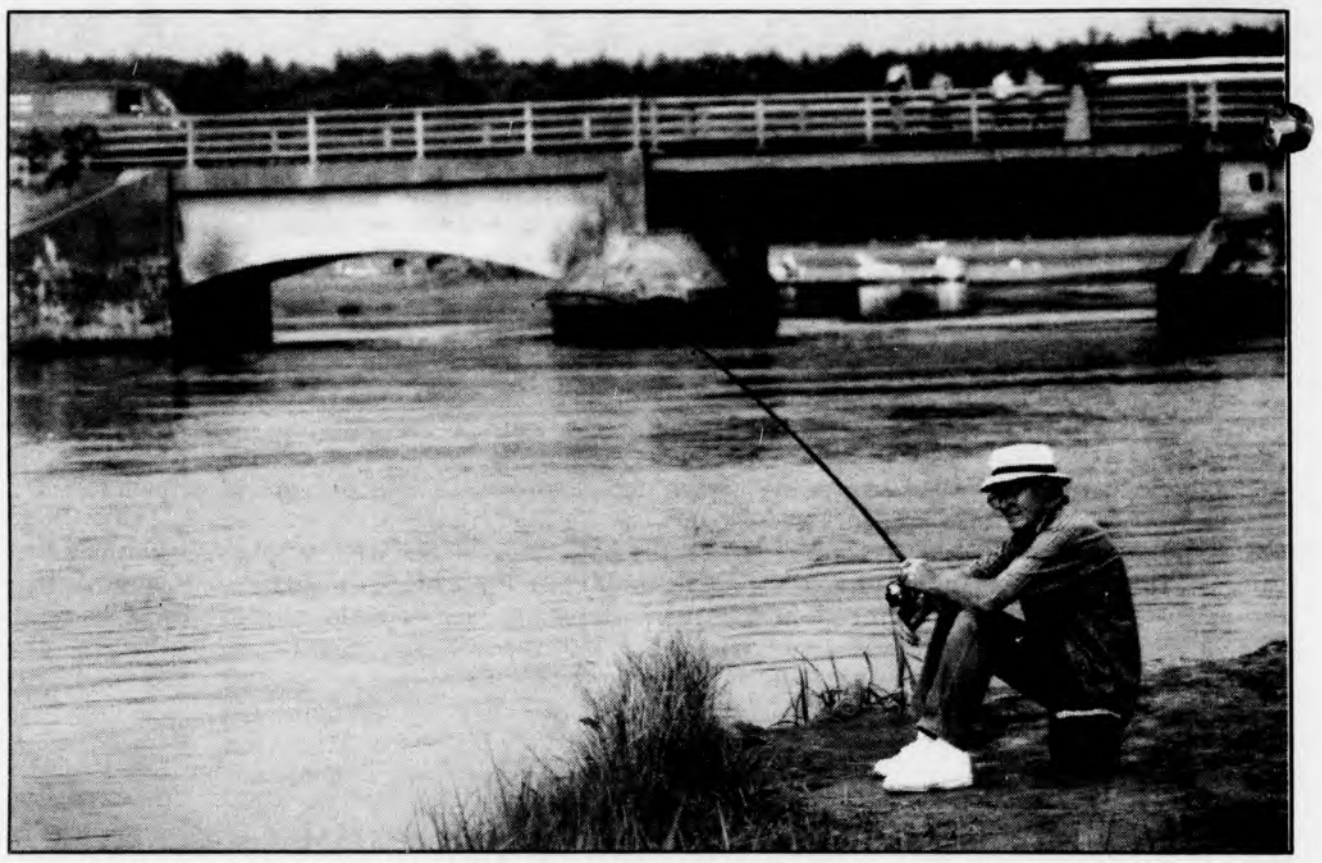
Over the last two years, Massachusetts recreational fishers have hauled in a record 3 million stripers per year with even more expected this year.

And while there are many skilled fishers using a variety of bait and tackle to nail these hard-fighting and easy-eating fish, the main reason for the striper abundance is conservation measures enacted in 1989 by states along the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to North Carolina.

Those measures included size restrictions and bag limits for recreational fishers.

Massachusetts had one of the toughest size restrictions at 36-inches and allowed only one fish to be kept per day.

Most of the others states had size restrictions in the 34-inch range and allowed two fish caught per day.



There were also tougher commercial fishing quota regulations put into place in 1989.

Slowly the population of striped bass began to increase thanks to these steps. By the mid-1990s, the once-depleted stripers were back in full force.

Last year Massachusetts reduced its size restrictions on recreational striped bass fishing to 34-inches.

And last April the state lowered its size restrictions to a once unheard of 28-inches. However, the one fish per day regulation is still in place.

"If we didn't have those restrictions in place for all those years, there would be no stripers right now," said Bill Bois, owner of North River Bait and Tackle in Pembroke. "All the credit has to go to those officials for saving the fish."

Dale Michaels tries his luck from the banks of the North River.

Paul Diodati, the state's director of sport fisheries, said the conservation measures have been a great success.

"We've gone beyond all our expectations for the return of striped bass," he said. "And the credit has to go to all the states that participated. In many cases, states went above and beyond the basics with regard to size and bag limits. And we're seeing record numbers of stripers because of this."

Diodati supports the new 28-inch size limit for Massachusetts.

"The harvest levels will probably increase," he said. "But we will still be well within the bounds of the stock and won't wipe them out."

Striped bass are anadromous (capable of swimming in both salt and fresh water) and head towards New England to feed after the spring breeding season.

Striper season runs until the early fall.

Mackerel, pogies and seaworms are some of the bait used to catch stripers.

Some of the best spots on the South Shore to land stripers include:

- The North River, which runs from Norwell through Marshfield and into Scituate.
- The South River, which runs from Scituate to Duxbury.

"This is an excellent year for stripers," said Peter Belsan of Belsan Bait & Tackle in Scituate. "We have people of all ages getting great fish all over the place. And a lot of them do 'catch and release'. But every once in a while, someone will really get a big one."

Marshfield's Tim Swider, 38, is one of those lucky fishers.

Last Thursday, Swider, who works for Scituate Concrete and Pipe, hauled in a 48-inch, 40-pound striper at Herring River in Scituate.

"This was a fish of a lifetime," Swider said. "I probably won't keep another fish for the rest of the year but this was one I had to keep."

Swider, who has been a serious fisher for the last 12 years, was fishing in the late afternoon when the striper struck.

"I had already caught and released a couple good-sized fish when this fish hit and began taking a lot of line," he said. "I knew I had a big one and I let it take more line and tire itself out a bit. I kept walking down the shoreline to stay with it."

Thirty minutes later, Swider reeled the fish in close to him.

"I could see where he took the line and then I saw his tail and it was about four feet away," he said. "I really couldn't believe it. It was huge."

Swider took the fish home and filleted it.

"I gave half of it to my mother, a quarter of it to my father-in-law and kept the rest," he said. "I marinated it in a little Italian dressing and threw it on the grill. It was delicious."

Top Agents Move To Prudential/Hallmark 100

Catherine Reedy

SCITUATE
Catherine Reedy, Maria Santos and Marie McKenzie have joined the Scituate office of Prudential Prime/Hallmark 100, Ltd., announced Chris Ford, the firm's president.

Maria Santos

Catherine, a member of Jack Conway's Scituate office for the past ten years, has been repeatedly recognized as that firm's number one performer. From 1994 through the first half of 1997 Catherine has ranked number one among all area agents for units sold in the town of Scituate. Catherine holds the prestigious GRI designation and has served on the public relations committee of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors. Catherine previously worked as a registered nurse in the area of obstetrics.

Maria Santos joins Prudential/Hallmark after four years as a top producer for Conway's Scituate office. Maria was named the "top lister" for that office for 1996 and the first half of 1997. Maria previously earned the "Excel Award" from RELO, the international network of relocation specialists. Maria holds the GRI designation and previously worked for ten years as the director of employee relations for a Cambridge hospital.

Marie Sabadini-McKenzie was a realtor in Weymouth for three years before joining Conway's Scituate office in 1996. Marie has sold property in almost every South Shore town and specializes in condominiums and sales to single women. Marie holds the GRI designation and previously worked for NYNEX in the area of finance management.

"I am very pleased that these three superior agents have chosen to join our team at Prudential Prime/Hallmark 100," stated Ford. "Clearly they see that the local strength of Hallmark 100 combined with the national name recognition and relocation strength of the Prudential Real Estate Affiliate Network bring an added dimension to their careers and their ability to provide superior service to their clients."

Financial stocks can fare well when interest rates are higher

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Financial companies, as a group, are currently performing very well in the market. Many banks have spent the last two years cutting costs amid a tremendous wave of acquisitions. Some have cut their operating costs recently by incorporating new technology into their businesses and by merging management with other banks. But many of these actions are in preparation for a possible (some would say eventual) rise in interest rates.

Perhaps no group feels the threat of higher interest rates more than financial companies. Rising rates have been known to squelch their profit margins and erode the value of their assets. But fleeing from financial stocks at the first sign of interest rate hikes can be a mistake, say some analysts. Certain companies' balance sheets may be solid enough to withstand a rate increase.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Investors dumped stocks from this group in 1994, when the Federal Reserve raised borrowing rates in order to quell inflation. And at the beginning of this year – after a spectacular two-year run – investors got the jitters again when Wall Street predicted that rates would most likely go higher this year.

"The knee-jerk reaction is for investors to sell," says Joseph Morford, a bank analyst at Alex, Brown & Sons Inc. in San Francisco. "A lot of banks have done much to buffer themselves against interest rates." For this reason Bank America, Washington Mutual, and Silicon Valley Bank shares are still worth buying, he says.

Financial stoc ks have more than recovered from the drop of their stock at the beginning of the year; in fact they are at record-breaking highs. Bank shares, for example, are trading at an average of 14 times this year's estimated earnings. That price-to-earnings (p/e) ratio is about 70 percent of the average for the entire market, according to Morford, compared with an average of 60 percent over the last ten years (Banks stocks usually trade at a discount to the market in general). "We are entering somewhat uncharted waters here," he says.

The Standard & Poor's Diversified Financial Index jumped about 30 percent from the beginning of April to the beginning of July. Why? For one thing, many economic prognosticators don't see interest rates rising more than a quarter of a point this year, which is not enough of an increase to have a strong impact. And, of course, the market in general has been going gangbusters, which has helped buoy the stocks.

But the group's ascent has put them in an even more precarious position if the threat of inflation and interest rates rears its head again; which is always a possibility (not even the professionals can predict with certainty when inflation may blast off).

For the majority of financial companies, higher interest rates pose a threat.

Higher borrowing costs make it more expensive for almost all companies to do business and, thereby, tends to diminish earnings across the board.

A steep rise in borrowing costs affects banks, brokerage houses and mortgage companies in a specific way. Banks are forced to offer higher rates on deposits and borrowed funds, causing interest costs to rise.

'A lot of banks have done much to buffer themselves against interest rates.'

Joseph Morford
Bank analyst
Alex, Brown & Sons, Inc.

Higher rates also reduce the value of securities that the banks hold (bond yields rise in conjunction with rates, thereby, lowering the value of the bond). So, finding financial companies that are strong enough to get through a possible hike in rates is the name of the game.

Fannie Mae, the mortgage company backed partially by the U.S. government, is among the financial stocks least likely to be effected by rising rates, says Leland Montgomery at Worth Magazine. Fannie Mae purchases new mortgages from banks and thrifts and then packages them into mortgage-backed securities for sale to individual and institutional investors.

To protect itself against interest rate swings, Fannie Mae matches the size and maturity of the debt it sells with that of the mortgages it owns.

So that, theoretically, the interest paid on the mortgages is translated into the interest payments on the Fannie Mae bonds. And the arrangement has helped the company clock earnings growth in the double digits over the last 10 years, which is impressive.

So far, the economy has been growing steadily but not fast enough to alarm the Federal Reserve's policy committee into raising rates. Time will tell. But the companies that have developed strategies to see them through any near-term rise in rates should continue to gain.

Cohasset diving team flips to first place

The 1997 Cohasset Diving Team season has begun.

On Friday, July 11, the Cohasset Swim Center hosted the Scituate Knights of Columbus, Scituate Yacht Club and Duxbury Yacht Club.

CDT twisted and flipped forwards and backwards to first place.

Results for 12 years and under girls: first place, Ashley Faber; second place, Gillian Weber. Boys, first place, Alex Hernan; second place, Mac Chase. For the 17 years and under girls, second place, Jen Meehan; third place, Amanda Cellucci; boys, first pace, David Crowley Buck and second place, Chris Flynn.

Under the tutelage of Dawn Meehan returning and new divers are polishing up old dives and learning new ones.

Last week's divers of the week were: Gillian Weber, Katherine Whorisky, Brooke Baker and Chris Flynn.

This week's divers of the week are: Melissa Crowley Buck, Mia Lieb-Lappen, Emile Shea, Kelsey Bell and Marissa Mello.

Keep up the good work.

Bike to help fight MS

The Boston Herald, The River 92.5 FM and Plymouth Savings Bank have joined forces to help the National Multiple Sclerosis Society promote Oceanside Bike Fest '97, scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 20.

Oceanside Bike Fest '97 is a one-day bike tour that begins in Duxbury and takes cyclists along the rocky shores of Scituate, Cohasset and through the area's forests and parks. Whether you are an avid or recreational cyclist, we have a route designed especially for you — 25, 50 or 100 miles!

Multiple sclerosis is a disease that attacks your nervous system, wearing away the control you have over your body. Symptoms may range from numbness to paralysis and blindness. MS is a devastating disease because it is so unpredictable. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of the disease cannot be foreseen.

Funds raised from Oceanside Bike Fest '97 will help the Massachusetts Chapter continue to provide a wide range of comprehensive services to the approximately 7,000 families in Massachusetts living with MS.

For more information about Oceanside Bike Fest '97, call the MS Society at (508) 291-2169.

bottom to entice bass. Some, however, are attracting the ever-present dogfish. One lobster man reported almost every trap had small bass or dogs or both in them. Apparently, he surmised, seeking an easy meal.

Tommy Lagrotteria was pulling a trawl recently and found a huge sea turtle on the buoy line. A quick call to the coast guard and a diver disentangled the turtle to go on its way.

Best method for catching bass in the July doldrums seems to be chumming. Dave and the gang are running through pogies by the hundreds. Squirrel nods with a Confucian solemnity and speaks but one word: chum.

The third annual Heritage Days Shark Tournament is coming up Aug. 1 and 2. If you want to see some of these huge denizens of the deep, make a date to be at the Mill Wharf Saturday afternoon, Aug. 2, at 4:30 p.m., for the weigh-in.

Catch one that is hard to carry!

Piano recital features 'Peter and the Wolf'

A piano recital by the students of Florence Jerome was held recently at Mrs. Jerome's home on Beechwood Street. Family and friends of the students were entertained by a solo piece by each student and also by the tale and music of "Peter and the Wolf" by Serge Prokofiev, arranged by Wesley Schaum.

In an orchestral version of "Peter and the Wolf" each principal character is represented by its own melody played by one particular musical instrument. However, with only the piano being used the individual melody and its interpretation by each performer was more important than ever.

Abby Murphy narrated the story and the musical pieces for the story were performed by Kyle Dattola-Harris (Peter and the duck), Nick Murphy (Grandfather and the wolf), Nils Sceery (the bird and the cat) and Mrs. Jerome (the hunters).

Individual piano solos in the recital were as follows: Selections from "Peer Gynt Suite , #1" (Grieg) by Nils Sceery; The Merry Farmer (Schumann) by Kyle Dattola-Harris; Old Time Rock and Roll (Jackson, Jones) by Nick Murphy; Selections from "Carmen" (Bizet), Toreador's Song and Habanera by Abby Murphy.

At the conclusion of the program Mrs. Jerome held a small reception for the students and their guests.

At right: Shown are the piano students and some of their guest after the recital. From left to right, row one, Nils Sceery, Kyle Datolla-Harris, Ivan Sceery and Laura Andrews; row two, Abby Murphy, Stephen Davis, Nick Murphy and Mrs. Jerome.

A June wedding is planned.

1997 annual fall perennial and bulb sale

Believe it or not, it's that time of year again to start thinking about fall planting. The Norfolk County Conservation District is sending out its fall brochure, "Let's Get Growing," which briefly describes and lists the following: crocus, hyacinths, Dutch iris, daffodils, narcissus and tulips of all colors. Perennials offered are foxglove, basket of gold, cone flower, columbine, sedum, silver mound, dwarf bleeding heart, Peony, hosta, bearded iris, and groundcover packysandra and myrtle.

The NCCD is a non-profit organization serving 28 towns in Norfolk County, including Cohasset. Funds from this event are recirculated back into the county through hazardous waste collection days, high school scholarships and camperships.

To receive this brochure and order form, including a mail-back form to attend a workshop with Horticulturist Mike Nelson as speaker, covering plants sold in brochure and other informative topics regarding fall planting, send a 32¢ stamp with your name/address to the Norfolk County Conservation District, 400 Main St., Bulb Sale, Walpole, 02081.

The deadline to attend workshop is Aug. 15; the deadline to order from the brochure is Aug. 29.

IT'S HAPPENING

Family Fun Series at the Paragon Carousel

The Family Fun Night Series continues at the Paragon Carousel throughout the summer, with events every other Wednesday evening in July and August.

August 6, children are encouraged to come dressed in their pajamas and join storyteller Randy Zella. Zella is the host of the local cable show, "Snuggle Up With Me." Stories will begin at 7:10 and 7:40 p.m. This will allow children to take a ride on the carousel as well, and wish their favorite horse goodnight! Zella will be taping for her local show, which will air Friday, Aug. 7, at 7 p.m., on Channel 3 in Hull.

The family night series will come to a close Aug. 20, with a family concert by local performer Dawna Hammers. The concert will take place across the street from the carousel at The Bernie King Pavilion and will immediately be followed by a sing-a-long at the carousel.

All events are scheduled from 7 to 8 p.m. at the carousel, except for the family concert, which will take place across the street at the pavilion. All events will take place rain or shine. Family night activities are free for all ages.

Rides on the carousel are additional; a single-ride tickets is $1.50 per person, a ten-ride ticket can be purchased for $13.50.

The Paragon Carousel is open seven days a week during the summer, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. For more information on Family Fun Night and the carousel, please call 925-0472.

Cabaret dance camp

The South Shore Community Center offers a theatrical way to wrap up summer vacation with a few openings left.

Summer Cabaret Dance Camp, under the direction of Leslie VanDyk of The South Shore School of Performing Arts, will be held Aug. 25-29, ages 7 to 10 in mornings and ages 11 to 18, afternoons.

Children and teens will learn tap and jazz steps, act and sing in contemporary musical numbers with a final performance at week's end, August 29, at 6:30 p.m. for family and friends.

Cost is $75 for members and $80 for non-members. Join with a friend for a fun and creative way to break summer doldrums. Call SSCC 383-0088 to register.

Kids pet show coming

The children's section of the Paul Pratt Library will sponsor a Pet Show on Cohasset Common on Thursday, Aug. 21 from 10 a.m. to noon. Children may pick up a registration form for their pet or pets in the children's room at the Library beginning on Aug. 1. Each pet to be shown — dog, cat, bird, duck, rabbit, iguana, tortoise, et al. — must be registered. Ribbons and prizes will be awarded in special categories. Refershments will be provided by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library. Watch for more news about the pet show in this column.

Museum passes are available

There is now available to Cohasset Library card holders a free pass for the John F. Kennedy Library. The pass, which was donated by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, admits four persons and is good seven days a week. It also allows a 15 percent discount on items purchased at the museum shop. Also available are free passes to the U.S.S. Constitution Museum, Museum of Science, Museum of Fine Arts, Children's Museum and Plimoth Plantation. A pass for the New England Aquarium is not available during the summer, but will again be activated in September. Please call the library or come in to reserve

Beloved horse put down after Route 3A accident

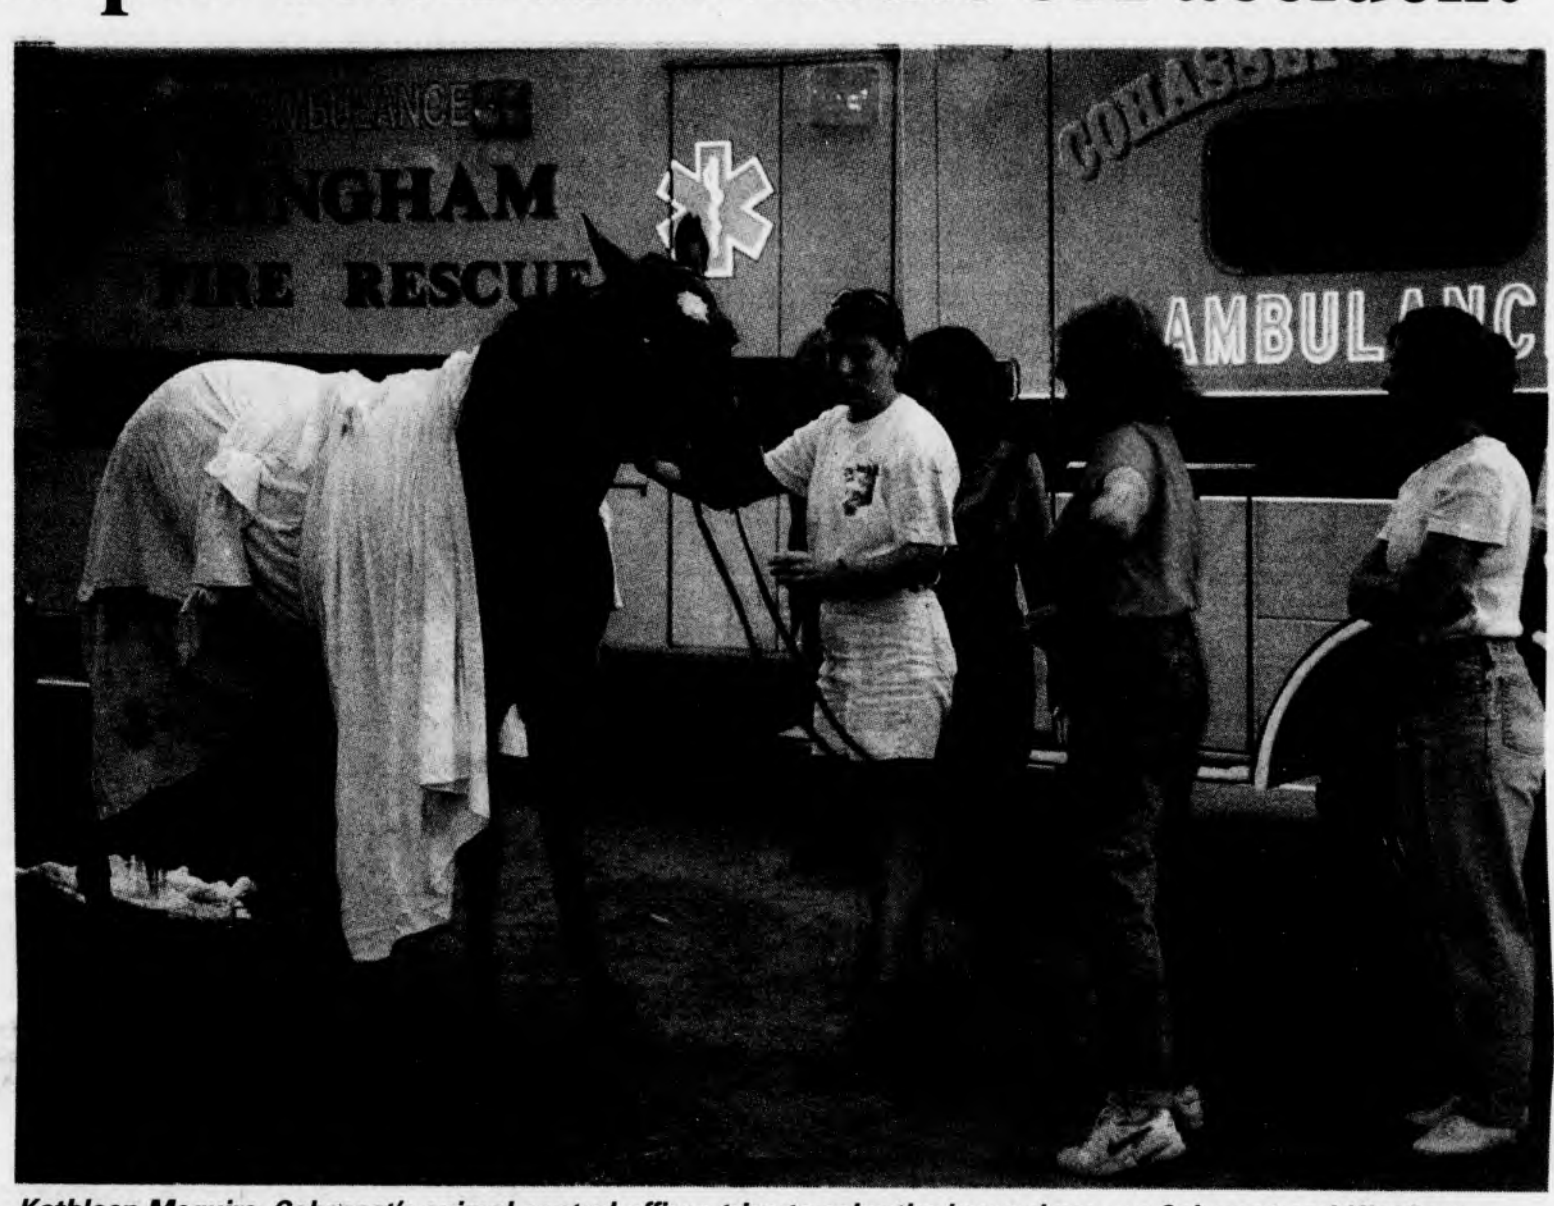
By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

A beloved horse nicknamed Scooby was euthanized on the side of Route 3A Tuesday evening as firefighters, police officers, animal lovers and a local veterinarian fought back tears.

The dramatic scene took place on the Hingham/Cohasset line across from the entrance to Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home as the last of the southbound rush hour traffic passed by.

The six-year-old gelding suffered a fractured left hind leg following a accident when the riderless animal apparently bolted across the state highway colliding with a Ford pickup truck.

According to witnesses at the scene, Terrie Carlson, a Hull teenager, was riding Scooby in Whitney Woods when she fell from the horse.



"I was inside and heard the screeching of brakes and a thud and I came outside with my cell phone," said Phil Veinot of 196 Chief Justice Cushing Way. Veinot said someone had already called 911 and a nurse, who was passing by, was tending to the horse.

"I got some towels for her to use a compresses on the cuts," he said.

Carlson, the owner and rider, was apparently uninjured after she fell. She was hysterical and fainted when she was told the horse's leg was broken, witnesses said.

The driver of the truck, Greg Porell of Norfolk, was on his way to meet relatives in Cohasset. Police did not cite Porell because the accident was not his fault.

"The front end of the truck had extensive damage," said Hingham Police Officer Brian Aiguier. The truck was towed by Bare Cove Auto Towing.

Kathleen Maguire, Cohasset's animal control officer, tries to calm the horse down, as Cohasset and Hingham ambulances block the view of the scene from Route 3A rush-hour traffic.

Staff photo/Mary Ford

"Witnesses behind Porell saw the riderless horse enter the roadway," Aiguier said. Porell had bruises on his hands but was wearing his seatbelt which prevented more severe injuries.

Roberta Rogalski of S. Pleasant Street in Hingham, a friend of Carlson's was on the scene helping out.

"I am beyond devastated," she said.

Rogalski, who has owned horses for 24 years, explained that a horse's natural instinct is to run for home. The horse was heading toward the stables on Side Hill Road across Route 3A from Whitney Woods.

Questions linger about school accessibility

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

Kara Johansen is an honors student at Cohasset High School who wants what every other student gets: equal access to a quality education.

Kara is confined to a wheelchair because of cerebral palsy, but her mind works fine.

Her father, Fred Johansen, says school and town officials are not making the high school accessible to disabled persons so Kara can obtain an equal education. Johansen is angry because he feels the school department continues to discuss ways to accommodate Kara rather than ways of making the schools accessible to disabled persons as required by law.

Johansen's voice rises and becomes angry when he speaks of the way the schools have "accommodated" Kara.

"I want my daughter safe, and all children and every person in Cohasset who wants to use the public facilities of this town should be able to," Johansen said. "But Kara is a victim of their poor planning, disingenuousness and lies."

Johansen cites a number of incidents that he believes shows a lack of commitment by the school department to address issues of accessibility and safety for disabled persons. He also says a number of individuals outside Cohasset have seen a similar pattern.

One such incident began on June 24 when an inspector from

McCann leaves with a smile

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

Ed McCann could take a well-earned rest now that he's ready to step down as acting-town manager on Aug. 4. He could, but he won't.

McCann, who is 63 but "going on 43," is planning to hit the ground running Monday morning so he can give more attention to his consulting practice. And now that McCann is leaving Cohasset, he's able to step back and look at his work over the past several months, while offering the town a little advice for the future.

> 'Now that the town has a town manager form of government, the selectmen have to work to make sure he's used in the proper way. Some peripheral tasks, such as parking clerk and procurement officer, should be delegated to other people.'
> — ED MCCANN, ACTING TOWN MANAGER

"When I accepted the acting town administrator's job, I thought I would be here for three months but that ended up turning into six months," McCann said with a distant gaze.

McCann sat in his office leaning back in a chair easily during his final week on the job, reminiscing about the last six months.

"Of course, I lived in Scituate, so Cohasset was a natural move for me," McCann said.

Ammo depot, annex cleanup

Unsafe structures at the former Naval Ammunition Depot and Annex in Hingham and Cohasset will be addressed under the terms of a $1,360,897 contract recently awarded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to the U.S. Small Business Administration. The work, which will be accomplished by J & W Company, Inc., of Leominster, will begin in late summer and take about nine months to complete.

The contract calls for demolition of a large concrete dock and closure of eight bunkers at the former ammunition depot, currently operated by the Town of Hingham as Bare Cove Park. At the former ammunition depot annex in Hingham and Cohasset, now part of Wompatuck State Park, six magazines will be demolished and three others closed. In addition, two barricade sidings will be removed.

The remediation of the site is being accomplished under the authority of the defense environmental restoration program, which provides for an expanded effort in environmental restoration. It emphasizes the identification, investigation, and prompt cleanup of hazardous and toxic waste, unexploded ordnance, unsafe buildings, and other structures and debris at current and former military facilities.

All work will be accomplished under the supervision of a Corps of Engineers inspector to assure compliance with contract requirements.

Voter registration is ongoing

The Town Clerk would like to remind citizens that voter registration is an ongoing process.

Since July 1, 1994, new voters have been able to register without the need to come to town hall. Registration forms are available at the Town Hall, Registry, Post Office, Library, Department of Welfare, WIC, AFDC, Medicaid, Army Recruitment offices, and other offices that provide services to people with disabilities. Affidavits of registration are mailed to the clerk's office or sent electronically through the computer from the Registry. After certifying the affidavit, an acknowledgment notice is then mailed to the voter. The central voter registry maintains a statewide list of all registered voters in Massachusetts. This computerized listing is essential in prohibiting voter registration fraud.

In addition to broadening the opportunity to register to vote, the motor voter law also changes the way in which voters may be removed from the voting list. A voter may not be removed from the voting list on the ground that the registrant has changed his residence unless the registrant: Confirms in writing that he has moved to a place outside the registrar's jurisdiction registers in another city or town; or Fails to respond to a confirmation notice and has not voted in the second general election for Federal office after the date of the notice. Registration closes 20 days before an election and Annual Town Meeting (10 days before a Special Town Meeting). Citizens may register during this period, but will not be able to vote at that election.

Supermarket wars heat up as summer cools down

Customers seek best buy in area

By Jennifer R. Horan
STAFF WRITER

With the area's third supermarket poised to burst onto the scene next month, Scituate Marketplace and Cohasset's Stop & Shop are bracing themselves for new competition from Shaw's.

The new Shaw's market has been under construction just a few miles away in Cohasset's Cushing Plaza for more than a year, with a grand opening date set for Aug. 24. The approximately 45,000-square-foot market will be the 121st location in the Shaw's chain and will cost the company between $8 million and $9 million to build.

Shoppers at Scituate Marketplace said they would certainly try the new Shaw's to compare prices and selection.

"Where I shop depends on where the better deal is," said Scituate Marketplace shopper Walter Wojciechowski, a Scituate resident. He added that he would not mind driving the extra five miles to Shaw's in Cohasset for lower prices.

Nancy Riley, a regular customer at Scituate Marketplace, said she would also try the new Shaw's.

"I'll give it a look," said Riley, who shops at Scituate Marketplace because of its location in her own town. "I like the location. It's an easy store to shop and the personnel couldn't be nicer."

Scituate Marketplace, which replaced Purity Supermarket on Front Street last year, has found a niche with Scituate shoppers, said store manager Michael Smith.

"I think (Shaw's opening) will hurt us a little bit, but we're a locally-based store with loyal customers," said Smith.

During an in-store survey in February, Scituate Marketplace officials calculated the market's customer base at almost 13,000 shoppers — with about 90 percent hailing from Scituate.

"The store is small enough that people enjoy it and can easily shop it," he said. The nine-aisle supermarket measures 24,000 square feet.

Smith said people shop at Scituate Marketplace for convenience, customer service and the store's fresh perishables department.

"It will be difficult to compete with Shaw's for groceries, but we're more than just a grocery store," Smith said. "Our perishables department is so much better. We have high quality produce and beef that our customers really like."

Smith added that the staff's willingness to find any product a customer may need keeps shoppers coming back to their hometown store.

"We're very receptive to our customers' needs. Any product they want, we go overboard to get it for them," he said.

Although Smith said he feels confident Scituate Marketplace will not lose too many customers to Shaw's, he realizes people will give Cohasset's newest market a try.

"I don't think the area can support three supermarkets," he said. "But we're the guy that's not the big guy. We're the one that wants to be here more than the big supermarkets. We hope our customers want us to stay as much as we want to."

Cohasset Stop & Shop customers are also open to shopping at the new Shaw's.

"Like everyone else, you compare. We've been looking forward to Shaw's," said Helen Drohan of Hull, who shops regularly at the Cohasset Stop & Shop and described the shopping experience there as comfortable. "I like Stop & Shop. It's clean and has good meat and produce departments. But Shaw's is going to be near where we are and I imagine we'll find a lot more things we didn't know about."

Local shoppers say they will try out the new competition for Stop and Shop and Scituate Market Place, Shaws which is slated to open later this month.

Staff photo/Bill Wadsworth

Drohan said that after shopping at Stop & Shop for six years, she wasn't sure if Shaw's would change her mind. "Stop & Shop is a nice store. There's no doubt about it. The people are very nice and I know where everything is."

Sally Sisson, who recently moved to Cohasset, said she shops at Stop & Shop because it's the closest food store to her house.

"I don't think the prices are that good, although I think they've made an attempt in the past month to lower them," she said. "But I'll try Shaw's. Their name brands are good."

The 185 Stop & Shop stores in the country — all along the east coast — always keep a careful eye on their competitors, including Shaw's, said spokeswoman Terry Vanderwater.

"It's good business sense to not take anybody or anything for granted," she said. "When there's more competition, the consumer always wins. Customers should go in and check us out."

Vanderwater said Stop & Shop has maintained its reputation as the number one supermarket chain in the country with the leading market share despite the competition.

"I think there's always a curiosity factor," Vanderwater said of the new store opening. "It is our job to make sure we continue to offer quality products and services so (our customers) remain with us."

The 48,700-square-foot Cohasset Stop & Shop on Route 3A — located one mile from the new Shaw's — offers customers an excellent value with double coupons, specials and the Stop & Shop card, she said. The store was redone a month ago to enhance customers' shopping experience, she added.

"It's our goal to save the customer more money, time and eliminate hassles more than any other supermarket company," Vanderwater said.

Shaw's spokesman Bernie Rogan said the new supermarket's location off Route 3A is an ideal site for a food retailer, despite its proximity to the other two markets. In other towns in New England, he added, Shaw's and Stop & Shop are directly across the street from each other.

"I think the customers should welcome the opportunity for competition," Rogan said. "Even our competition will have to reduce their prices to compete with us. Therefore, the customer benefits."

Shaw's will offer 30,000 to 40,000 items in its Cohasset location, with better pricing, a higher level of service, more variety and a nicer shopping environment, he said.

"I think the principal thing customers will be able to learn is that good food doesn't have to cost a lot of money," Rogan said.

'Even our competition will have to reduce their prices to compete with us. Therefore, the customer benefits.'
— BERNIE ROGAN, SHAW'S SPOKESMAN.

Super Stop & Shop will still be the largest supermarket in the Scituate/Cohasset area.

Scituate Marketplace has a found its niche, company officials say.

Registry says special needs buses have safety problems

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

This latest problem with buses is not the first time the state has come down on Cohasset schools.

Last summer, the Registry of Motor Vehicles sidelined all buses because of various safety problems.

In this latest incident, Paul Harkins of the Registry inspected bus 38559 on June 24 and determined that it could not be used for transportation because it contained a number of safety violations

Harkins said the van had no back up warning alarm, the stop arm flashing lights did not work, the yellow pre-stop flashers did not work, the right front tire needed to be replaced and the van was leaking water.

Harkins told school Superintendent Stephen Hart of the violations, and informed him that the bus would have to be repaired and reinspected. Harkins also told Hart that the registration was about to expire on July 1.

Harkins concluded the letter by saying that the van had been inspected by Wilder Bros. in Scituate on July 2.

On July 7 two state troopers from the State Police Vehicle Services unit responded to a complaint by Fred Johansen that his daughter, Kara, was being transported in a unsafe bus.

Trooper Paul Van Schaick visited the school on July 7 to investigate Johansen's complaint.

In his report, Van Schaick said he observed bus 38683 leave the high school with a student on board. Van Schaick stopped the bus and asked the driver, Francis Powers, to produce her license and the vehicle's registration.

According to Van Schaick, the bus registration had expired on June 30 and Powers' license to drive a school bus had expired on June 24. Van Schaick also observed that Powers was not wearing a seat belt. Powers admitted to Van Schaick that she had transported other pupils earlier in the day.

An assistant to Hart, Guido Risi, approached Van Schaick and said he had new registrations for the buses in the school building, the trooper said. Another trooper called in the registration number and determined that the vehicle was not registered.

Van Schaick also observed several other violations on the bus, including items lying around unsecured, and inappropriate lettering.

However, this was not the bus that Johansen had called to complain about. The bus he was concerned about was bus 38559, the same one that had been inspected by the Registry.

Van Schaick states in his letter that the bus was also unregistered even though Harkins' report stated that it had been inspected on July 2.

Van Schaick listed a number of problems with bus 38559 including an empty fire extinguisher, an inoperative oil pressure gauge, a broken windshield washer, an inoperative front red flashing light, an inoperative rear red flashing light, an improperly wired lights monitor board, a blocked emergency exit, a red light out in the stop arm, and iron bars lying around loose.

Van Schaick told Hart that the bus was unsafe to transport students plus it was unregistered.

"Mr. Hart's response was to engage me in conversation about my harassing him," van Schaick reported.

Van Schaick concluded his letter by agreeing with Johansen's concerns that Kara was being transported unsafely.

"I find much merit in Mr. Johansen's accusations that there were safety problems encountered during the transportation of his special needs daughter and that a total commitment to safety involving the transportation of Cohasset's special needs students is in question as evidenced by a cursory inspection of the Massachusetts State Police Vehicle Service's Unit," Van Schaick said in his report.

Hart said he delegated the task to someone else and it didn't get done, but he accepts full responsibility for the mix up.

Hart said the Registry is incorrect about the July 2 inspection date. Bus 38683 was inspected on June 25 and received an inspection sticker valid until Nov. 30.

Bus 38559 received an inspection sticker on June 27, also valid until Nov. 30.

Hart said Francis Powers is responsible for renewing her own driver's license. The school department checks all bus drivers' licenses just prior to the start of the school year in September.

Hart said some of the inoperative lights were caused by a faulty circuit breaker, while the iron bar is a wrench used to operate the bus lift manually. Hart disputes the inoperative oil pressure gauge and broken windshield washer.

Cabaret dance camp offered

The South Shore Community Center offers a theatrical way to wrap up summer vacation with a few openings left.

Summer Cabaret Dance Camp, under the direction of Leslie VanDyk of The South Shore School of Performing Arts, will be held Aug. 25-29, ages 7 to 10 in mornings and ages 11 to 18, afternoons.

Children and teens will learn tap and jazz steps, act and sing in contemporary musical numbers with a final performance at week's end, August 29, at 6:30 p.m. for family and friends.

Cost is $75 for members and $80 for non-members. Join with a friend for a fun and creative way to break summer doldrums. Call SSCC 383-0088 to register.

Kids pet show

The children's section of the Paul Pratt Library will sponsor a Pet Show on Cohasset Common on Thursday, Aug. 21 from 10 a.m. to noon. Children may pick up a registration form for their pet or pets in the children's room at the Library beginning on Aug. 1. Each pet to be shown — dog, cat, bird, duck, rabbit, iguana, tortoise, et al. — must be registered. Ribbons and prizes will be awarded in special categories. Refershments will be provided by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library. Watch for more news about the pet show in this column.

Questions linger about school accessibility

the Registry of Motor Vehicles received a complaint about a bus used to transport special needs students, vehicle 38559.

Paul Harkins of the Registry inspected bus 38559 on June 24 and determined that it could not be used for transportation because it contained a number of safety violations (see separate story).

Johansen said this is just one example of the type of "disingenuousness" he has encountered with school officials.

Johansen said the buses are just a symptom of the wider disregard for accessibility. He said the school department only makes changes when "it's back is against the wall."

But School Superintendent Stephen Hart says that's not true.

Hart admitted that there are still accessibility issues at the high school, but the system is making an effort, he said.

"I'm not denying we need to do things," Hart said. "But we have made changes to the physical structures of the schools to accommodate Kara."

Hart points to a wheelchair lift in the high school, ramps at the Osgood school, aides, a wheelchair van and modifications to the bathroom at the Deer Hill school to accommodate Kara.

He added that he will do whatever is necessary to meet ADA accessibility requirements through renovations and accommodations such as moving programs to accessible locations.

One problem at the junior/senior high school has been the lack of a handicapped accessible bathroom.

Jim Dougan of the state Office on Disability inspected the high school on June 10 and uncovered more than 30 violations, many of them in the bathroom Kara must use next to the superintendent's office.

Dougan also attended a school committee meeting on June 19 and determined that the meeting, held in the high school, was inaccessible to people in wheelchairs and would have to be moved. School committee meetings are now held in an office in the superintendent's wing.

Hart said he is confident the meetings are now being held in an accessible location.

A visual inspection of the bathroom used by Kara also confirms that work is being done to make it accessible to disabled persons.

But Johansen said his daughter has been in the high school for several years, and the bathroom should have been made fully accessible several years ago.

Several of Kara's former aides said that school officials would have renovated the high school bathroom sooner if they were serious about addressing accessibility.

Kerri Ann Conley has worked as an aide for Kara for more than one year. She said the bathroom was "ridiculous."

"The first time I used it with Kara was on May 29 and I could not get her wheelchair into the stall," Conley said. "I had to carry her into the stall and put her on an unsafe commode."

Conley said the situation in the bathroom was intolerable. The chair, a tall, vinyl covered aluminum chair wrapped in duct tape, was too wobbly for Kara to use.

Conley said she tried to talk to director of special needs Lynn Sylva, but "she was always out."

Sylva was contacted by telephone for this report, but she deferred her comments to Hart. Sylva could not be reached for further comment.

Conley also ran into a problem during a fire drill when teachers directed her and Kara to a doorway that led to a set of steep stairs.

Another former aide, Gina Achin, also worked with Kara at school and found the situation with the toilet intolerable.

"That bathroom was the most unsafe thing I've ever seen," Achin said. "The wheelchair wouldn't fit and I had to carry her in. It just seems like they're not doing the things they're supposed to be doing. The toilet should have been addressed three years ago when Kara first came to the (junior/senior) high school."

But Hart points to the current work to repair the bathroom as proof of the school's commitment to work on accessibility issues.

"Changes are being done and the toilet near my office is accessible," Hart said.

But Johansen is still unhappy with the school department's performance.

"More attention to the law needs to be paid," Johansen said. "Whether it's school buses, accessibility, drivers— before someone says what the law is they should say they don't know and get some help before someone is hurt."

Family fun night at Paragon Carousel features local storyteller

Children are encouraged to come dressed in their pajamas for the next Family Fun Night at the Paragon Carousel. On Wednesday, Aug. 6, Randy Zella, host of the local cable television show "Snuggle Up With Me" will entertain children with selected stories. Zella will be taping for her local show which will air Friday, Aug. 8, at 7 p.m. on Channel 3 in Hull.

Stories will begin at 7:10 p.m. and 7:40 p.m. This will allow children to take a ride on the Carousel as well, and wish their favorite horse goodnight! Stuffed animals and pillows are more than welcome during storytelling.

There is no charge for the storytelling. Rides on the Carousel are additional; a single ride ticket is $1.50 per person, a ten ride ticket can be purchased for $13.50. Family Fun Night will take place rain or shine.

The Family Fun Night series will come to a close August 20 with a free family concert by local performer Dawna Hammers. The concert will take place at 7 p.m. across the street from the Carousel at The Bernie King Pavilion, and will immediately be followed by a sing-a-long at the Carousel.

The Paragon Carousel is open seven days a week during the summer from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. For more information on Family Fun Night and the Carousel, please call 925-0472.

Horse put down after Route 3A accident

"Police asked me to bring a trailer down but a horse that badly injured won't get in a trailer," she said. "They didn't realize that the vet comes to the horse."

Rogalski said she concurred with Dr. Dana Pantano, a veterinarian with South River Veterinarian Service out of Marshfield, who was called to the scene that the horse should be put down.

"We have to do the right thing, we owe it to them," Rogalski said. "We are their caretakers and we owe them that respect to use our common sense when it's time to put them down."

Linda Beris, a close friend of Carlson's, said Carslon suffered some bruises when she fell but that was all. Beris said the horse stopped to wait a minute for Carlson but then "must of heard dinner bells in his head" and ran home. She said Carlson and Scooby would have celebrated their "first anniversary" on Wednesday. She said the location of the break in the Scooby's leg made it impossible to stabilize in order to transport him.

Cohasset animal control officer Kathleen Maguire praised the firefighters for using the ambulances to block the view of the scene from cars passing by.

Maguire who helped steady the horse for the veterinarian said she did the best she could to help.

"People always ask me what my most unusual call has been," she said. "I think this is going to be it for a while."

A fund to help Carlson buy a new horse has been set up at the Rockland Trust Bank, Hull 02045.

Chiropractic for HEALTH
by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg
Chiropractor
TREATING MIGRAINES
Migraine headaches are caused by changes in the amount of blood flow to the brain. For whatever reason, the flow decreases and the body then overcompensates by sending too much blood to the brain. The result is a pounding, vascular headache. Chiropractic treatment of this problem centers on the cervical region of the spinal cord, through which an artery known as the vertebral artery carries a good deal of the blood that flows from the heart to the brain. If vertebrae are misaligned in the neck, the artery may become restricted as it passes through the transverse processes. To relieve this restriction and encourage more even blood flow, the chiropractor will realign the vertebrae in the hope of averting migraines.
Headaches are a distress signal, your body telling you something's out of balance. Pain relievers may temporarily turn off the alarm switch, but usually don't put out the fire. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, however, we can diagnose your type of headache, treat its underlying causes, and help you learn how to prevent headaches in the future. Please call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor.
P.S. Along with the carotid arteries, the vertebral artery carries most of the blood that flows to the brain.

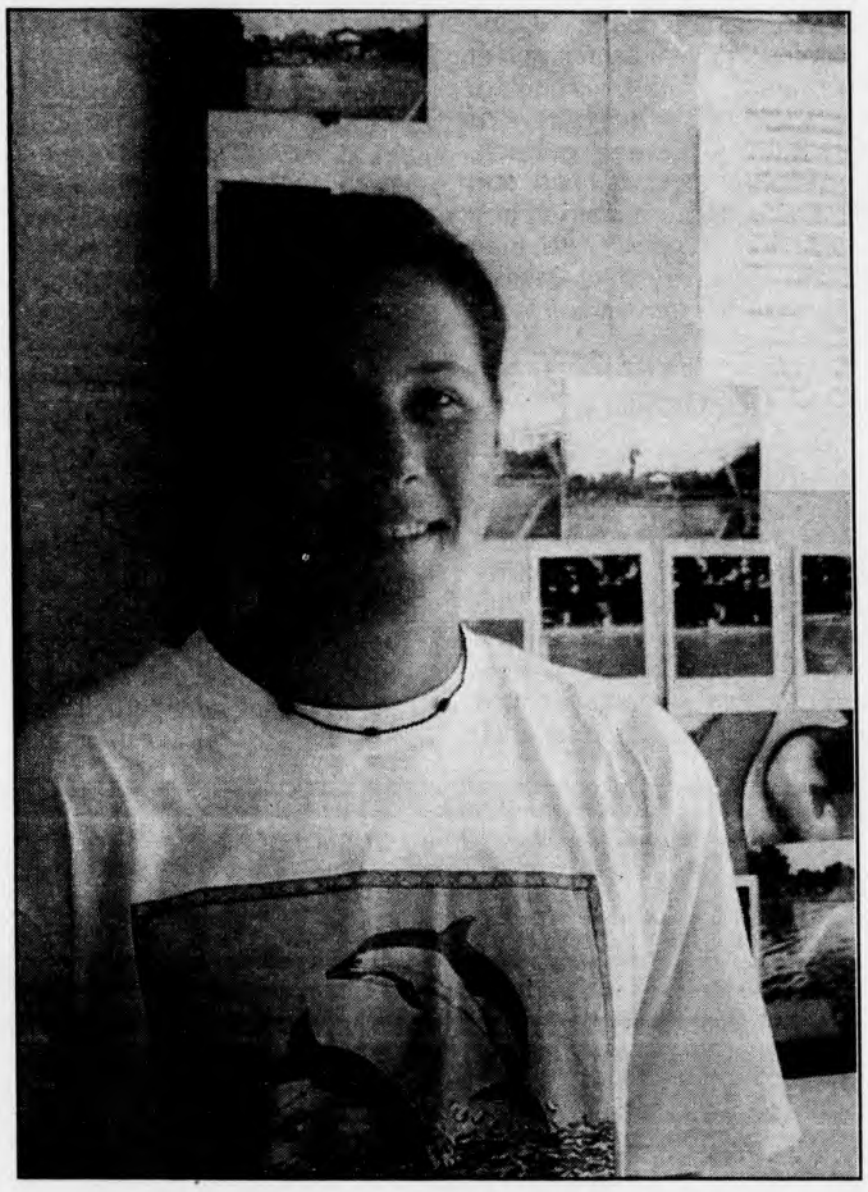
Hearing set for Greenbush rail

A public hearing will be held Aug. 14 by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to hear comments from the public regarding the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's proposal to place fill in 5.11 acres of wetlands and waterways for restoration of the commuter rail service on the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad line in Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. The 7 p.m. session will take place at Lombardo's Conference and Function Hall, 6 Billings St., in Randolph.



Sign-in for the hearing will begin at 5:30 p.m. After following established protocol (i.e., a presentation by the applicant, followed by comments from public officials), speakers will be called upon in the order in which they registered. Depending on the number of people who sign up to speak, a time limit may be imposed to allow all who wish to speak an equal opportunity to do so.

Both written and oral testimony will be received. In addition to making an oral presentation at the hearing, stenographers will be available to take statements from those who wish to have their comments placed on the record. Written statements may also be submitted for 10 days following the meeting or until August 24.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Ted Lento at the New England Division, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Rd., Waltham, 02254-9149, (617) 647-8863.

MCALLISTER FAMILY NEWS

Remember Dawn McAllister, a graduate from Cohasset Junior/Senior High School? She and her husband, Bob Lynch, (who reside in Scituate) became the proud parents of twins June 20! Their names are Ryan Robert Lynch and Erica Grace Lynch. Ryan weighed 7 lbs. 8 ozs., and Erica 6 lbs. 6 ozs! What an exciting time for the whole family, including maternal grandparents, Don and Jaye McAllister of Cohasset, and paternal grandparents, Walter and Lorraine Lynch of Boston. Congratulations to all of you, what fun you will have with those babies!

More McAllister news, this time Erin C. McAllister is the headliner. She graduated cum laude May 25 from UMass/Amherst with a BA in communications and minors in computer science and film studies. Erin has just secured a position as a portfolio administrator in Mutual Funds Division at State Street Bank. Erin is a graduate of CHS, and the daughter of Don and Jaye McAllister. Everyone is extremely proud of her accomplishments and wish her the best of luck in her new career!

COOL DAY OF SHOPPING

Cohasset Elder Affairs has planned quite an August; if any of you seniors are looking for something to do check the lineup! Aug. 4 they go to the Braintree Plaza for a cool day of shopping (leave at 9:30 a.m. and return about 1:30 p.m. They are planning to go to Plymouth for a fun time on the duck tour. Anyone interested in line dancing at the Bernie King Pavilion on Nantasket Beach? Its free! Go and enjoy the summer breeze and Happy Feet! Aug. 20 at 9:30 a.m. board the bus for Caldor's in Braintree and lunch after at Bug-A-Boo Steak House, the moose talks to you! On Aug. 27 at 9 a.m., they are off to Boston on the Harbor Express with lunch in town and fun sightseeing at old Faneuil Hall. Finally, don't forget Tuesdays and Thursdays, air conditioned lunches! Call 383-9112 for more details on any events listed!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, CLARK

Be sure to extend Happy Birthday greetings to Clark Chatterton when you see him this week, his birthday was July 29. Here's hoping your day was a splendid one, Clark!

RECENT COLLEGE GRADS

The Colorado College sent a news release about Matthew Banks, the son of Barre and Amy Banks. Matthew was awarded a bachelor of arts degree from Colorado College, he majored in political economy and minored in environmental issues. Matt served as class president both his junior and senior year. He led the class of '97 into the commencement exercises and performed the tassle turning ceremony. Matt has been chosen to participate in a seminar this summer on environmental economics at the Political Economy Research Center in Bozeman, Mont. Matt is a 1993 CHS graduate.

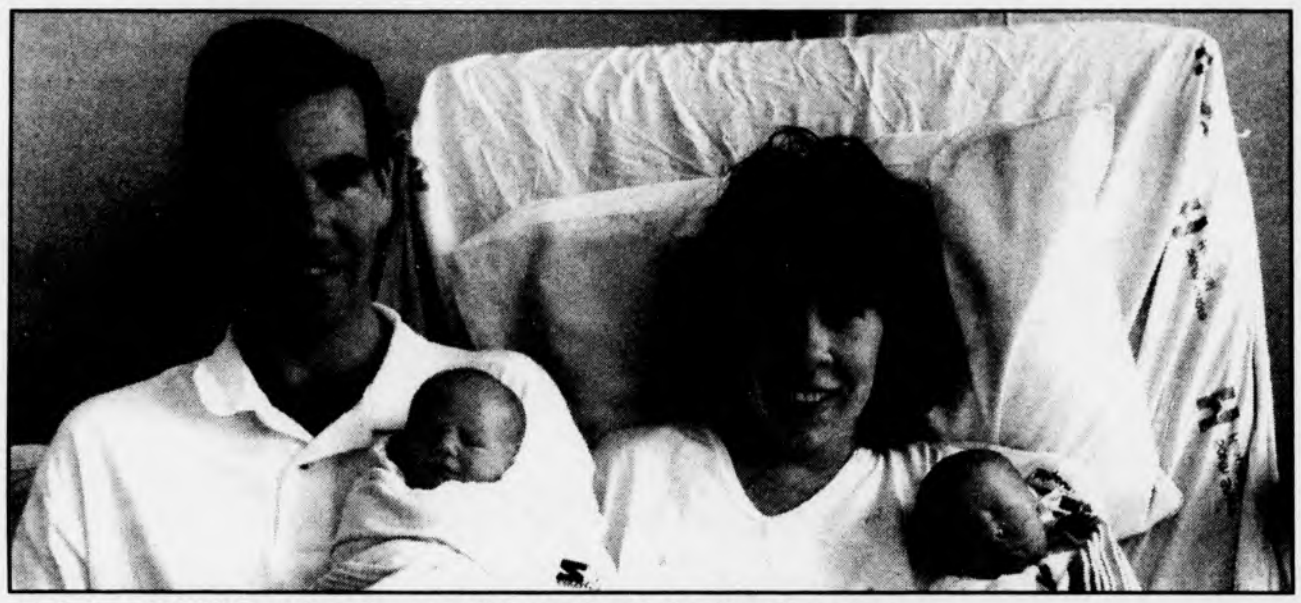
Jennifer Noon was one of nearly 1,000 students receiving a bachelor of arts degrees during commencement exercises at Dartmouth College June 8. Jennifer, the daughter of Nicholas and Constance Noon, majored in genetics, cell and developmental biology and received the degree with high honors (magna cum laude). Congratulations to you!

HONOR ROLL

Alexander Gaston, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gaston III, has been named to the Holderness School's spring semester honor roll. This winter and spring Gaston also worked in the school's on-campus student jobs program, was elected a crew leader in that program for next year, sang in the school chorus, earned a varsity letter on an Eastern alpine skiing team that claimed a New England prep school championship, played varsity tennis, and worked for two weeks in southwestern Pennsylvania as a volunteer for Habitat for Humanity! Wow!

DEAN'S LIST

Two Cohasset residents have recently been named to the dean's list at Boston University for the spring semester. Students recognized for this honor are Jemilah Y. Afshar and Andrea E. Mercurio, and we congratulate both of you for your efforts!



HEADED FOR TABOR

Cameron Nugent, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Nugent, will be entering Tabor Academy this fall as a member of the freshman class. Tabor is located in Marion. Cameron is currently participating in Tabor's "Orientation at Sea" program, which brings 12 to 14 students, Tabor faculty, and Tabor student crew members together for six days of sailing, exploring and learning along the coast of Maine. This program exposes incoming students to the ocean with a general introduction to oceanography, marine biology and related environmental issues. Hopefully we will hear more about Cameron's experiences upon his return!

Resident helps Habitat for Humanity in Kentucky

Tammy Maitland of Forest Ave. recently participated in the 1997 Jimmy Carter Work Project (JCWP), sponsored by Habitat for Humanity International (HFHI). Over 2,000 volunteers from around the world built 50 houses alongside former President and Mrs. Carter during the week-long build in seven Appalachian communities, hosted by seven Habitat for Humanity Affiliates. The host affiliates in Kentucky are Daniel Boone Habitat for Humanity (HFH), Hyden; Lee County HFH, Beattyville; Madison County HFH, Richmond & Berea; Morehead Area HFH, Morehead; Phelps Area HFH, Phelps; and Sandy Valley HFH, Pikeville. In Tennessee, Appalachia HFH, Robbins, is a host affiliate.

HFHI is a non-profit, ecumenical Christian organization dedicated to eliminating poverty housing around the world. Founded in 1976 by Millard and Linda Fuller, HFHI is now working in partnership with people in need in need in more than 1,200 cities in 40 countries. Utilization of volunteer labor, donated materials and contributions along with no-profit, interest-free loans enable HFHI to make housing more affordable. JCWP is the premiere annual event of HFHI, and the catalyst for the broader building project, Hammering the Hills.

Hammering the Hills is a joint Appalachian Building project resulting in new houses for 150 families in need. Houses for the $7.75 million home ownership project are being constructed this summer through the Habitat for Humanity 1997 Jimmy Carter Work Project and the Federation of Appalachian Housing Enterprises Partnership Fund.

Sixth carillon concert Sunday

Lynnette Geary, assistant carillonneur at Baylor University in Waco, Texas, will give a recital in the continuing series of concerts on the Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, Sunday, Aug. 3. Ms. Geary will play a varied program of transcriptions, arrangements and original music for the carillon. She replaces Herbert Colvin, carillonneur of Baylor, who was originally scheduled for this date, but who has recently sustained a broken arm resulting from a fall. Mr. Colvin's recital has been postponed until the 1998 season.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. It will take place rain or shine; in case of rain, listen from your parked car. Printed programs, recital schedules and the new brochure describing the Cohasset Carillon will be available in the program stand at the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, and will also be distributed on the Cohasset Common, and at the entrance to Stagecoach Way (the pedestrian walk beside Hunneman Realty on Main Street). Listeners are invited to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers. Following the recital a tour of the tower and carillon will be offered to all interested persons.

For further information, telephone St. Stephen's Church at (617) 383-1083, weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., or the church carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner at (508) 475-2599, or the assistant carillonneur, Mrs. Mary Kennedy at (617) 383-9599.

Commuter boats come of age

All the noise over the switch in subsidized commuter boat companies may have a positive effect on the marine transportation system after all.

The 300 or so commuters, who turned out for a rally on the dock last week despite a long day at the office, finally got the MBTA's attention.

As T spokesman Brian Pedro points out — if one political sign equals 15 votes — then one boat rider may represent many more with the same feelings.

The T says it isn't about to void its contract with current provider Harbor Cruises, as commuters would like, but it is looking at formulating a timetable for improvements at Hewitt's Cove. A bigger dock, covered gangway, restrooms and expanded parking will be a big boon to commuters and the companies that provide the boat service.

As state Sen. Robert Hedlund said there is one thing that everyone can agree on: expanding the parking at the commuter boat dock could double the ridership overnight.

And that's good news for commuters and the environment. Taking another 1,500-1,800 cars off Route 3A would alleviate much congestion and automobile emissions from the state highway.

Mr. Hedlund, pointing to the thousands who ride to work on state-of-the-art on boats in New York and Seattle, says the potential for commuter boats here has not been reached.

"Boats are proven to be an attractive way to commute and are under utilized here," he said.

When compared to the Red Line, commuter boats seem like luxury transportation.

But as Mr. Hedlund told the T, any step back regardless of the type of transportation would irk commuters.

"They (MBTA) can't tell me if the Red Line suddenly had slower, more uncomfortable trains, they wouldn't hear about it," he said.

Here at the Journal, we heartily endorse a multi-modal solution to the transportation problems in the area.

The $200,000 from the state's deficiency budget to be used for design work for commuter boat improvements is great news.

Maybe down the road, expanded service could provide enough business to keep rival boat companies viable, reducing or even eliminating the need for subsidies.

I am not 'just a girl in a wheelchair'

To the Editor:

In response to the article in the paper on July 24, I am not "just a girl in a wheelchair." I am Kara Johansen, a person with dignity and respect just like anyone else.

All of my life I have lived in Cohasset. I began my school career in kindergarten at the Osgood School and I am now a student at the high school. I am an honor roll student who attends regular, mainstream classes and plan on attending the college of my choice to study law because I am tired of fighting for my rights in my home town. I may have cerebral palsy but I am still a person with feelings and dignity like yourself, but I'm trapped in a body that won't work right.

My aids are not at school just to push me around through difficult areas. Their main job is mostly to be my voice (since I am non-verbal) and help with my personal needs. They are not part of the alleged "accommodations' from the school, but a necessity for me to live.

Besides my alleged "accessible" bathroom (which isn't really accessible by law because there are no bars and my chair won't even fit into the stall), my lift only works in the junior high area, and I am beginning my sophomore year in the high school area. What accommodations have been made?.Keep in mind I have never asked for any special accommodations, nor have I received any. I just want access to areas that everybody else in school has. If things were accessible to begin with, I wouldn't need any accommodations.

The words "accessible" and "accommodations" seem to have been misused many times. I have been in the Cohasset school system for 10 years, so when Mr. Egan and Mr. Hart say they made these alleged accommodations for my "anticipated arrival," I wonder why they are "anticipating" my arrival when I have always been here and they knew I was coming because I have been here, I am here, and I will be here.

I also feel I am entitled the right to be transported in safe buses as any able-body does. Is it fair that my bus has an empty fire extinguisher, blocked emergency exits, bald tires and brakes that are practically gone? These safety features are just as important in my bus as they are in every other bus.

I wish you could have followed me around for a day and seen all of my alleged accommodations and my bathroom. I couldn't even undress inside the stall, or shut the door for that matter, because my chair couldn't fit in the stall door. Would you like to have to do that in a public restroom or have your child have to do that? I deserve the same amount of privacy as the next person, disability or no disability.

Even though my support system for accessibility issues at the school failed me, my teachers haven't. I want to say thank you to them for treating me as Kara Johansen, the individual, not as "that girl with cerebral palsy in the wheelchair."

Greenbush towns unite to resolve train-related issues

By Carol Britton Meyer
STAFF WRITER

The town of Hingham is hoping to join with Scituate, Cohasset, Weymouth and Braintree to discuss common issues relating to proposed rail restoration along the Greenbush corridor. The right-of-way would pass through all five towns.

"We have found some common ground, particularly in the area of air quality," said Hingham Selectmen Chairman Martin Crane at Tuesday's board meeting. "It might be beneficial to pool our resources, whether in obtaining information for the Army Corps of Engineers or for mitigation purposes in the future (if the rail line is approved).

A public hearing will be held by the Corps at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 14, at Lombardo's Conference and Function Hall in Randolph to hear comments from the public regarding the proposed restoration.

Crane said the purpose of the five-town group he is proposing is to consider what is in the best interest of all the towns which would be affected by rail restoration.

Greenbush Coordinator Alexander Macmillan emphasized that the towns would work together on common issues, but separately on matters which are unique to each town, such as the layover facility proposed for Scituate.

"The group will meet to discuss areas of mutual concern in presenting a common front to the MBTA," he said.

According to Macmillan, the boards of selectmen in Scituate, Hingham and Cohasset and coordinators from Braintree and Weymouth have shown an interest in participating in a group discussion.

He said one of the group's goals is to take a look at the MBTA's Environmental Impact Statement as it deals with air quality issues as well as how it addresses other concerns.

"'Has the MBTA dealt with all of these issues?' is what we'll be asking," Macmillan said.

Crane emphasized that the coordinators will represent both sides of the train issue, for and against, to better come to an evaluation of common concerns.

> "Other communities, including some along the new Plymouth-Middleboro rail line, have not always been happy with how their mitigation agreements with the MBTA have been carried out. They've found it would have been better to work with other communities, which provides a position of strength."
> — ALEXANDER MACMILLAN, HINGHAM'S GREENBUSH COORDINATOR.

Macmillan confirmed that the group is not an effort to oppose Greenbush but an attempt to address mitigation measures and other issues.

"Other communities, including some along the new Plymouth-Middleboro rail line, have not always been happy with how their mitigation agreements with the MBTA have been carried out," Macmillan said. "They've found it would have been better to work with other communities, which provides a position of strength."

Macmillan pointed out that it is more cost-effective for towns to band together when hiring consultants to evaluate Greenbush-related issues which pertain to all the towns, instead of communities footing individual bills for those services.

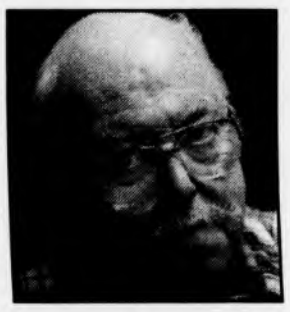
Michael Weymouth of Water Street is coordinating the activities of Concerned Citizens Against The Train, a group of individuals who are interested in the air quality issue.

They have published three advertisements relating to air quality.

"It's one issue all the towns have in common," Weymouth said. "Our goal is to make the public aware of it."

Weymouth stated that the MBTA has not included important information on air quality in its equations.

Concerned Citizens Against The Train will be distributing 5,000 packages of information to residents in towns which would be affected by the restoration of rail service to encourage them to attend the Army Corps of Engineers hearing.



"We want to convince the Corps to hold an independent study on air quality," said Weymouth. "Greenbush restoration would also change the character and nature of Hingham."

"In effect, the Environmental Protection Agency has handed us a smoking gun and is basically saying don't build any more diesel rail.

"We can't be passive. Our group is comprised of private citizens trying to make the public aware of air quality issues," he said.

Inventing the Kennedys time and time again

If I were the Kennedy family, I wouldn't let Joe play with guns

Sure as hell, he'll shoot himself in the foot, something he's already doing quite well without a firearm.

No sooner does Joe let it slip that he'd like to be governor than an ex-wife pops out of the closet railing against his application for an annulment.

Which Joe calls "Catholic gobbledygook," a phrase that's not likely to get him more votes out of Sacred Heart Parish.

That furor hadn't quite died down when word filters out of Cohasset, of all places, that brother Mike is fooling around with the babysitter.

And she's underage as well.

That's something that's only supposed to happen in places like Hull or Rockland.

Of course, Joe is not responsible for what brother Mike does — except in the pages of the Boston Herald.

I got the distinct impression from the last Herald article that Joe was at Mike's bedside all the while telling him what to do and how to do it.

The latest shot was fired into Joe's foot just the other day when his son Matthew suffered burns while he and his father were setting off fireworks at the family compound in Hyannis.

Shooting off fireworks is just as illegal in Hyannis as messing around withan underage babysitter in Cohasset.

Other than that, Joe, how's the campaign going?

In spite of all the power, the money and the women, I'm still glad I wasn't born a Kennedy.

The little black cloud that hovers over members of the family and their friends is not canceled out by the charmed life they lead.

With all the auto accidents, rape trials, divorces, drug busts and bouts with alcoholism, I've never seen where any one of them has spent a night in the can.

If you're a Kennedy and you're caught with your fingers in the cookie jar, all you have to do is lower your eyes, scuff your toe in the ground and confess.

"I recognize my own shortcomings, the faults in the conduct of my private life," said Ted Kennedy in 1991. "I realize that I alone am responsible for them, and I am the one who must confront them."

Whereupon, the electorate not only forgave him for his sins but reelected him to the Senate by a landslide three years later.

"I take responsibility for it," said Joe Kennedy after his son got second degree burns from the illicit fireworks. "We shouldn't have done it. I'm just glad Matthew is going to be OK."

We'll see how that plays with the electorate next year..

When a Kennedy fails to shoot himself in the foot, there always someone around to do it for him, whether the gun is firing real bullets or not.

Ted Kennedy shows up in a speedboat off Hyannisport with an unidentified blonde and a frantic APB goes out to all paparazzi like she was Andrew Cunanan in drag.

The USA Network produces a made-for-cable-movie based on rumors that Bobby Kennedy and Marilyn Monroe once had an affair and, despite denials, it passes untested from fiction to history.

Book author Ed Klein writes that Jackie Kennedy Onassis lost her virginity to John P. Marquand Jr. in a Paris elevator and Pocket Books publishes it as "The Love Story of Jack and Jackie Kennedy."

Enough already. The Kennedys can shoot their foots off by themselves.

Flagpole should be wooden

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my dismay at the possibility of replacing the wooden flagpole on the Town Common with an 80-foot aluminum one. Our beautiful town common was recently placed on the National Registry of Historic Places, an honor which we should not take lightly. With the recent sailing of the USS Constitution, I am reminded of the importance of preserving not only a historically-significant sailing vessel, but also the ideals and values upon which our country was founded. Preserving the authenticity of a ship, or a building or a place, helps us to preserve our past and better understand our future. Aluminum has no place on a historical building, ship or flagpole. Can you imagine replacing one of Old Ironside's masts with aluminum, simply because, (as I've been told), it looks like wood? And if we agree to an aluminum flagpole, will it then be O.K. to use aluminum siding on the Unitarian Church? It took years to restore Old Ironsides. Surely we can wait a few months to replace our flagpole with a wooden one like the original.

21st-century transportation needed

To the Editor:

It becomes clearer every day that the MBTA does not have a clue on how to run a 21st-century ferry service.

One only has to ride the Harbor Express from Fore River to Logan and Boston to experience what a ferry service should be. Modern catamarans for a smooth ride, jet propulsion for speed and minimum wake, quiet, comfortable interiors and a system of simple bow docking for easy loading and fast turnaround. All the present providers can offer are vessels based on old designs and inefficient operations. And the latest news is that $2 million is going to be put into a vessel that will only provide more of the same outmoded service.

Sen. Hedlund's position on spending available money is right on. The Commonwealth should scrap the present contract and enter into a public-private partnership with Harbor Express to build a 21st-century fleet to handle the growing commuter needs, not only from Hingham but from other locations as well. And, best of all, the vessels can be built right in Massachusetts, at Gladding-Hearn in Somerset.

This is the kind of equipment and operation that is being used all over the world; and it is time for Massachusetts to bite the bullet and get with it. Let's solve South Shore commuting the right way, with 21st-century transportation going over a route that is essentially free.

Old highway garage could get new lease on life

By Dave Rogers
CORRESPONDENT

Two Cohasset teens hope to turn a run-down, road-sign mausoleum into a lively, substance-free, dance club.

Anthony Bramblett, of 3 Grace Drive, and Jami Butman, 17 Spring St., are in the midst of a project that will turn a vacant Department of Public Works garage into a social haven for area teens.

"The school wasn't offering enough dances and we felt kids were getting kind of bored," said Butman. "We thought that this would be a good place for kids to come every weekend."

"We're developing this as an alternative to going out into the woods and smoking pot and drinking," said Bramblett.

The Cohasset High School Juniors are pitching their campaign with the assistance of the town's Drug and Alcohol Committee.

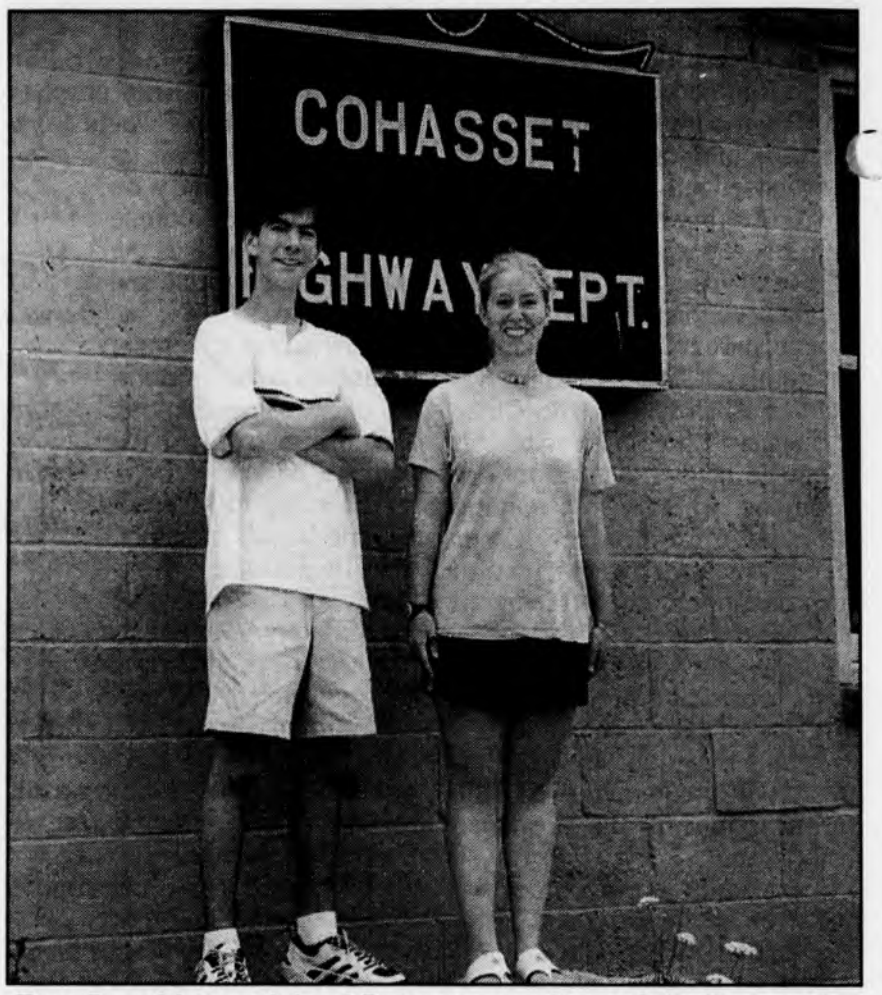
Aikens Quote

The Town Counsel has yet to approve the project, but Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan seems optimistic.

"My feeling is that the more activities you can provide for the youth that are constructive and productive, the better off the town is as a whole," said Sullivan.

Bramblett and Butman said that most of the work concerning the project will be done by teenagers and not parents.

"We want to show the community that kids actually can do something," said Butman, CHS Student Council President.



The proposed club will be different from the teen center on South Main Street, according to Butman.

"The current teen center is geared toward younger kids—6th and 7th graders," said Butman. "This is a place for older kids to go dancing and hang out."

The Garage, as it is presently named, will be cleaned out by the DPW for Sept. 1, according to Bramblett. Bramblett is counting on private donations, fund raising and (eventually) the club's revenue to pay for expenses. The two teens are also hoping for volunteer help from the community.

Although the Garage is currently littered with sign poles, tin cans and other debris, Butman and Bramblett are aiming to open the club by early next Spring.

A dance will be held Aug. 22 at Town Hall to support the Garage Project.

Tony Bramblett and Jami Butman, members of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, would like to turn the old highway garage into a teen dance club.

Parents asked to commit to C.A.S.A.

The Drug and Alcohol Awareness Committee with the support of the police, the Cohasset schools and the selectmen will mail an informational brochure to the parents of children in grades 6 through 12 entitled C.A.S.A. (Cohasset Against Substance Abuse).

C.A.S.A. was formerly entitled Safe Homes. In the past Safe Homes helped parents network a safe home environment. The need to reinstate a support network has become evident because of the presence of alcohol and drugs among our youth. Parents are concerned about the alarming increase in alcohol and drug use among our youth, and social acceptability of this use. Communicating and networking among parents has been proven to be effective in the past under Safe Homes. All parents of children in grades 6 through 12 are asked to participate in this program by taking a stand and by showing your concern for the health and well-being of young people.

Please read and fill out a form, available at town hall. Be sure to check off the box at the bottom and mail it back before August 31. Forms can be mailed to town hall/attn. the drug & alcohol committee. A booklet with the names of the participants will be mailed out in the fall to all parents with children in grades 6 through 12. Signing this form will be our first stand in making a commitment against substance abuse.

COHASSET MARINER

Summer fun abounds at the Cohasset Sailing Club

By Mark McElhinney
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Nestled away on Government Island lies an invaluable amenity for the residents of Cohasset which binds this community firmly together. The Cohasset Sailing Club provides recreation, training and fun to both adults and, in particular, juveniles. Legislated in the club's by-laws of 1960 is its basic purpose, "to educate and train citizens of Cohasset, particularly the young, in seamanship and to develop in them qualities of self-reliance and to promote their health and well-being."

One point of historical interest is the club's connection to Minot's Light. The granite blocks were constructed on land one level at a time, then transported to the spot where the lighthouse now stands. There is a replica of the top of the 85-foot structure beside the clubhouse. The light was fueled by whale oil, and there is an explanation for its blink, which has a pattern of 1, 4, 3, representing the message I Love You.

Co-founder Herb Towle can be proud to survey the club that he helped form and see the many advances that have been made since the year of inception in 1960.

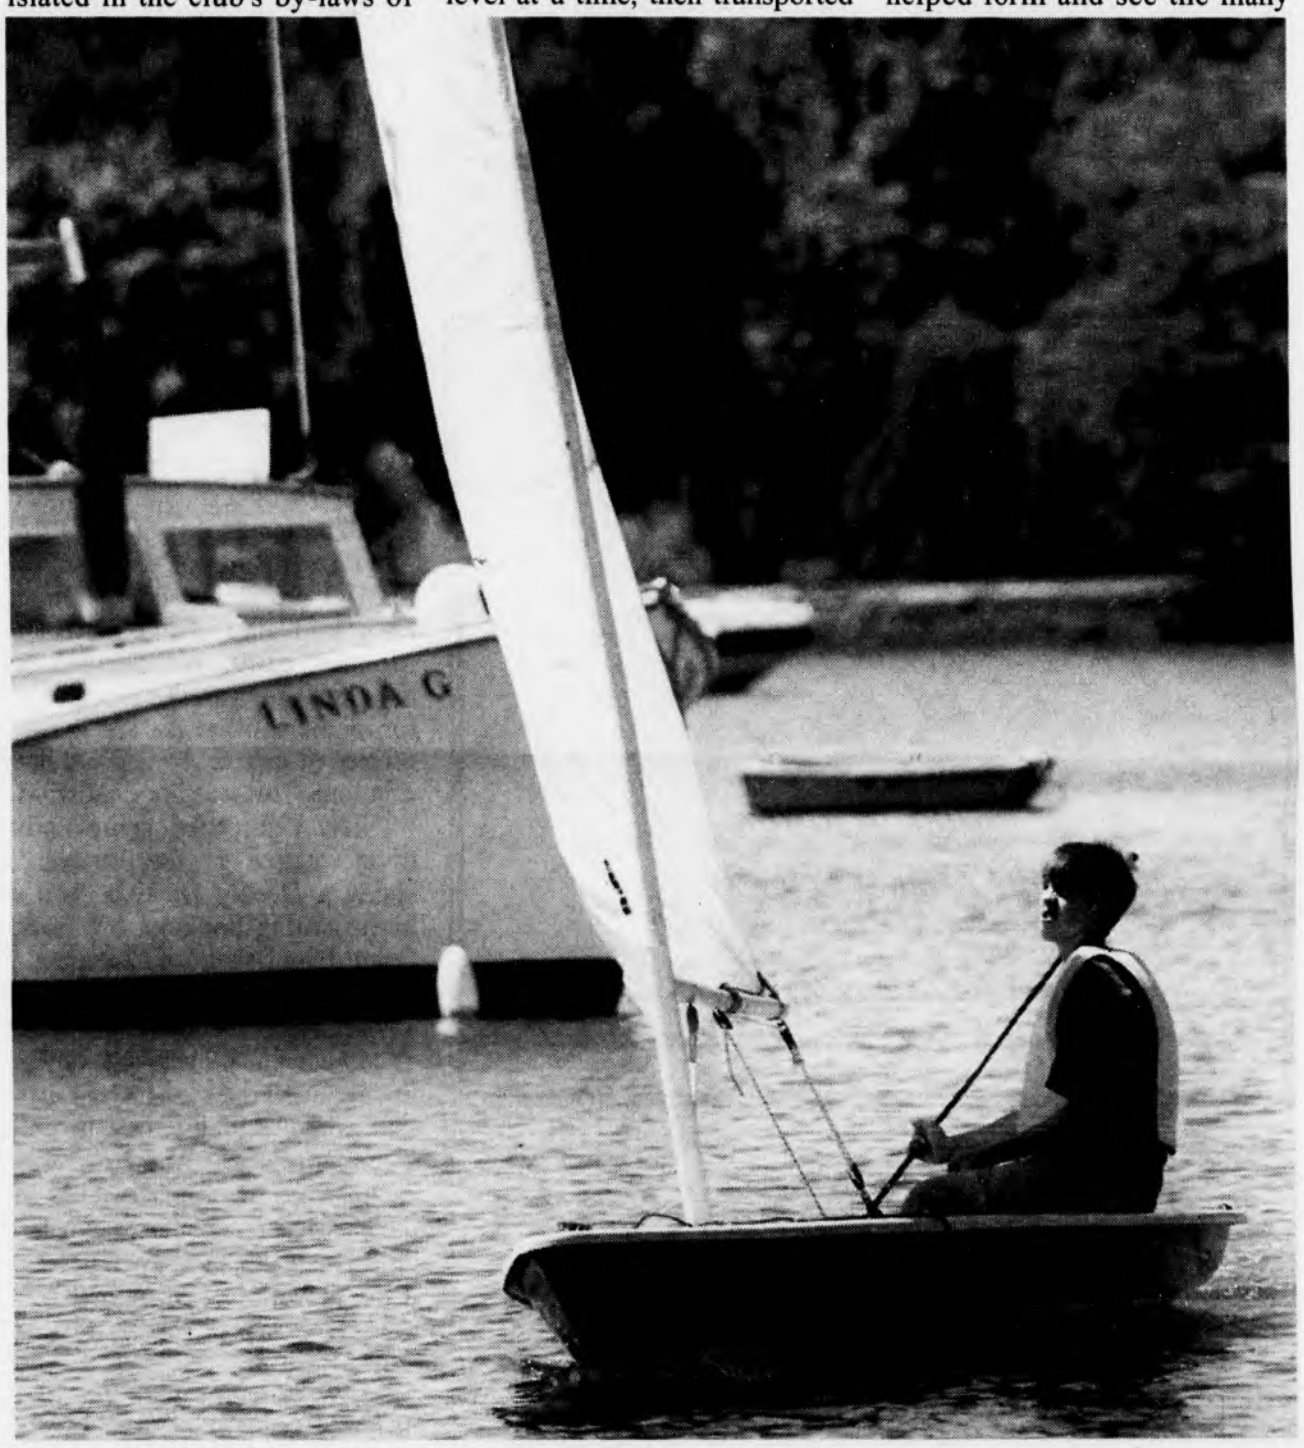
"In 1955," the founding father recollects, "Mrs. Stanton asked me to join the recreation department, and seeing the need to fill this void, other residents and I went to a town meeting to get permission to start the club." With the permission of the town, land on the east end of Government Island was granted, housing only a small brick shed. "The townspeople and I set about generating funds to buy equipment, raising $4,800 which paid for five sailboats."

In time to come, an anonymous donor would pay for the construction of the clubhouse, and it would be named after The Rev. Ed Atkinson. From the beginning, the CSC had one head instructor and two assistants, with 125 children joining in the first year. The membership of the club now has expanded to 250, boasting a fleet of two 420's, two Lasers, one Flying Scot, six Turnabouts and 10 Mercuries.

Sitting on the deck of the clubhouse, overlooking the calm waters being challenged by the determination of the novice seafarers, Herb spoke of an individual from Beverly who found the club's offer to be the best deal in the Mass Bay area. The stipulations to joining are that prospective applicants must be either residents or summer residents of the town and be at least 10 years of age. A family charge of $100 is mandatory plus an additional $85 for the junior training program, lasting 10 weeks.

Herb does not take all the credit as there have been many involved in the club's development, once telling Joe Lee, "I'm the father of this club but you're the grandfather." Lee is the mentor of sailing lessons on the Charles River for the nominal sum of $1 per year.

Lyn Congdon Previte, formerly social director, recently promoted to vice-commodore, has been associated with CSC since her early youth. Indeed, she comes from a strong pedigree of sailing, her father being an accomplished seaman having the Ray Congdon Trophy named in his honor.



Her enthusiasm for the sport is evident, "I can remember doing this since I was 3 or 4. What the training program offers young people is learning about the tides and winds and being able to cope with these elements competently. We think it is very important to utilize this natural resource, and not to waste it. What better way for kids to spend their free time? We want to instill, primarily, a love of sailing as well as prepare them for competition."

An aspect that is important to the club is competition, both within the club and competing against other clubs, illustrated by the full calendar til the end of the season in August. On Sunday nights, the Stanton Series pitches parents and children against each other, and through Aug. 25 there will be a women's sailing program costing $160 for the eight-week session. It is open to the general public and is determined on a first-come, first-served basis. Experience is preferred as the course is designed to sharpen sailing skills given by the world class sailor Betsy Allison.

Lyn stresses that the sailing club performs a vital function in the community, with all of the staff volunteering their efforts for free, except the instructors who are paid. "We are really lucky with a great staff here, because it's so important to have people who can create an interest for the kids. The instructors have a great relationship with them. We pay the instructors for their work, but on our pay they won't be able to retire," she adds in jest.

Much of the necessary finance is generated by fund-raisers in order to purchase new equipment. Lyn says, "we'll do anything to raise much-needed funds, operating on a hand-shak-

Gold rush comes to an end at 1997 Bay State Games

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

With the conclusion of the six-on-six soccer championships last weekend in Medford, the 21st version of the popular Bay State Games has come to a close, but not before some impressive hardware made it's way back down Route 93 to the South Shore.

One of the bigger winners was a budding gymnast from Abington by the name of Scott Viafore who dominated the junior competition in pulling a gold in the vault, second place finishes in the high bar and all-around competitions and a third place medal on the rings.

Also making the grade from Abington was James Rooney, a 17-year-old who took home the gold in the scholastic shot put competition.

Rockland hockey wonder kid Michael Casagrande continued to burn up the ice, including scoring two goals and three assists against the team from the Northeast.

Other winners were Timothy Baker, who took a second place in the compound release & scope and a fifth place finish in the men's open hammer throw for Brian Doherty.

On the same line as Casagrande for Jim Reynolds' Southeast squad was Hanover baseball and hockey star Greg Carr, who performed well in the tourney.

Also making Hanover proud was the high school synchronized swimming duo Allison Crosby and Anne Miller, who took ninth in the scholastic team competition and fifth in the duet.

Before the games, Hanover wrestler Bill Dunn said he was physically ready and mentally prepared to move into the upper reaches of the 135lb class at the games this year.

Dunn more than backed up his actions by taking a third lace finish in his second year as a participant in the games.

Wrestling was also big in Cohasset, as Nathan Caldwell took fifth place in the open heavyweight class and Craig Sheerin earned a bronze in the scholastic 95lb division.

Not to be left out, Duxbury came up with three gold medal efforts, including a daily double from 15-year-old L. Bates Gregory, who won the 1m and the 3m scholastic diving competitions.

Joining her in the winner's circle were Brian Mulligan, a first in 1m diving and a second in the 3m and 16-year-old Julie Spolidoro, who took top prize in the girls scholastic 3,000m run.

Also standing out for their home town were Boston College forward Mickey Curley in helping his Coastal team to victory with 23 points against the Southeast squad and lacrosse player Ian Franke, who scored four goals in the tournament.

The Bay State Summer Games is presented by the Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation, which promotes personal development, education, physical fitness, teamwork and mutual respect through amateur athletic competitions, prograns and Olympic-style events.

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

Human nature can be pretty funny sometimes. This week was one of those times. Tuesday, a young gentleman came into the store and after selecting a few items spoke up, inquiring about whether we had heard about the big bass. Immediately, the store fell quiet and all ears were his, as if in the E.F. Hutton commercial. He continued on that he had heard a huge striper had been caught down off Marshfield, weighing more than 80 pounds. I looked at the big striper hanging over the door and commented that the bass would be twice the size of the 46-pound mount! Then everybody fell into a chatter, marveling at how the stripers had come back and about how the old three-way-tie record had finally been broken.

Later that same day, two other customers inquired about the new world-record bass. Nope, we hadn't any details. Then we got a phone call from a person seeking information. He stated he had been calling every bait and tackle shop in Southeastern Massachusetts to get information on where the big striper had been weighed and where it was now. After we told him we had no information, he related how Bill Bois over at the North River store had received more than 40 phone calls about this mythic fish.

The next morning, a local painter (and frequent angler) burst through the door, asking what was the story on the huge striper he had been hearing about the last day and a half. He had to know. Haven't heard anything reliable, we told him. Two days later, people were still casually asking about the now 86-inch fish.

Sounds like a tale about the fish that wasn't, caught by the fisherman that wasn't, and it wasn't down off Marshfield. The record-catching rod and reel wasn't and apparently, the bait wasn't either. The great fish wasn't weighed in at a tackle shop that wasn't and it wasn't photographed. But the story WAS, and was fun for a while.

Now for fish that were.

Big fish honors went to Jim Klix and his able mate Hobbes. Jim was overnighting alongside a ledge east of Cohasset (which shall remain nameless at his request), drifting fresh pogie chunks and having reasonable success catching sub legal and small keeper-size stripers. After several hours of releasing small ones, he decided to change his tactics and hooked on a whole pogie. The change produced a striper that taped at 52 inches and weighed just over 40 pounds. That's a nice fish that was.

Don Schneider is quietly having a superb summer of bass fishing. Every day in the late afternoon, Don picks up a couple fresh pogies or a vacpak of three frozen pogies and sets out to fish his favorite spots along the shore. Invariably when asked the next day, he was into the fish, often getting a keeper, rarely getting skunked. Recently, he admitted he found someone else fishing his favorite spot. Ever-chivalrous, he matter-of-factly stated it was time to check out some n spots.

Traveled up to Kehoe's the other day to pick up some items. The parking lot at the ramp there was jammed with trucks and boat trailers. Mute testimony to the amount of fishing going on in the Boston Harbor and around the islands and outer ledges.

Alexine Daniels and Grandpa were playing in the backyard, and Alexine had a 33-incher on the line. She got it right over to the shore when the line snapped. She'll never forget that thrill. Crabs made fine bait for them. Zap and Jimmy waded into the fray this week. Zap came in the following day, had five hookups, but nothing to show for his efforts. The knot let go twice, and the line got cut three times. Sort of like a day of three-putting. Doug Cameron convinced Mom, Sue to spend a day fishing at Cunningham. Not likely he'll repeat the invite. Sue and Doug hooked up on twin stripers using frozen pogie chunks. Doug's fish was a respectable 18-pound, 14-ouncer. Sue's weighed in at 20 pounds.

Tim Sullivan was our guest for a BBQ weekend, and his flight back to Dallas didn't leave till Monday early. We decided to take him down to the Bridgwaye for dinner. What did he have? Striper of course. Never had had it before. Tim was very satisfied.

Nick Welz tried some early bonito action at the Vineyard. Using a Deadly Dick, he had a hard-running hookup at Wasque Point. Bluefish. Andy Fitzgerald of Duxbury was in to weigh his 19-pound, 15-ounce striper. When he left, he was still chirping about all the bass he had seen that day. Meanwhile up in Needham, Josh Abraham was casting into the upper reaches of the Charles. His hook was loaded with Uncle Josh's Carp Bait, and it works well. The 26-inch, 9-1/2-pound carp put up a "megafight"!

Mike Cangemi made the best of his time visiting Scituate. He caught four keepers within 20-30 minutes, fishing within 10 feet of the shore at the Glades. Mike will be regaling his friends back in Baltimore with stories about the 18- to 26-pound, 4-ounce bass he caught on 8-pound test line! Pogies pieces fooled them again. Jane Higgins caught and released her first keeper. Chris Norton kept his. The 21-pound, 10-ounce, 40-inch bass dined on mackerel chunks.Tournament time is upon us. The Beachcomber begins Aug. 1. Signup forms and T-shirts are available at the shop. The shark tournament goes this weekend. Check with the Mill Wharf for weigh-in times. The shark weigh-in is a good chance to see the behemoths of the deep up close.

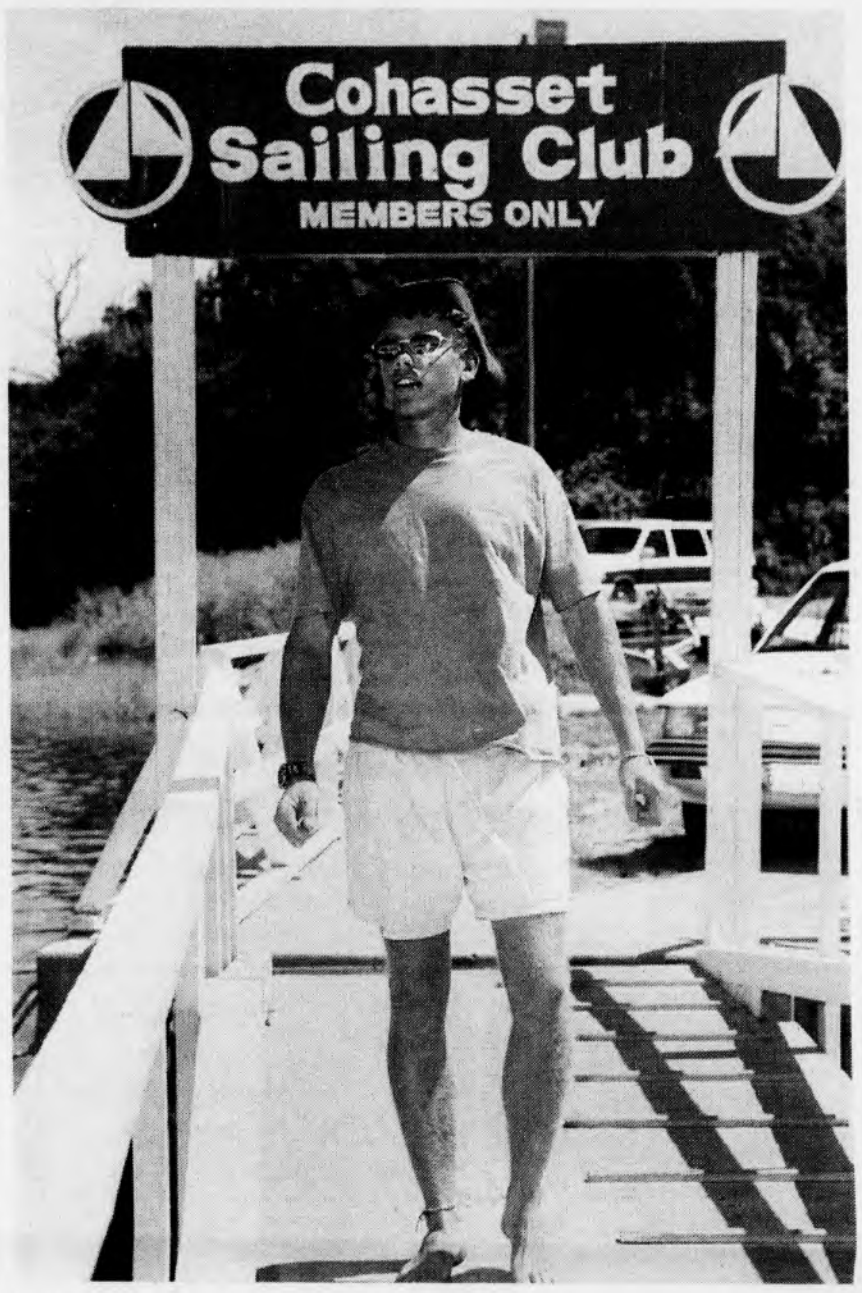
CSC clambake set for Aug. 9

The Cohasset Sailing Club is sponsoring its annual clambake for members and guests from 7 p.m. to midnight on Aug. 9.

Cohasset's own Dan Anderson will provide the clambake and "Bottom of the Fifth" will provide the entertainment for the evening.

The menu will include New England clam chowder with oyster crackers, steamers with drawn butter , native corn, sweet sausage, coleslaw, rolls, chilled watermelon and a choice of a select steamed lobster or a sirloin steak.



The cost for the dinner is $28 and participants should bring their own beverages.

The festival will be held rain or shine and attire for the evening is casual.

Tickets must be purchased no later than Aug. 7. Payment may be brought to the sailing club and left with an instructor in the office or left in Lyn Previte's front step mailbox, 38 Summer St.

Checks must indicate the number of lobster or steak dinners desired.

For more information, call Lyn at 383-9723.

ing basis. It is all worth it, because we even have families who are members of other clubs come here for the training we provide." Some past pupils of CSC have graduated on to impressive nautical careers with one being a captain on a schooner in Marblehead as well as a couple of instructors at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

On the entertainment front there will be a lobster festival Aug. 9, beginning at 6 p.m. Local caterers will serve up clambake and Lyn assures me that the main feature will be the, somewhat unfamiliar, cooler dancing. Members and friends are welcome and an invitation has been extended to members of the yacht club. There exists a healthy rivalry between the two clubs and as Herb Towle confides, "not many people know this, but when we first formed the sailing club, the yacht club members were very good supporters and they gave us a lot of encouragement."

As it comes time to leave, it is also a time that the youths finish up their sailing lessons, and one becomes conscious of the smiling faces and the sound of laughter as everyone converges on the clubhouse. For this, it is quite clear that the Cohasset Sailing Club brings so much to its inhabitants.

as temporary town administrator. He accepted with the condition that he did not want the job permanently.

The last six months roared by in a blur for McCann.

"I came in at a hectic time," McCann said. "We were working on the warrants for the annual and special town meetings, and we had the annual report to get out. It was a bit chaotic."

McCann credits the staff at town hall with getting the warrants and annual report done on time.

"We got through town meeting with no major wrinkles, even though we were working in a pressure cooker," McCann said. "The article to change the form of government dragged out a bit."

Despite the bruising schedule, McCann sounds like he wouldn't have it any other way. McCann is a veteran of town and state government and seems right at home with the challenges inherent in a town administrator's position.

McCann has worked as a town manager in Scituate and Holden; he's worked in state government; and he spent 10 years working in the hotel and hospitality business.

"I've always had an interest and love for working in local government," McCann said.

But now that he is preparing to leave, McCann has the luxury of being able to vent a little and he couldn't resist the opportunity to offer the town a little advice for the future.

"Now that the town has a town manager form of government, the selectmen have to work to make sure he's used in the proper way," McCann said. "Some peripheral tasks, such as parking clerk and procurement officer, should be delegated to other people."

McCann said he has worked in other towns that have switched to town manager. While those town officials also resisted the idea at first, none of them were sorry after the changeover happened.

With the town manager in place, McCann feels the next big task facing the town is to expand government services.

"I remember sitting in this office on my first day looking at the traffic coming into the treasurer's office," McCann said. "The only time people come to the treasurer's office is to pay a bill, but we send them to the farthest corner of the second floor. From a customer service point of view, it should be the first thing they see. Don't make it difficult to collect money."

McCann said the voters of the town are eventually going to have to step up to the plate and pay for expanded services.

"As the population ages, we'll have to examine ways to provide services to people on fixed incomes," McCann said.

But the biggest issue the town must grapple with is finding ways to regionalize services with neighboring towns, McCann said.

"The problem is we've got a provincial New England state of mind," McCann said. "But why can't we regionalize some services like plumbing inspector, electrical inspector, animal control. They don't all need duplication of staff. It works for the South Shore Regional School."

McCann said Cohasset at some point needs to sit down with Hingham and Scituate to find ways to regionalize services for efficiency and money savings. And with the imminent demise of county governments, town's really have little choice, McCann said.

But those are just a few of McCann's thoughts and they're issues for the new town manager to grapple with.

McCann did say the achievement he is most proud of was helping the town work out its differences with Scituate over clamming rights.

"I lived in Scituate but worked in Cohasset, so I was able to bridge a long-standing gap," McCann said. "This is an example of two communities working together to develop a regional program — and it worked. That's my parting shot to the town."

McCann said he is ready to cut another notch in his belt and store his experiences in Cohasset fondly in his memory.

"Cohasset has tremendous community spirit," McCann said. "We saw issues with the drug and alcohol committee pleading for — and getting — community support to restructure and reenergize."

McCann points to other issues that have rallied the community as evidence of Cohasset's spirit: the anonymous donor who has offered to pay for the flagpole on the town common; the annual arts festival; the restoration of the Greenbush line.

"I've enjoyed working with the people of the town and the day-to-day staff," McCann said. "Our state legislators are wonderful people. It's been good and it's a spirited community filled with spirited people."

Eliminating the middleman in auto insurance

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Here's one way you may be able to save on your car insurance; say "so long" to the car insurance salesman. As nice and as helpful as he may be, your insurance company pays him a percentage fee for his services. And guess who inevitably pays the charge? Sure, the insurer passes it on to you.

A handful of direct-response insurers, like Geico, Progressive Insurance, USAA and Amica Mutual, have changed that. Instead of using a salesperson, they employ trained customer-service representatives to sell policies over the phone. The result can be a less expensive sales effort that will often save customers at least 10 percent (not to mention the convenience of doing it all by phone.).

"That is the future of insurance sales," says Hal Katz, president and chief executive officer at Interstate Auto Insurance Co. in Baltimore. "The agency business will become almost obsolete."

To be sure, in the last decade or so the popularity of this practice has grown. From 1984 to 1993 direct-response companies' share of the auto-insurance market increased twice as much as that of other insurance providers.

A number of insurance companies that typically have relied upon agents are starting to develop direct-response divisions; Progressive Insurance is one such company. Katz's Auto Insurance is another that currently spends a lot of money to train its own representatives and then spends more money to advertize its new service.

While the start-up expenses are formidable, says Katz, the rewards are potentially great for the company as well as the customers. Once people have signed up and start renewing their polices through the company, the profits will outweigh the costs (under the old system, insurance agents charge a fee to renew policies as well.)

While direct-response insurance has gained popularity, it is by no means a new concept. It's been around for years, mostly catering to specific groups, like war veterans, government employees and senior citizens. Geico, which expanded its service from active and retired government employees to include all drivers decades ago, boasts that its policies tend to be 15 percent cheaper than comparable ones sold by agents.

Investment guru Warren Buffett foresaw the enormous cost advantage of direct-marketing insurance in 1951 when he bought shares of Geico for himself. And last year, his company, Berkshire Hathaway, bought out the 50 percent stake it didn't own.

Unfortunately, many direct-response companies still don't offer auto-insurance nationwide and to the general public.

The companies often narrow their market to specific groups of people in order to control their marketing costs as well as to keep their risk-pools low. USAA, one of the nation's top five largest insurers, sells auto policies just to military personnel and their families. And ITT Hartford limits its customers to members of the American Association of Retired Persons. Then there are a slew of companies that operate only within a region or a state.

So, how do you find the direct-response company that fits your profile? Consumer Reports Auto Insurance Price Service will send you a list of the 25 cheapest policies that fit your driving profile and desired coverage for a $12 fee. While Consumer Reports only offers the service to drivers in New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Washington, California and Florida, a customer representatives said the company expects to sell to Massachusetts residents in the next six months.

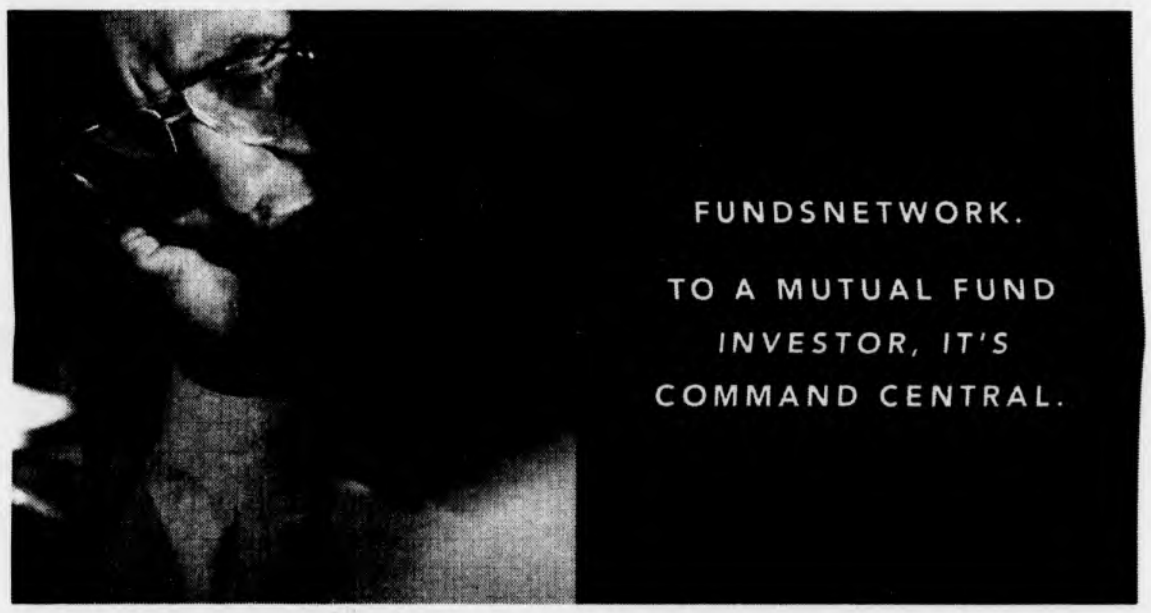
Progressive Insurance can also help out. It will tell you the price of comparable policies from other insurers when it quotes you a policy price. For example, a 26-year-old driver from New York with a 1985 Honda (and no previous financial or insurance problems and no accidents) would be offered a 6-month Progressive policy for $1,329. And she would be told that State Farm offers a similar policy for $997; Allstate offers one for $890. In this case, the direct-response company wouldn't have the best price.

And while direct-response has its advantages--the potential discount in price being the foremost--those benefits may not always outweigh what a salesperson can offer.

An independent insurance agent (someone who doesn't sell for only one company) will do the shopping around to get competitive prices from more than one insurer.

Salespeople may also be better able to explain differences in coverage and can match the correct policy to your needs (some offer a more personal approach than ordering by telephone).

"The jury is still out: Can everybody buy insurance over the phone and feel comfortable with it?" says Katz. If policy rates are 15 percent lower, everyone may learn to love it.



Tips on estate planning

Estate planning is unique to each individual or family. What may be appropriate for one person may not necessarily be appropriate for another. However, there are several things that everyone should consider when creating an estate plan including:

- Create a will- This important legal document details your last wished for your property. It names the people who will settle your estate, care for your children and may provide for who is to inherit your assets.
- Create a trust- Trusts are multi-purpose documents that you can establish at anytime to manage your property or distribute assets to beneficiaries. They are often used to avoid probate and minimize taxes.
- Name beneficiaries- Make sure that you have named a beneficiary on your retirement accounts, annuities and life insurance. This is a very easy process, and can be done by filling out a simple form.
- Identify your assets- Develop a list of all the things you own, like bank accounts, stock or real estate. Make sure to keep this list in a safe place that is accessible to your spouse or lawyer.

And many more

Now you can control all your mutual fund investing, in one convenient account.

With FundsNetwork, control means choices. You have access to over 700 four- and five-star funds.[1] And only with FundsNetwork can you get Fidelity funds without paying a transaction fee.[2] This combination of choice and value is why SmartMoney magazine rated Fidelity "#1 mutual fund provider."[3]

Control also means convenience. With FundsNetwork, you can access your account by phone or online 24 hours a day. And for online investors, there's FundEvaluator, the new research tool that lets you analyze funds according to your own needs.

To get started, call us today or visit our Web site. Soon, you'll experience what every investor wants, complete control.

Call for FundScreens, a list of highly rated funds, and take control now.

[1]Source: Morningstar data as of 6/30/97 and includes all equity and bond funds tracked by Morningstar. Highly rated funds were defined as those funds that have a 4- or 5-star overall Morningstar rating. FundsNetwork offers access to 550 4-star and 238 5-star rated funds out of 2,758 funds as of 6/30/97. Morningstar equity fund universe includes domestic stock funds (which included, but were not limited to, growth and income, and equity income objectives), international stock funds, and specialty funds. Morningstar bond fund universe includes both taxable and non-taxable bond funds. Morningstar proprietary ratings reflect historical risk-adjusted performance as of 6/30/97. The ratings are subject to change every month. Morningstar ratings are calculated from a fund's 3-, 5- and 10-year average annual returns in excess of 90-day Treasury, including loads, if appropriate, and a risk factor that reflects performance below the 90-day Treasury. Of all funds in each category, 10% rate 5-stars from Morningstar, 22.5% rate 4-stars, and 35% rate 3-stars. [2]All fees described in the funds' prospectuses still apply. Fidelity Brokerage Services, Inc. or its brokerage affiliates may be remunerated for providing certain recordkeeping and shareholder services to the fund families. Obituaries

Helen E. Callahan

Helen E. (Fee) Callahan, 78, of Cohasset and East Dennis, a retired forms analyst for the U.S. Armed Forces, died July 23 at the New England Baptist Hospital in Boston.

Mrs. Callahan was born in Boston and was a graduate of the Jeremiah H. Burke High School. She lived in Squantum for 25 years and also lived in Quincy for several years before moving to Cohasset.

Wife of the late Joseph T. Callahan, she leaves a daughter, Deborah Niessink of Cohasset and East Dennis; a sister, Alice Marquart of Squantum; four grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at the Star of the Sea Church in Squantum. Burial was in New Calvary Cemetery in Boston.

Keohane Funeral Homes of Quincy handled arrangements.

Donations may be made to The Cancer Center, New England Baptist Hospital, 125 Parker Hill Ave., Boston 02120.

Francis P. Carey

Francis P. Carey, 92, of Cohasset, a former bartender at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset, died July 22 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth following a brief illness.

He retired from tending bar in 1987 when he was in his 80s. He had previously worked for Eastern Shipping Co.

Mr. Carey was born in Boston and had been a resident of Cohasset for 60 years.

He leaves his wife, Emma M. (Schneider) Carey; a son, Frank C. Carey of Marshfield; four daughters, Patricia A. Judge of Missouri, Sigrid Carey of Humarock, Kathleen Ochs of Raynham and Margo Nowokunski of Florida; 15 grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home handled arrangements.

Donations may be made to St. Anthony's Church, 129 S. Main St., Cohasset 02025.

IT'S HAPPENING

Rose O'Connell, Elsa Libbey and Sydney Peterson at the 1996 Cohasset Sailing Club Lobsterfest.

Sailing club clambake set for Aug. 9

The Cohasset Sailing Club is sponsoring its annual clambake for members and guests from 7 p.m. to midnight on Aug. 9.

Cohasset's own Dan Anderson will provide the clambake and "Bottom of the Fifth" will provide the entertainment for the evening.

The menu will include New England clam chowder with oyster crackers, steamers with drawn butter , native corn, sweet sausage, coleslaw, rolls, chilled watermelon and a choice of a select steamed lobster or a sirloin steak.

The cost for the dinner is $28 and participants should bring their own beverages.

The festival will be held rain or shine and attire for the evening is casual.

Tickets must be purchased no later than Aug. 7. Payment may be brought to the sailing club and left with an instructor in the office or left in Lyn Previte's front step mailbox, 38 Summer St.

Checks must indicate the number of lobster or steak dinners desired.

For more information, call Lyn at 383-9723.

Choice is upon us!
Here are some highlights of what's coming!

Blackstone Valley Electric, Newport Electric and Eastern Edison will continue:

- To be your distribution or "wires" company.
- To read your meter and administer billing.
- To maintain power lines and provide safe, reliable electricity.
- To get you back in power after any storm or other emergency.

But, you will soon be able to choose the company that generates or supplies your electricity:

- In Rhode Island, it's scheduled to begin on July 1, 1998.
- In Massachusetts, it's scheduled to begin on January 1, 1998.

Dinosaur skull to visit store

Buttonwood Books & Toy[illegible] Cohasset will host an auth[illegible] reproduction of the Giga[illegible]saurus skull Thursday, Aug. [illegible] from 3 to 5 p.m. In dinosaur times, "Giggy" weighed eight tons, was 45 feet long and is believed to have been the biggest meat-eating dinosaur. This 6-foot skull, made under the supervision of the paleontologists who unearthed Giganotosaurus in Argentina, is offered through Boyds Mills Press in conjunction with the publication last fall of Dinosaur Worlds by Don Lessem. The skull will be accompanied by George the jr. paleontologist, dressed fresh from the dig, who will answer questions about this amazing dinosaur, and show his skill at making balloon dinosaurs. Call 383-2665 for more information. Join us!

The funny stuff circus

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold the first Music Circus registration for The Funny Stuff Circus Thursday, July 31. The Music Circus children's show registrations will be open to children in the playground program and the show date for The Funny Stuff Circus is Thursday, Aug. 14.

Music Circus registrations are held at the recreation office, first floor, Town Hall. On Thursday, July 31, registrations will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and again from 1 to 7 p.m. All tickets for the Music Circus are $5.25.

Lights! Camera! Action!

Kids Coastal television (KC-TV) is coming your way. Kerry Tondorf and Ilana Marks, both of Scituate, will produce and direct a "mini-movie." The movie will be the final segment of an 11-week program, which includes acting lessons (for film), studio and location shooting and editing. Acceptance to this program will be by audition only and is open to students ages 10 to 16. There will also be a junior program for children under 10.

Marks and Tondorf are looking for an exciting original children's play, preferably a mystery that could be adapted for the television screen. For more information regarding the script writing contest or the audition, please call 545-8982.

'Summer Arts at Derby' arts festival

Friday, Aug. 1, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at Derby Academy in Hingham. The arts festival is free and open to the public. There will be performances of theatre, dance and music, four galleries of art exhibits, and showings of animation and video projects. Visitors can also participate in "Art Stops: throughout the day.

Quonset huts owner irked by zoning board decision

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

Residents living near a series of Quonset huts and buildings at 430 South Main St. believe it is the ugliest structure in Cohasset.

Residents living next to the structure feel that the zoning board is not interested in eliminating the Quonset huts, but zoning board members say their hands are tied by town bylaws.

The owner of the property, Noel Collins, bought the 54,000 sq. ft. lot in 1996 with the intention of converting it from a commercial site to residential condominiums.

The property is a non-conforming use, zoned for commercial use in a primarily residential neighborhood. Yet commercial businesses have used the location for several decades.

Collins proposed tearing down the Quonset huts and building ten condominiums, but the zoning board rejected his request in Nov., 1996, citing density concerns.

Collins appealed the decision to Norfolk Superior Court

Zoning board Chairman Mark DeGiacomo said the board told Collins they would look at four units, but not 10.

In informal discussions with the conservation commission, Collins received a favorable response to constructing four units.

"The project is over and it's a shame because what could have been a win-win proposition for the developer and the community is now a lose-lose situation for everyone."

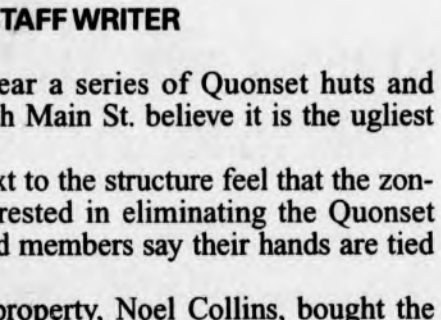
– NOEL COLLINS, PROPERTY OWNER.

But Collins said he couldn't afford to develop the property with only four units.

"The ZBA has offered four units, but I can tell you absolutely that four units is not a money maker," Collins said. "I heard from the board today (Aug. 4) and they said no to six units. They gave me indications that six units is too many."

Collins said he felt six was a nice compromise between the 10 he originally proposed and the four the zoning board offered. He said he was "stunned" that the zoning board rejected his offer.

"The project is over and it's a shame because what could have been a win-win proposition for the developer and the community is now a lose-lose situation for everyone," Collins said.



Zoning board member Barbara Power said the board told Collins it was interested in four units, but would consider six without making any promises.

"There is nothing in our bylaw that allows for multi-family housing on one lot," Power said. "He came back with three or four lots subdivided for six units. He didn't necessarily have the acreage, but here is an exemption in

Cemetery space no longer in critical condition

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

A short-term solution to Cohasset's critical lack of cemetery space is in sight, selectmen learned this week.

The next step will be to come up with a policy on pricing of the grave sites, perhaps charging more for those used to bury multiple urns or a casket and an urn.

By reconfiguring useable space, the cemetery study committee has determined there are 242 single graves available at Beechwood Cemetery, whose ancient section dates back to 1690. Plans to expand Beechwood, which is off Beechwood Street on the west side of Route 3A, would add an additional 87 graves.

"This land is available right now without spending any significant money at all," said Joseph Jerz, committee chairman.

About $15,000 to $20,000 would be needed for the expansion. The proposed new area off Doane Street would be cleaned up and re-graded. Loam would be added and the area re-seeded. The money would come from the cemetery fund.

With an average of about 50 grave sales a year, Beechwood could accommodate the town's needs until a new cemetery could be constructed, the committee said. The town's other cemetery, Woodside, which is off North Main Street, is nearly full.

Some of the graves in the reconfigured part of Beechwood would be limited to flat markers because the graves would be at right angles to existing graves, the committee said.

The committee recommends increasing the cost of a grave to $750 because of the possibility of two burials in each grave, a casket and an urn. Selectman Merle Brown said it is not unusual today for a husband and wife to have different preferences — cremation or traditional burial.

The town currently charges $525 per grave but only allows one burial per grave and does not allow any pre-sales due to lack of cemetery space.

"Now even if you have two urns, you have to have two

COHASSET'S WEEK

Town manager sworn in

Mark Haddad was sworn in as Cohasset's town manager Monday morning by Town Clerk Marion Douglas at her office. The ceremony was repeated Monday evening for the cable-TV camera with town constable Maria Plante officiating.

Haddad took all the attention in stride.

"It is nice to be here and I look forward to working with all the boards and department heads," he said.

Selectman Merle Brown took Haddad around town Monday.

Haddad said he looked forward to talking with the department heads in more detail.

Selectmen are planning a welcoming open house for Haddad at the Lightkeepers' Residence sometime after Labor Day.

Officials at train hearing

Selectman will send former selectman Peter Pratt to the Aug. 14 Army Corps of Engineers hearing on Greenbush to talk about the town's flood control project. Conservation Commissioner Michael Dick, who also sits on the Greenbush Mitigation Committee, will speak on mitigation. He and Conservation Commissioner Veneta Roebuck will address the town's conservation issues and Fire Chief Roger Lincoln will comment on safety measures, selectmen said.

Post office sewer pipe on agenda

Selectmen will consider granting a license to run a sewer pipe from the community center across Constitution Park to the post office at their Aug. 18 meeting.

"The septic system at the post office has failed, so we have to do something," project engineer Neil Murphy said.

Alternatives include going out to the street with a pump system or waiting for the sewer to be installed along Ripley Road.

Murphy said the community center is putting their service in and would share the cost.

With the expansion of the town sewer, he said it would be "silly to spend money on a new septic system at this point in time."

Committee appointments made

Selectmen appointed Jody Butman, 17 Spring St., to the Drug & Alcohol Committee and Louis Harvey, 465 King St., to the Committee on Town History this week. Thomas Gruber, 8 Pratt Court, was appointed to the Greenbush Mitigation Committee where he can provide financial expertise, Selectman Diane C. Sullivan said.

Haddad wants new computer

Town Manager Mark Haddad asked selectmen Monday for up to $2,500 for a new computer with more capacity than the existing one. He said the old computer could possibly be traded in for a printer.

Haddad said expanded capacity and a modem would enable him to access the internet to get information directly from the Massachusetts Municipal Association and Department of Revenue, for example.

Selectmen were receptive to the request and said the money could come from the town's reserve fund. They said Haddad would have to go before the computer study committee to make sure the new computer is compatible with the existing network in town hall.

Scouts to get donation

Selectmen agreed to a request from DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield to donate the portable toilet at the RTF to the Boys Scouts for their summer camp.

With new facilities at the DPW garage, the toilet is no longer needed, Selectman Merle Brown

MEETING YOUR TIE ROD ENDS

▶ When the steering linkage feels "sloppy," it is likely that the tie rod ends are at fault. These are the parts of the steering linkage that connect the rack and pinion (or the center steering link) to the steering knuckles at the front wheels. Sockets in the tie rod ends enable them to rotate when the wheels are turned. As the sockets become worn, the steering linkage becomes sloppy, making it impossible to align the front end properly. When the tie rod ends are checked for wear, all that is needed is moderate force exerted by the hands in a push-and-pull motion. On most vehicles, if this motion shows the tie rod socket to be loose, it is probably worn out and in need of replacement.

▶ If you are having trouble steering, you don't want to wait to bring your car in because the solution may be simple but the problem, when left unattended, can become more complex. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, we find solutions to nagging automotive problems and solve them because we are accurate with diagnosis and prompt with repair. We pay close attention to your requests because we want to see you here again. Our goal is to have you join our group of satisfied customers who have confidence in us to provide top-notch repair. We are the answer to your car care worries because we deliver precise, speedy service that you can rely upon. We're at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A.

Historic district is at center of Greenbush debate

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

As South Shore towns gear up for the August 14 Greenbush hearing conducted by the Army Corps of Engineers on the controversial railroad restoration project — Hingham's trump card will certainly be played. And that is the Lincoln National Register Historic District.

Located in downtown Hingham, the Lincoln District is central to arguments that at-grade train service — embraced by the MBTA as the best solution for traffic-clogged coastal communities on the South Shore — is a bad idea.

Much of the district, which preservationists point out may contain the largest number of contiguous 17th, 18th, and 19th century buildings in the country, hugs the railroad right-of-way. It also includes two national landmarks: the Old Ship Meetinghouse, built in 1681, and the Benjamin Lincoln House which dates back to 1667.

> 'It is special because people live here — the way they did centuries ago within walking distance of what they need. The train will make it less liveable, less desirable.'
> — HINGHAM SELECTMAN KATHARINE REARDON.

"The historic district is not a museum, it is not just a collection of artifacts. It's a living organism," said Hingham Selectman Katharine Reardon.

"It is special because people live here — the way they did centuries ago within walking distance of what they need. The train will make it less liveable, less desirable," she said.

The Army Corps has come late to the table on which the project has been studied and discussed for more than a decade. Restoration of the Greenbush line triggered Corps involvement because construction will involve the filling of more than five acres of wetlands under federal jurisdiction.

The Army Corps' primary role involves granting permits when wetlands and waterways are involved. It also has responsibility over historic resources — meaning properties on or eligible for national register listing — because they could be adversely affected by the project.

The hearing gets underway at 7 p.m. at Lombardo's function hall off Route 128 in Randolph. Sign in begins at 5:30 p.m.

The prime mover behind Hingham's objections to at-grade rail is Alexander Macmillan, a lawyer and life-long Hingham resident, who is paid by town to head its efforts to mitigate the effects of the train with the MBTA.

Macmillan, former chairman of the Hingham Historical Commission, has never wavered in his position that restoring the train, at-grade through Hingham's antique Lincoln district, is tantamount to taking a wrecking ball to a national treasure.

With the train, originally built in 1849 (as much as a century and a half after some of the homes were constructed), rumbling by just feet from their doors, property owners along North and South Streets let their homes fall into disrepair, he said. The train stopped running in 1959 (about the time the Southeast Expressway opened) and over the years, people bought and restored property along the tracks. A real fear is that history will repeat itself.

"The train which will pass by 24 times a day will impact scores of property owners," Macmillan said. Market values will be much affected and the incentive and motivation homeowners have to maintain their property could take a nose dive, he said.

Lead federal agency

The Army Corps, as the lead federal agency in the project, assumes responsibility to take all care to protect historic resources. This role would have been held by the Federal Transit Administration (FTA), but that agency no longer has oversight because Greenbush is being paid for entirely with state dollars. Hingham contends that by segmenting Greenbush from the other two Old Colony lines, which are being substantially paid for with federal grant money, the MBTA is trying to skirt federal environmental laws under Section 4f of the transportation act. Section 4f says federal money can't be used for a project that would adversely impact a historic resource if there is a "prudent and feasible alternative." The "segmentation" issue is the subject of a lawsuit the town has launched to stop Greenbush, which is slated to start service in 2001.

Nevertheless, Hingham has great hope that fresh oversight of the Army Corps will protect the Lincoln district.

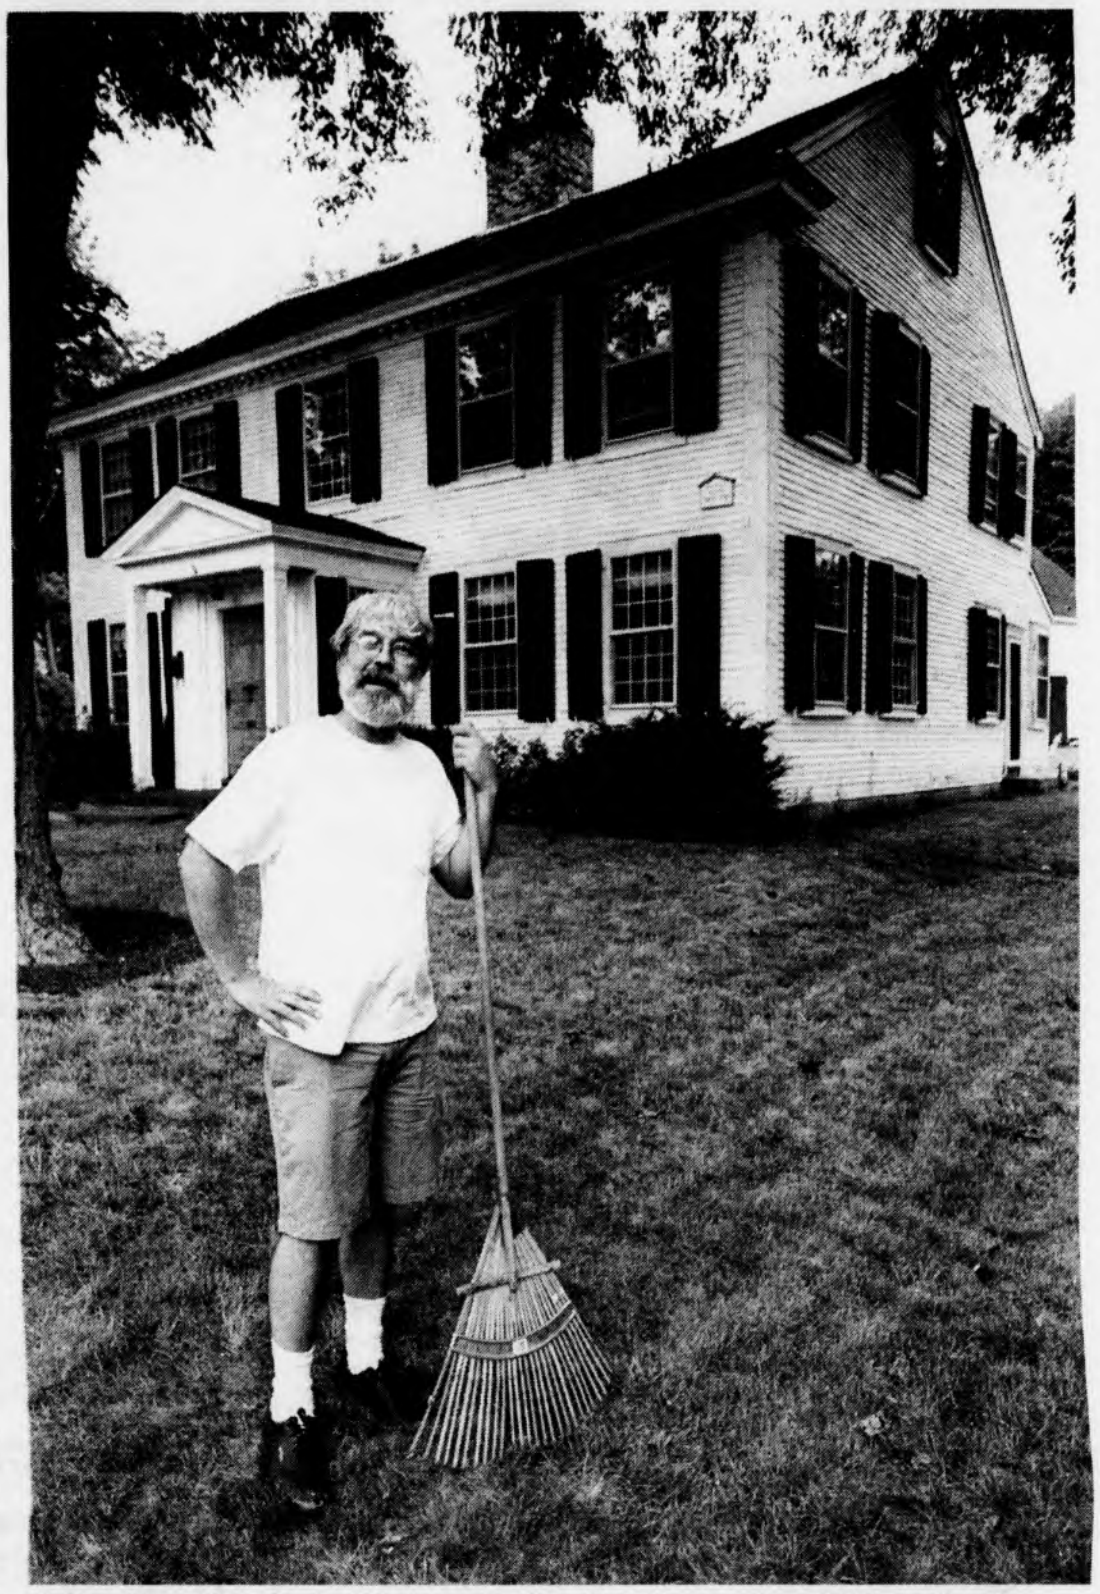
"The Army Corps is like a relief pitcher who has come in late in the day and hasn't watched the game," Macmillan said.

In order to issue a permit, the Army Corps makes a determination that the project is not contrary to the public interest, said Karen Adams, chief of the Corps' permit and information sector. The Corps will address what the impacts are to the National Register district and see if any can be avoided or mitigated.

Tunnel under the Square

Faced with costly delays and with the Plymouth and Middleboro lines (the other two legs of the Old Colony train project) ready to roll next month, Macmillan hopes the T will agree to build a tunnel under Hingham Square. The T , which says a tunnel will add 45 percent to the cost of the $215 million project, has studied the tunnel but publicly rejects it as much too expensive.

Andrew Brennan, MBTA environmental manager, said under the Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act, the tunnel will be looked at as a possible mitigation option. He explained that the MBTA, the Massachusetts Historical Commission, the Army Corps, the National Advisory Council on Historic Preservation and the towns along the line will be at the table as the process moves forward.



"We're eager to get on with the process," Brennan said.

But he questions whether the tunnel would avoid impacts of the train or create new impacts.

"Is it even feasible? There are a lot of buildings with no foundations and the vibration impacts underground are greater than at the surface," he said.

The tunnel — which would eliminate

Army Corps train hearing is August 14

By Carol Britton Meyer

Both proponents and opponents of the proposed restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad will have another opportunity to air their views.

The Army Corps of Engineers (ACE), the lead federal agency involved in reviewing the MBTA's proposal to restore service along the former railroad line, will hold a public hearing Thursday, Aug. 14, at 7 p.m. at Lombardo's Conference and Function Hall, 6 Billings St., Randolph. Signs will be posted giving directions to the meeting room.

"The purpose of the hearing is for the Corps to gain additional information in order to be sure we understand what the issues are which are generating public concern," said Karen Adams, chief of the permits and enforcement sector of the Corps.

Adams said the Corps is expecting more than 300 people to attend.

"We're prepared for a big crowd just in case," she said. "We've been told the room where the meeting is taking place can hold 1,000 people."

Sign-in for the hearing will begin at 5:30 p.m., and those intending to speak should sign-up to do so.

"We are asking people to sign in as they arrive to get a feel for the number of people who wish to speak," Adams said.

"From that list we'll put together the order of speakers," she said. "Federal, state and local officials are allowed to speak first."

Adams said a time limit will be imposed depending on how many individuals have signed up to speak.

"The limit will probably be around three minutes," she said. The hearing could also be continued to another night if necessary.

Lt. Col. Michael W. Pratt, ACE district engineer, will start off the meeting with introductions. Speakers will be called upon, in the order in which they registered, following comments from public officials and a brief overview of the project by the MBTA.

At the hearing, a stenographer will record oral comments made by individuals. An additional stenographer will take remarks in the lobby from people who may be uncomfortable speaking in public or who don't want to wait to speak because of time constraints.

Adams said the Corps could ask the MBTA to provide specific pieces of information to answer any questions it might have.

"The MBTA would then be required to provide information for review by the corps," she said. "And we would have to be satisfied with that information."

The Corps has the power to either issue or deny the MBTA a permit to move ahead with the Greenbush restoration plan.

"In order to issue a permit, we would have to make a determination that the project is not contrary to the public interest," Adams said.

"If the MBTA is denied a permit, the transit authority could redesign the project and reapply," she said.

The Army Corps of Engineers is expected to take several months to make a decision.

Written comments about the project will also be accepted until Sunday, Aug. 24.

"Any comments we have already received are part of the public record and don't need to be resubmitted," Adams said.

Written comments should be sent to Ted Lento at the New England Division, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Road, Waltham 02254-9149. For further information, call Lento at (617) 647-8863.

five grade crossings by running under much of the Lincoln district including the town's economically healthy Square — is supported by Hingham selectmen and the Citizens Advisory Committee, as the best alternative for Hingham if the train does come.

The Citizens Advisory Committee, appointed by the state Secretary of Environmental Affairs to review the MBTA's environmental feasibility study on the project, is made up of representatives from all towns along the Greenbush corridor.

Jeff Born, who lives in the Winkworth Allen Gay House (circa 1700) on South Street, says living in the Lincoln District is "fabulous."

"My daughter and I counted that half the houses on South Street were built before the Revolutionary War," he said. "You have to pay money to find stuff like this (in other places) and we live here."

552 historic listings

The history of the Lincoln National Register Historic District is much younger than its 552 listings of historical and architectural significance including most of the town's civic, religious and commercial buildings.

The National Historic Preservation Act, which passed in 1966, included the establishment of the National Register. The National Register is largely honorific. Property owners often place a plaque on their home touting its listing. A listing does not restrict the property owner from making changes to their home as is the case with properties included in local historic districts established under state law.

The process of being accepted for listing on the National Register takes about two years. Nominated for inclusion on the National Register in 1990, the Lincoln District includes North and South Streets from West Street to the harbor, lower Main Street from Hingham Centre to Hingham Square, Cottage Street, Ship Street, Miles Road and portions of Lincoln Street and Fearing Road.

According to the nomination form submitted by the town and endorsed by the Massachusetts Historical Commission, the architecture of the built environment in the Lincoln Historic District is significant for three reasons:

- the existence of numerous period, institutional, public, commercial and private buildings in an excellent state of preservation;
- the survival of 12, 17th-century residences and the large number of 18th and 19th century houses;
- the numerous characteristic examples representing almost the whole galaxy of New England architectural styles which populate the district's historic streetscapes.

Hingham resident John P. Richardson, a local conservationist, is adamant that the train will destroy Hingham's historic character.

In a June letter to The Hingham Journal, Richardson said, "always the potential enemy to the nationally significant architecture was the railroad."

He said the survival of unbroken miles of contiguous wood-framed architecture spanning four centuries is unique to Plymouth County. He pointed out that Plymouth, Weymouth and Scituate have very little surviving old architecture.

"As the nation ages, Hingham's architectural resource will increase nationally in importance. I predict Hingham will, in time, emerge as one of the major old architectural village complexes in the United States," he wrote.

Selectman Katharine Reardon said if at-grade rail comes through, change will be insidious.

"It will happen over time. As the downtown becomes a little less desirable for people to come to, less free for people to let their children come and go — the fabric will start to disintegrate," she said.

"When you add that there are so few of these kind of places — it's very fragile," Reardon said.

Teens work to make in-line skating park a reality

By Dave Rogers
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset skateboarders are diligently trying to remove the "slacker" label many people attach to them as they campaign for the construction of a town skate-park.

"People get mad at you if you skate on their stuff because they're liable if you get hurt," said Greg O'Keefe, a 15-year-old rollerblading sophomore at Cohasset High School. "This will be a place for kids to go where they don't have to worry about the police."

O'Keefe and other skaters are hoping to build their park in the town-owned "sand pits" on North Main Street next to the Barnes Little League Field.

The skateboarders will have to get the selectmen's permission before the land could be used to construct a skating park.

Christine Murphy, a global account manager for Xerox, has been holding meetings for area skateboarders, rollerbladers and BMX bikers at her 38 Cedar Acres Lane home. Murphy, who says the skate-park is the dream of her 15 year-old son Evan, believes the teens are sincere in their effort to build the park and are not the "destructive, rude or abusive" slackers some people believe them to be.

Murphy wants all the actual leg-work to be done by the teens themselves and decided to lend her "organizational expertise" only to facilitate their cause.

"My goal with this is two-fold," said Murphy. "First, I want to make (the skate-park) happen, but also I want to show them how to function as a 'high performance work-team.' This will help them when they get into the workplace."

"There has been very little parental involvement at all. (The skaters) got the insurance information, they got the bids, they've talked to (town officials), they went out and found the location. I will guide them, but I will not do the grunt work for them."

Jim Dedes, whose son Alex is a skateboarder, has started to do some "grunt work." Dedes, an environmental consultant, has begun investigating the location where the skate-park may be built.

"It's an excellent location," said Dedes. "The Little League field is right there as well as the town pool. There's also plenty of land to build a skate-park. Skateboarding is a neat sport and I'd like to help this park get built."

The skaters hope the park will bring an end to antagonistic relations with local merchants and law enforcement.

"The merchants don't like it when we're hanging out in front of their stores," said B.J. Butman, 17 Spring St. "They think we scare off customers. I think the cops are sick of chasing us around and telling us to leave. I'm almost positive that they would be in support of us having a place to go."

Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan said it would definitely be beneficial for the town to have a skate-park.

"We get a lot of complaints from merchants in the Tedeschi Plaza area and the Stop & Shop area about skateboarders," said Noonan. "I think it would be great for them to have a place to go and do their tricks."

Cemetery space no longer in critical condition

lots," committee member Glenn Pratt said.

Half the money from selling graves goes into perpetual care and the rest can be used for capital programs, he explained.

The committee, whose charge is to find a 25-year solution to the town's lack of cemetery space, is also looking at sites to build a new cemetery.

Acreage off Woodside, which could be connected by a small bridge, is a possibility. The committee plans to walk the site when the foliage and undergrowth dies off in the fall.

Town-owned land behind Stop & Shop near Red Fox Lane is still on the table but the site has access problems.

The committee is also considering the former Webb-Norfolk Conveyor site on Route 3A across from Atlantic Bagel. The town would have to buy the property, which is currently for sale. Jerz said perhaps the town could buy the site and sell half to offset the cost.

The gravel pitts off North Main Street behind the Little League field as a possible cemetery site is also being looked at.

"The goal of this committee is to never have another one (committee)," Jerz said. "Our next proposal is to have a solution that will go way into the future."

Selectmen decided to go ahead with the reconfiguration of graves at Beechwood and to appoint a subcommittee to study pricing of graves. They will also ask DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield to see if his department can do the re-grading and landscaping work needed for the Beechwood expansion.

The cemetery committee also suggested the town buy computer software for mapping of graves. Members suggested a good Eagle Scout or Cohasset High senior project would be to do an inventory of all the stones at Beechwood.

Selectman Brown also said the plantings in the cemetery can be a problem.

"The problem is people plant next to stones and then people leave and you end up with monstrous trees," he said.

Pratt said under the town's cemetery regulations, the town can go in an take down shrubs or trees if necessary.

Quonset huts owner irked by zoning board decision

our bylaws that states if you have multiple structures on a lot you can subdivide it."

Now Collins has decided to cut his losses and sell the property. He said he has a buyer interested in converting the interior of the Quonset huts to commercial condominiums. The exterior would remain the same.

"I have two parties that each want to operate their businesses from the Quonset structures," Collins said. "But the outside won't change a bit. This neighborhood is doomed forever to live with these buildings."

Collins added that the lawsuit in Norfolk Superior Court still exists, "but its days are numbered."

Neighbors who live next to the structure were livid that the zoning board rejected six units.

"I just don't understand the objections," said Sandy Pratt. "The planning board and the conservation commission liked the plan. We're at the end of town near the Scituate line and I don't think they (zoning board members) care."

But DeGiacomo said nothing could be further from the truth. DeGiacomo said the zoning board's hands are tied by town bylaws.

"From the beginning he has been saying that 10 residences are better than what's there now," DeGiacomo said. "We don't dispute that residences are better, but the bylaw doesn't permit the number he's asking for — period."

DeGiacomo said the zoning board was already stretching the bylaw to its limit by entertaining discussions about four units.

Pratt said she has lived next to the Quonset huts for 20 years and put up with all kinds of commercial businesses.

"We have a two-family house and its difficult to rent the other apartment with those things next door. I pay very high taxes to be across the street from this."

Pratt also rejected the zoning boards objections because of density. She said a commercial business would add even more density to the area than six condominiums.

Corrinne Cahill, 412 South Main St., was even more disappointed than Pratt.

"I feel the ZBA is not listening to our concerns at all," Cahill said. "I've been fighting this since 1959 when father of the current chairman, Mark DeGiacomo, rejected our pleas. Now we're before the son and the problem is still not resolved."

DeGiacomo responded that his father wasn't even on the appeals board in 1959.

Cahill said the zoning board is rejecting a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to convert the property from a non-conforming use to a conforming use.

"Every other board wants this project and the ZBA is the only board obstructing it," Cahill said.

Cahill sympathized with Collins' plight, conceding that four units was just not economically feasible.

"The ZBA refuses to listen—they don't hear us or they don't care about us," Cahill said. "It all comes down to dollars and cents. Who is going to build four units and expect to turn a profit? No one."

But DeGiacomo countered that the board cares enough to allow four units in an area zoned for one. He pointed out that it was the zoning board that urged Collins to try to change the bylaw at town meeting.

The planning board tried to rezone the site earlier this year so Collins could build 10 condominiums, but voters at the 19[illegible] spring town meeting rejected the proposal. Members of the conservation commission said the change in bylaws would have stripped them of their jurisdiction over the nearby flood plain.

"It's ridiculous for anyone to say we don't care for the neighbors," DeGiacomo said. "I wish someone would come along and either change the bylaw or propose a plan that lives within the current bylaw. But we're not town meeting and we're not the legislative body. We interpret the law."

Cahill said she plans to fight any business that tries to operate a commercial business at the location.

"There is a buyer interested in the property who is a sandblaster," Cahill said. "Can you imagine sandblasting in a residential neighborhood. We will fight any commercial use. This is a residential area and we pay big taxes. The zoning board has not heard the last of us."

Water plant on 24 hours

The Cohasset Water Treatment Plant is now running 24 hours a day to ensure that the Town of Cohasset has sufficient fire reserve in the water storage tank at all times during this extended drought.

"We are now running the plant 24 hours a day," said water commissioner chairman Robert Kasameyer, "which will allow us to keep sufficient fire reserve in the tank at all times. We started this 24 hour operation on Friday, Aug. 1, and expect to run 24 hours a day through Labor Day, when the drought hopefully will end.

"Because of the drought, water demand has been unusually high during most of every day," Kasameyer said. "Since we do not have adequate storage capacity in the distribution system, this high demand has caused the water levels in the tank to dip too low at night and during most of the day — just about every day — this summer."

Daily water demand this summer has ranged on most days between 1.1 and 1.5 million gallons of water a day, which is 2-3 times more than the average daily demand of about 500,000 gallons during the rest of the year. To meet this very heavy demand, the plant has been running 12-18 hours a day already.

"Running the plant 24 hours a day will cost us about $12,000 more for extra labor costs during August," Kasameyer said. "However, the water commissioners feel that since this extended drought, the worst since 1949, has significantly increased water demand and also increases the risk of fires, that we owe it to the people of Cohasset to do whatever we can to fully protect public safety. We can afford this cost, because of the increased usage."

Kasameyer cautioned, however, that running the plant at 24 hours was not a long-term substitute for the second water tank.

"This is just a temporary measure. It would be uneconomical in the long run to run 24 hours a day, especially since the second tank would provide more fire reserve capacity overall without the higher operating costs," he said.

Kids pet show

The children's section of the Paul Pratt Library will sponsor a Pet Show on Cohasset Common on Thursday, Aug. 21 from 10 a.m. to noon. Children may pick up a registration form for their pet or pets in the children's room at the Library beginning on Aug. 1. Each pet to be shown — dog, cat, bird, duck, rabbit, iguana, tortoise, et al. — must be registered. Ribbons and prizes will be awarded in special categories. Refershments will be provided by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library. Watch for more news about the pet show in this column.

VENICE: A CITY OF DREAMS

There was a time when Italian filmmakers reigned supreme, and the "floating city" was one of the most popular backdrops of the silver screen. The magic is still there. Venice can be a dream destination for travelers seeking breathtaking beauty, stunning historical sights, incomparable architecture, and a European ambiance unlike any other. The 100-plus canals, crisscrossed by more than 400 bridges, still stitch together a city teeming with shops, cafes, galleries, museums and palaces. The best way to see the city is by strolling down its winding streets or riding a gondola around its canals. The best time to visit is autumn or spring to avoid the crowds. A 45-minute gondola ride will cost $74 for two-four people. Take a ride on the Vaporetto (water bus) to the island of Murano. There you can watch the world-renowned Murano glass blowers at work and view some of the finest pieces produced over the last five centuries.

GRADUATING WITH HONORS

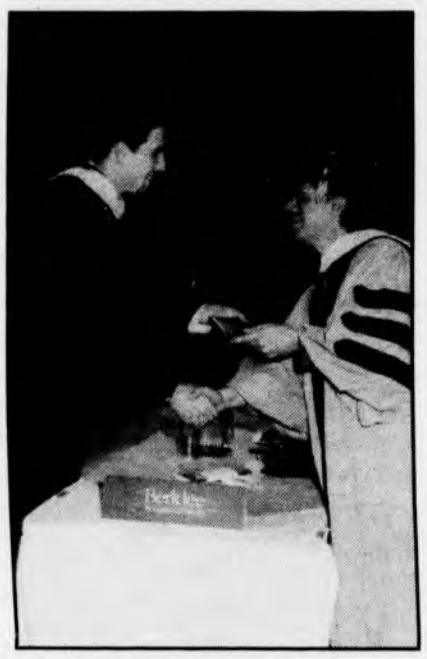
We honor Kristin Jeanne Grassey of 20 Ledge Way this week, she received a bachelor of arts degree from Wake Forest University during commencement exercises May 19. With honors of course! Kristin will be entering the education world, she has accepted a job teaching second grade in Winston Salem, N.C. How lucky those second grade students are, Kristin is certainly a dedicated person — best of luck to you, keep us informed on your continued life in Winston-Salem!

ON THE MEND

We are delighted to report that Dr. Roger Pompeo is doing remarkably well following his surgery to replace his hip — one down and one to go! Did you know that he was awake, alert and watched the whole operation? That's Dr. Pompeo for you! He is in such good shape, he will be up and around in no time (probably defy all predictions!) We can't wait!

HONOR ROLL AT CUSHING

Adam G. Friedman's superior work has paid off for him, he earned a place on the honor roll at Cushing Academy, located in Ashburnham. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Mark Friedman of 92 Aaron River Rd.



DEAN'S LIST

News from Stonehill College, Caroline Klier has been named to the dean's list for the spring 1997 semester at that college for the spring semester. Caroline will be a senior there this fall, its for sure we will be writing about her at the close of the fall semester!

Lori Gallant made the grade — she achieved dean's list status for the spring 1997 semester at Westfield State College. Lori majors is psychology.

B.C. HIGH GRAD

Matthew B. Rossi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brian K. Rossi of 48 Oak St., has graduated from Boston College High School — we haven't received word as to where he will be going next, but promise to do so as soon as we learn all of the facts! Meanwhile, congrats to you, Matthew!

Christopher Bartow is congratulated as he graduates from the Berklee College of Music.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Two fine ladies celebrated their 94th birthdays this month, Anne Campbell and Olive Weisenfluh. Mrs. Campbell's big day was July 2, Mrs. Weisenfluh's July 23. We extend hearty greetings and congratulations to both of you, and hope that your 95th year is as wonderful as all of the rest, if not more so!

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Aug. 1 was a big day for Mary and John Campbell, they celebrated their 61st wedding anniversary! Oh, wow, what a long and happy time for them!

COLLEGE GRADUATES

Christopher K. Bartow, son of Karin and Steven Bartow, earned a bachelor of music degree from Berklee College of Music recently. He received his degree in music business/ management, a major designed to equip him with the necessary skills to thrive in the competitive music industry job market. Renowned jazz fusion pianist Chick Corea presented his degree to him May 11.

Brendan L. McCarthy, son of Pat and Alice McCarthy, received a bachelor of science in business administration degree from Western New England College at ceremonies held May 17 in Springfield. What a wonderful young man with the best smile in the world! We know that he will go places in a real hurry, and wish him well in his endeavors.

We congratulate Charles E. Shields of 20 Flintlock Rd. and Erik M. Waal of 36 Old Pasture Rd. Both graduated from the University of Rhode Island and both earned themselves a bachelor of arts degree in marine affairs. We will let you know about their future plans as we hear them! In the meantime, congratulations to both of you!

Mark Haddad, Cohasset's new town manager, is congratulated by Town Clerk Marion Douglas, after he was sworn in Monday morning.

THOUGHTS AND PRAYERS

Many of you remember Stuart and Ester Pratt, they are such a wonderful couple that they could never be forgotten!! Anyway, they now live in Montgomery Village, Vt., and were in the devastating flash flood that took place in that town recently. We aren't certain what we can do for them from here, perhaps Stuart's brother Jeff, or mom and dad, Ruth and Carleton, would have an idea! Ask them! Beyond that, our thoughts and prayers are with you during your massive clean-up, Lester and Stuart!

OFF TO COLLEGE

Neven Bunstein, a senior at the Holderness School in Plymouth, N.H., will attend St. Michael's College in the fall. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Bunstein of Cohasset.

SEND IN YOUR NEWS

That's the news for this week, hopefully we will hear from you, with yours, real soon! Please give me a call, or drop me a note! Thanks!

Running out of cemetery space

Thanks to a small group of dedicated individuals, the town's supply of unused graves is no longer in critical condition.

Joseph Jerz, James Gilman, Joseph Curley, and Glenn Pratt —who make up the Cemetery Study Committee — have been working diligently behind the scenes figuring out just how to make the best use of the town's existing cemetery space.

By looking at maps and reconfiguring its layout somewhat, they were able to come up with more than 240 unused graves at the town's Beechwood Cemetery. Another 80 or so will be available through an expansion project at the cemetery.

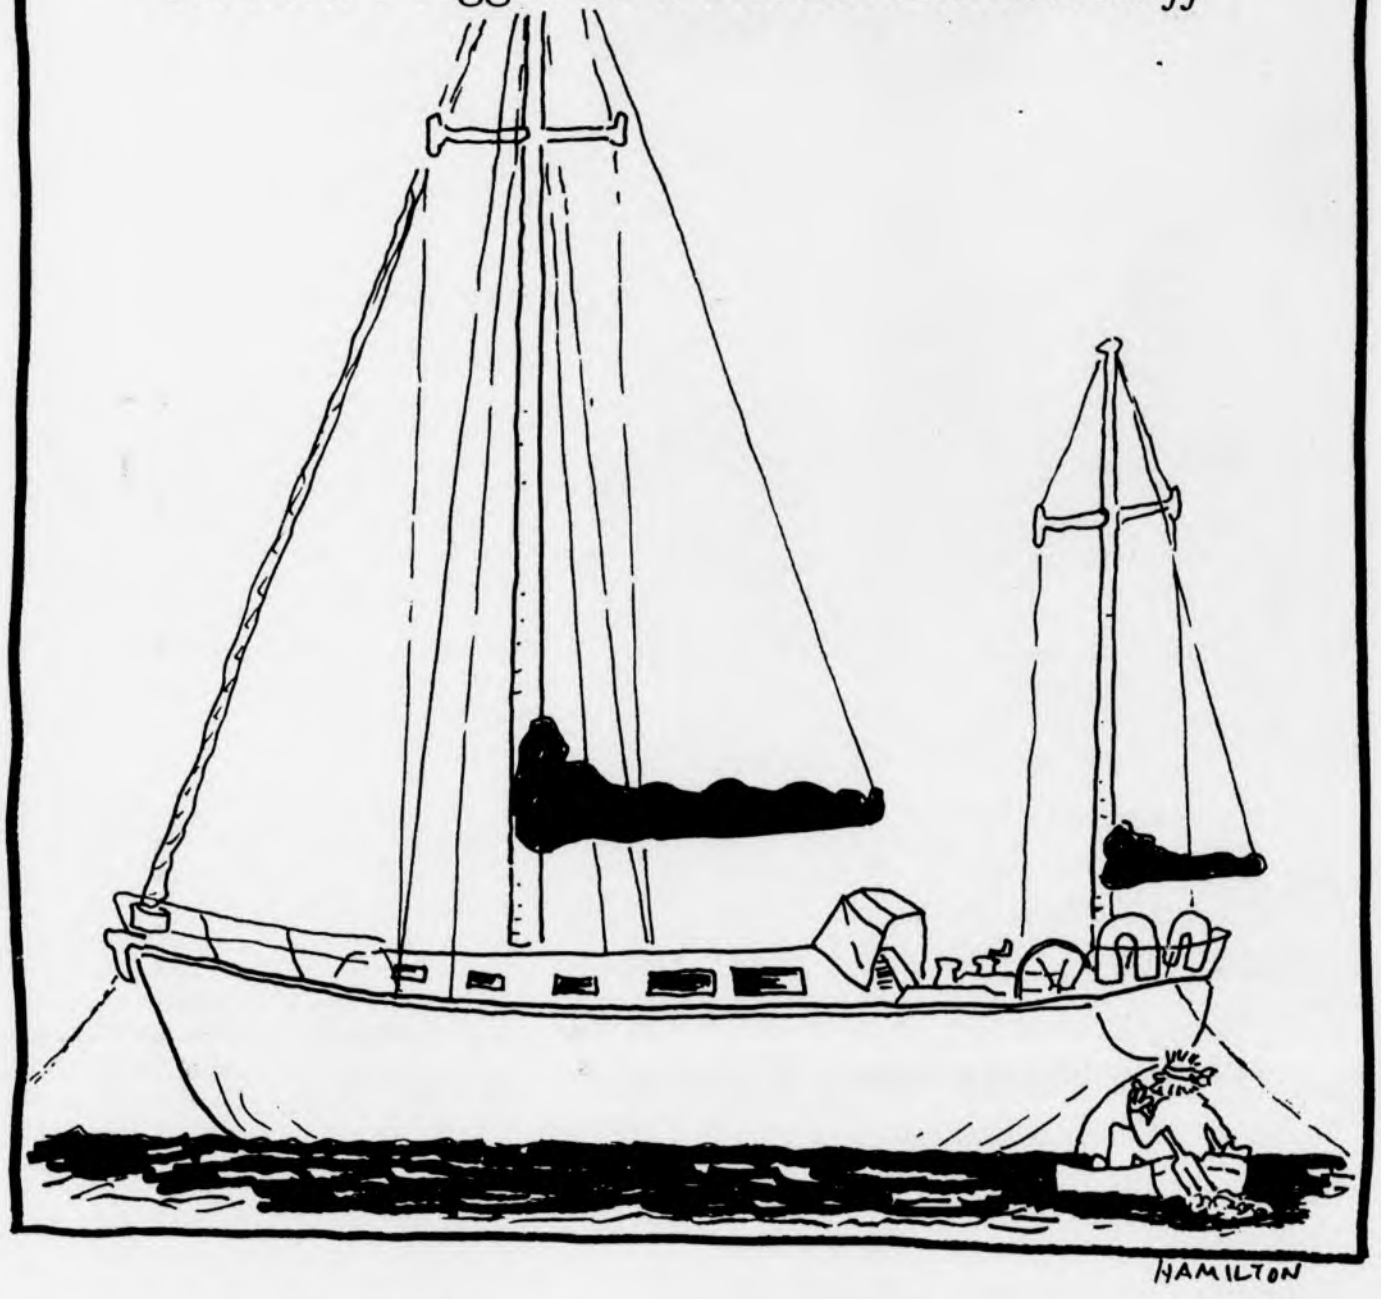
These "new" graves will buy the town some badly needed time, possibly as long as seven years. In the interim, the town will need to construct a new town cemetery, the necessary long-term solution to the shrinking number of burial plots.

Right now, the committee is considering four possible sites for a new cemetery: a parcel of town-owned land off Route 3A near Stop & Shop; the gravel pitts behind the Little League field off North Main Street; the former Webb-Norfolk site off Route 3A across from Atlantic Bagel; and expansion of Woodside Cemetery on North Main Street into some adjacent land.

The committee, which has taken countless field trips through existing and potential cemeteries, plans to walk the Woodside site once the undergrowth and foliage dies back in the fall.

The committee has published an informative booklet "The Fact is, We're Running Out of Cemetery Space," which is available at the selectmen's office.

Chairman Joseph Jerz suggests the town buy computer software to keep track of the availability of graves. And the committee would be thrilled if an Eagle Scout or Cohasset High student looking for a senior project would inventory the graves at Beechwood.



As the future of the town's cemeteries evolves — we owe these men a debt of gratitude for their undying efforts in seeking real solutions to a problem that none of us like to think too much about. But the reality is, shrinking cemetery space is a fact of life here in Cohasset.

We're sure in the future, many families will be grateful that the committee worked toward a solution.

LETTERS

Thanks to Cohasset residents

To the Editor:

I am writing on behalf of my mother and myself to extend our sincere thanks to those Cohasset residents whose unsurpassed helpfulness and generosity aided us in our struggle with an emergency situation on Saturday, Aug. 2.

As we never traveled to the area before, my mother and I decided to take advantage of the beautiful afternoon and enjoy the drive down the Cohasset coastline. After reaching the town center and being enticed by the antique shop windows, we pulled our car over to the side of the road and did some shopping. Unfortunately, we were pressed for time and had to soon return to the road, determined to see the beach before heading home. My mother attempted to slow the car down and bear left at the fork on South Main Street, but the car failed to respond and kept up its steady pace. Terrified, we realized our brakes had shot and that we could not control the car.

We were finally able to stop the car's momentum by applying the emergency brake and found ourselves caught in the middle of an intersection in the center of Cohasset Village, tying up traffic and causing dangerous confusion in all directions. Two men drove by in a truck and noticed that we were in trouble. They pulled over immediately and offered to push our car to the side of the road. Seconds later, a police officer passed by in his cruiser and then swung around to respond to our emergency. He asked the owner of the hardware store to let us use her telephone to call AAA, a request to which she gladly agreed. As we waited for the tow truck, people on the street came up to me and my mother, inquiring about what happened and offering their advice. People could not have been more kind or giving of their services.

Our visit to Cohasset was certainly not what we expected it to be, but we were so elated by everyone's graciousness and warmth, that we considered the trip delightful in its own way. We look forward to heading back to town once again — only next time, we'll be driving a car with new brakes.

Mill River Marine Railway is still in limbo

By David Tibbetts
STAFF WRITER

A view of the Mill River Marine Railway from an outcropping of ledge across the Gulf River.

Staff photo/Bill Wadsworth

The fate of the Mill River Marine Railway, Inc. still remains uncertain more than four years after the land it sits on was sold at a foreclosure auction.

The owner of the property wants to reduce the size of the boat yard and build a waterfront residential and commercial complex. But local fishermen say the current boat yard is needed so they can pull their boats out of the water for maintenance and repairs.

The historical commission has argued that the boat yard is a vital piece of Cohasset's identity as an historic fishing community.

William Hanney, president of Stoughton-based Entertainment Cinemas, bought the waterfront property in 1993 for $350,000 from the Bank of Brockton, which had foreclosed on the prior owner. The sale was conditional on there being no tenants on the property.

But Frank Carey, the owner of the boat yard, refused to leave. Carey has operated his boat yard on the site for more than 25 years.

Bank of Brockton initiated eviction proceedings against Hanney, and in 1994 Dedham Superior Court Judge Elizabeth Donovan upheld the eviction.

Carey appealed the decision through his lawyer, Peter Eely of Quincy.

In a telephone interview Aug. 6, Eely said he expects the judge to hear the appeal within the next 7-10 days.

"The judge has moved to Suffolk Superior Court and the case will be heard in Boston," Eely said.

Hanney has said he is not trying to force Carey out. He has pointed out that he needs a rent-paying tenant to pay for renovations.

Yet Hanney and the Bank of Brockton are continuing with eviction proceedings against Carey.

Hanney has said he personally likes Carey and would like to bring him back as a tenant if he is evicted.

Hanney claimed he bought the property originally to build a large, private residence for himself. But local opposition to that plan forced Hanney to reconsider the idea.

Saying he did not wish to be "the most hated man in Cohasset," Hanney instead proposed a plan that would include three condominiums, some kind of boat repair facility, the Lobster Pound store, and possibly some water-related retail space.

Fisherman and boaters disapprove of the newest plan because the size of the boat yard would be cut in half to make room for parking spaces, landscaping and a public walkway along the water's edge.

Opponents also argued that the boat yard would be incompatible with residential housing because boat owners frequently need to work on their vessels late at night with power saws, sanders and other heavy machinery.

John K. McNabb Jr. has intervened in the controversy on behalf of the Cohasset Historical Commission and a group of concerned residents.

McNabb said the situation is far more complicated than Hanney would have people believe.

Carey was able to operate the boat yard with a chapter 91 permit which allows private, water dependent uses on public waterways.

The area between the annual mean high tide and low tide watermark is an historic public easement enshrined in legislation, McNabb said. Essentially, whatever land lies between the average high tide and low tide for the year is public land.

Chapter 91 allows businesses to use the land for a fee. The state used to grant 99-year licenses for a small fee, but in the mid-1980s the Department of Environmental Protection took over the permitting process.

DEP changed the permit structure from 99 years to a 10-30 year permit that charged users based on square footage.

However, in cases where a property owner is making no significant change to an existing water-related use, DEP can issue a 99-year license for a small fee.

Hanney has also applied for an amnesty license under chapter 91 allowing him to build in the waterfront area.

Hanney has said he needs to make extensive renovations to the buildings at the site to prevent them from "falling into the water."

McNabb said Hanney should not be allowed to obtain an amnesty license because he is proposing significant changes to the existing water-related use, including a reduction in the size of the boat yard, major building renovations, changes in use, and a new walkway.

McNabb conceded that some of Hanney's renovations would greatly benefit the property, but he still should not receive an amnesty license.

McNabb said Hanney told the Massachusetts Historical Commission that there would be no significant changes in use, but the plans he showed to the town contained major changes.

DEP has requested more precise plans from Hanney. McNabb said Hanney sent DEP a set of alternative plans rather than a detailed breakdown of the plan as currently proposed.

DEP and the state Coastal Zone Management agency are reviewing Hanney's latest plans for suitability.

McNabb said DEP and CMZ are also considering whether evicting Carey would constitute a diminished water-related use at the property.

"DEP and CMZ have been very accommodating to Hanney, but they have been very clear that he shall not diminish the water-related use of the property," McNab said.

McNabb said DEP has informed Hanney that he could damage his prospect of getting a chapter 91 license if the boat yard goes away.

"Cohasset has the 10th largest lobster harbor in the state, but the only boat yard with a railway capable of pulling out large boats is the Mill River Marine Railway," McNabb said. "This is a large hurdle we think he cannot overcome because public land is usually not closed off (for private use)."

Neighbors annoyed with high school athletic field

By Kerry Herlihy
CORRESPONDENT

Neighbors to the new new high school athletic field being disturbed by some activities there.

Henry and Yvette Rattenbury have lived on Briarwood Lane for 36 years, on the land that has been in Henry's family for many years. They have tolerated the noise, the litter, and the double parking on their small road since the old tennis courts were put in along side their property in 1969. Three years ago, the tennis courts were cleared away to make room for the new athletic field and the leftover debris and dirt remains.

The Rattenburys were told by the town that the lights on the field for night games would shine directly on the field and would not affect the neighborhood. However, the lights can be seen from, not only Briarwood Lane, but Bancroft Way, Bancroft Road, Woodland Drive and Pleasant Street. Because the neighbors were told they wouldn't even know when the lights were on, people are upset.

"The lights were supposed to be adjusted in the spring, but if there is a difference, it is minimal," Mrs. Rattenbury said.

The noise level was expected, due to the proximity to the school but is still a disruption for the neighborhood. Mrs. Rattenbury has heard neighbors complaining that the noise was so loud things were shaking inside their house.

"People don't realize how much sound travels," Mrs. Rattenbury said.

The Rattenburys understand the repercussions of living next to a school and feel as though they have been very cooperative and patient over the years, but the use of the field by non-school events that create more noise and disruption was pushing things too far. The new field's original purpose was for athletic events only. However, the American Cancer Society recently held its 24-hour fund-raising marathon at the high school, and the fields were used up until 8 or 9 p.m.

"We are all for the cause and think it is wonderful it was so financially successful, but we could hear people throughout the night. I couldn't even hear my television when the marathon's outdoor celebration included the singing of the 'Star Spangled Banner' by a professional singer," Mr. Rattenbury said.

Julie Carchedi, district manager for the American Cancer Society, informed the school committee they are planning to return next year but will happily move to another location if necessary. Carchedi said they had tried to keep the noise to a minimum, but with an event of this sort, it's difficult. She apologized to the Rattenburys if they were misled.

Ralph Kidder, school committee member, agreed with the Rattenburys' concerns regarding the use of the fields.

"There is no way we can't address these issues," Kidder said.

Kidder said property surrounding the field should be properly maintained; the police should be enforcing the double parking regulations on the streets and the lights issue needs to be addressed, but at this point he is not sure how.

"I am glad you came and brought this to our attention so we can do what we can to help the situation," School Committee Chairman Maureen Jerz said.

Since the school committee meeting, July 10, the tree and park department has been to the area to clear debris alongside the Rattenbury's house, per the request of Superintendent Stephen Hart.

"I hope this is ongoing and a step forward in getting support," Mrs. Rattenbury said.

Third volume of Cohasset's history gets off the ground

By Robert Ziff
CORRESPONDENT

The formidable task completed by E. Victor Bigelow, who wrote Cohasset's first documented history that spanned from 1898, when it was published, to time's inception, in no way diminishes the scope of the project at hand.

Compiling information for Cohasset's third volume of its history — picking up where Burtram "Burt" Pratt left off in 1956, when he authored the second volume of Cohasset's history — has begun.

The final product that the Committee on Town History, which is tackling the project, would like to have produced, some time around the start of the new millennium, is a hard-bound book of about 250 pages. As with the two preceding editions, there will be photographs, illustrations, and maps. Because the project is in such infancy, it is impossible to know exactly what the end results will be.

Committee Chairman Wigmore Pierson, who is on the historical commission, said he "believes firmly that an author should be hired to complete this project. The individuals on the committee are being organized to complete different tasks and gather different categories of information."

Because the age of computers is advancing by the minute, Pierson did not discount the possibility of having this book placed on a laser disk, or even opening a Cohasset Web page.

A lot has happened during the last 50 years. The Vietnam War, as well as other historic wars, Nixon's ousting from his presidency, the fall of the Soviet Union, as well as events that are unique to Cohasset.

Expected to be completed around the year 2000 or 2001, this third edition will cover local, national and global events that have impacted Cohasset throughout the last 50 years or so. To get it all down on paper will be quite a feat.

Progress is being made in accomplishing this endeavor. David Wadsworth, who is curator of Cohasset's Historical Society, said "The work is in the formative stage. A committee of about 14 or 15 Cohasset residents, appointed by selectmen, have started meeting on a monthly basis.

No author has been picked to write the book at this time.

Ernest Grassey, who is president of the historical society, and yet another member of the committee, said he is "also pushing for retaining an author, or authors, to work on this project. We are currently in the process of looking for someone to fill this position." He mentioned that this is a book that will be sold to the public and there may be a less expensive version than the traditional hard-cover copy to make the book more affordable. Grassie mentioned that there are good sources of historical information going back the last 20 years that appeared in the Cohasset Mariner and the Cohasset Mirror, which preceded the Mariner; but before that, the committee must rely on the town's records and people's memories. This is one reason the committee is producing a list of people who have lived in Cohasset for the past half-century or longer, who need to be interviewed to provide first-hand accounts.

Committee members feel an author or authors should be paid to write the book. The committee will obtain quotes from local authors and present a figure to town meeting for approval of funds.

The amount of $5,000 was appropriated to the project at the special town meeting Oct. 28. This was money to get the project off the ground, to pay for old documents and photographs.

For more information about the Third Volume of Cohasset's History, please contact the Cohasset Town Hall, Town History Committee, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

Bells to be played by Illinois carillonneur

A concert on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon will be presented Sunday evening, Aug. 10, by Karel Keldermans, carillonneur of the Rees Carillon in Washington Park, Springfield, Ill. Included in Mr. Keldermans' program will be compositions for carillon by Easley Blackwood, John Pozdro, Ronald Barnes, Johann Hassler and Roy Hamlin Johnson, as well as a set of variations by Franz Schubert and arrangements of American folksongs.

The recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. It will take place rain or shine; in case of rain, listen from your parked cars. Printed programs, recital schedules and new brochures describing the Cohasset Carillon will be available in the program stand by the church courtyard on Highland Ave., and will also be distributed on the Common and at the entrance to Stagecoach Way, the pedestrian walk beside Hunneman Realty on Main Street. Listeners are invited to bring picnic suppers, blankets and lawn chairs. Following the recital a tour of the tower and carillon will be offered to all interested persons.

For further information, telephone St. Stephen's Church at (617) 383-1083 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., or the church carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, (508) 475-2599, or the assistant carillonneur, Mrs. Mary Kennedy at (617) 383-9599.

COHASSET MARINER

Swim team continues to make waves

The Cohasset Swim Team continued its winning streak last week, with two victories over Plymouth Eel River and Duxbury Aquadux. Excitement ran high during both meets as Cohasset swimmers swam their hardest and cheered on their teammates.

Coaches Allison Hughes' and Becky Golden's emphasis on hard work, sportsmanship and fun has paid off, with the team undefeated to date.

The season wraps up this week with meets at Duxbury and Scituate Yacht Clubs.

Pat Carbone keep his head in the game earlier this week at the South Shore Soccer camp, which was held at Cohasset High School.

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

Fishers swarm to Cohasset Tourney

As the flotilla departed Cohasset Harbor on a serene Saturday morning, all the skippers knew they had to do well.

The all-female fishing team aboard the vessel A Tiny Miracle, captained by Judy Mantz, was ready to do battle with the best of the club. Coleby Mantz, Suzy Neer and Betty "Boop" McGillvray prepared with a skippers meeting the night before. Turns out, the only rules agreed upon were there would be no mutiny, and the official beverage of the "Happy Hookers, as they were billed, would be wine. As the boats cleared the channel, they roared off to the south, east and north. The 1997 Cohasset Yacht Club Fishing Tournament was underway!

To the south, 8-year-old Christina McCabe was ankle deep in warm Peggotty Beach water. No one paid attention to the youngster playing with the rod and reel. Cast after cast she made, reeling in each time. The Mambo Minnow swam perfect on each cast and then, without warning…it was inhaled by a big fish. Later while weighing in, Christina watched wide-eyed at all the commotion she created as the striper swung from the hook. Twenty-two pounds, twelve ounces called out Harry and shortly after, 42 inches long! Christina shyly smiled a dazzling smile as she and Dad posed with the catch of the day.

Over by the Glades gate, a 6-1/2 foot pilot whale was hauled up dead. Its colors slowly faded as the curious from the neighborhood and beyond stopped and marveled before it was whisked away by the aquarium.

Tony Carbone nailed his first keeper bass "in the shadow" of Minots Light. The fish was fooled by a red tube and worm. Tony was beaming with pride at his candidate for the dinner table. Tony's striper checked in at 22 pounds, 12 ounces and was 42-1/2 inches long. To the west, the gods of fishing smiled on the Figueredos. Evan boated an 18-pounder over the Grampuses, only to be out-gunned by Richie's 21-pounder. Both were using herring. Dave and Justin Alexander used a tube and worm rig to successfully nab a 23-plus pounder that taped off at 42 inches. All nice fish.

Ronni reports from Humarock that two Brockton anglers had a happy day of fishing in Duxbury Bay. John

Gymnastic camp for girls

Come join the South Shore Community Center gymnastics staff for a fun-filled week of gymnastics for all levels of experience, from Aug. 18-Aug. 22.

Enjoy rotations on the vaults, bard, beam and floor exercises, as well as tips on conditioning and a good game of bowling.

Bring a snack each day.

The cost of the camp is $82.50 for the week.

Call the center at 383-0088 to sign up, Monday-Friday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., or see Susie at the gym.

Gymnasts do well in competition

This past June, some members of the South Shore Community Center gymnastic team competed in the AAU Gymnastic Regionals held in Methuen, MA.

Carlie Carter turned in an outstanding performance, winning the bars and placing 11th on the bean while taking in an eighth place finish in the all-around competition.

Teammate Melanie Suddath placed first in the floor exercise competition, second on the bars and fourth on the beam while taking a third place in the all-around.

Catilyn Flint took part in the intermediate division and placed 10th in the all-around.

Adult evening tennis lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept ongoing telephone registrations for adult evening tennis classes for all levels of instruction by calling 383-6791.

Classes will be scheduled as follows: Beginners 6 to 7 p.m., Tuesday; Intermediates 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesday; Advanced 6 to 7 p.m., Thursday; and Beginners 7 to 8 p.m., Thursday.

Other classes will be scheduled as demand indicates.

All sessions are four weeks in duration and cost $35 per person, per session. Teaching will be Mr. John McGrory of Cohasset Recreation Department's tennis staff. Participants who do not own, or have access to a racquet, should indicate this at the time of registration. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis. Another evening will be made available should demand indicate.

Fishers swarm to Cohasset Tourney

Gallagher and Eddie Bischetti used Eddie's secret rig to nail three beautiful fluke. The smallest was 5-3/4 pounds, next 7-1/2 pounds and the largest tipped the scale at a hefty 10-3/4 pounds. A fine day of fishing, with great results.

Anglers have been raving about the new Beachcomber T-shirts that are distributed in conjunction with the tournament. The tournament is under way and will run through Oct. 4.

The largest striper taken during that period takes the trophy. Anglers may sign up at any time during the tournament and are required to endure a 48-hour waiting period prior to any weigh-in. Additional details, sign-ups and shirts are available at the shop.

The Scituate Shark Spectacular finished up in grand style Saturday. Capt. Steve James' Quality Time took first-place honors in the release category with 19 sharks. In the keep division, first went to Capt. Dave Smith's Maximillian for a 316-pound mako shark. Second went to Capt. Bob Briggs Lorraine B for their 309-pound blue shark. Show went to the 280-pound blue shark captured by Capt. Kevin Corbett's boat Rock 'n Roll.

So as the boats straggled back to the dock at the Cohasset Yacht Club, all eyes surreptitiously examined the bilge as each boat tied up, amongst inquiries of how'd you do. The Happy Hookers didn't win, but they did show. First-place bass honors went to Bill Jordan with a 22-pounder. The Hooker bass tipped the scale at 19-1/2 pounds. On the bluefish side, Al Moore and J.L. Thompson faced off with Al taking top honors by a mere 1/4 ounce!

Big bluefish and blitzes from the Gannett opening to Egypt Beach are indicators that the fishing will crank up a notch to a level not seen in years. Remember, any bluefish that measures more than 40 inches is a likely Governor's Cup contender. Watch those teeth.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Investing in time management

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

Americans' active lifestyles have made time into a valuable commodity; an investment of sorts. So how to conserve it best? Move over McDonald's, here comes the fast-food equivalent to domestic chores: the personal service industry.

For between $15 and $150 an hour you can hire someone to do such time-consuming and irritating tasks as shopping for groceries, cleaning, car-pooling, registering the car, walking the dog – essentially all the things a 50-hour work week precludes.

Sure, most of us would rather not scrub the bathtub or take out the trash. But these personal-service firms owe their success to more than an aversion to cleaning. The demand for a personal assistant/housecleaner is essentially a result of Americans' long hours at the office. And the hours are getting longer.

The average person in this country works 163 more hours a week than she did in 1975 – that's the equivalent of one month –says Juliet Schor, author of the modern exhaustion classic The Overworked American.

More and more overworked Americans are enlisting the services of personal-service firms.

Many of the personal-service firms have specialties. Take the Intrepid New Yorker (in, you guessed it, New York; 212-534-5071), which has just opened a branch in the Boston area called Executive Transfers. The company holds its clients' hands through every bit of the moving process: finding them the right neighborhood for their needs, the right home, the right schools, the right nanny and maid, and even the right chimney sweep and brass polishers. And they pack and unpack all of your belongings and supervise the move so you won't have to lift a finger. It's the ultimate in pampering and time-management. And it should be for the $2,000-and-up price tag.

If your needs are smaller – say, you just need some help keeping your house clean – then you can hire someone more like the conventional cleaning lady. Of course, many of these cleaning companies have added modern twists to the old show-up-and-scrub formula. Rent-a-Mom in Reston, Virginia (703-437-8571), for example, doesn't just clean your home. Its "moms" will actually organize your sock drawer, and all the other drawers for that matter, and clean out your closet for a minimum of $60.

TimeSavers in Mill Valley, CA (415-388-6338) will organize your financial life by sorting documents and setting up a filing- and bill-paying system. It will then send someone regularly (for a fee, to be sure) to maintain the setup.

In fact, for those of you who do have assistants, but wouldn't dream of asking them to do a personal errand, a firm like TimeSavers may be just the thing.

They will do basically anything and everything (within the law, of course): drop off dry cleaning, mail packages at the post office, walk the dog, do xeroxing. A client of TimeSavers paid co-owner Kim Carbone $150 to shop for and buy a wedding anniversary gift for his wife. On the day of the anniversary, his wife received a $4,000 pair of diamond studs and was none the wiser.

There are other personal-service firms -- More Than Just Errands in Philadelphia (215-564-2727), Work! in San Francisco (415-255-2325) that also know no bounds to what they will do for hire.

Sometimes, though, you just need someone to remind you to do something (and not actually do it for you). For example, you may not want a stranger to wish your sister "Happy Birthday" for you. Instead, have the The Pampered Professional (888-221-SHOP) call you to remind you of her birthday before the date.

Where do you find a domestic guru in your area? The Yellow Pages is always a good place to start as well as word of mouth.

Of course, inviting a stranger into the intimate dealings of your life requires a bit of caution and a little research. Always ask for references – and check them. Find out if the company is insured. Asking to sign a contract is a good idea. You may want to go with a firm that has demonstrated some staying power as opposed to a start-up – chances are it's still around because it is reputable.

Basics of stock splits

By Brad L. Cuppels

Many investors are under the misconception that when a company splits its stock or announces a stock dividend, shareholders receive something for nothing.

A stock split simply is the dividing of a company's outstanding common shares into a larger number of shares. This sounds pretty lucrative until you learn, for example, that the $60 share you formerly owned has been replaced by two shares, each of which is worth $30.

There are several reasons why a company's board of directors may decide to split the firm's stock. For example, this may happen if the price of a stock is so high that individual investors seem to have lost interest in it, and have stopped buying it. For some psychological reason, investors seem to prefer cheaper shares.

What about stock dividends? They are dividends paid in common shares, rather than cash; also, they may be paid to shareholders in lieu of a regular cash dividend.

A company's board of directors may decide to declare a stock dividend when it wants to conserve cash, yet allow shareholders to benefit from the firm's higher earnings. If you own 100 shares of a company which declared a 10 percent stock dividend, you will receive a certificate for 110 shares. Following the dividend declaration, the market will adjust the trading price of the company shares accordingly.

So, for example, if the original cost basis (the original cost plus commissions and/or other trading costs) of the shares was $10 per share, your 110 shares now have a cost basis of $1,000 divided by 110, or $9.09 per share.

Clearly, although the price of the individual share has declined, the stock dividend may benefit you by providing you with more shares on which to collect possible future cash dividends.

Stock splits and stock dividends may provide added enhancement for your personal investment portfolio.

IT'S HAPPENING

'97 Teen Beach Dance

Who's up for soaking up some rays and hittin' the surf? On Friday August 22, grab your JAMS, wax your surfboard, and surf on down to the town hall auditorium for the gnarly Cohasset Summer Teen Beach Bash.

Here's the skinny on this gig: Running from 7:30 to 11 p.m., this shindig is for grades 7 through 12. For this occasion, the town hall auditorium will be decorated with a funky beach theme. DJ Jazzy Jay Fiori has generously donated his time and talent to provide the entertainment. Drinks can be purchased by those who attend, but snacks will be provided.

Those who show up are encouraged to arrive in beach gear or casual clothing. Towels, goggles, flippers, swimies, tubes and big alligator floaties are acceptable. Donations for this rocking party are $5 and will benefit the Drug and Alcohol Committee/ youth projects. So just put your rear in gear, and shake that booty on Aug. 22. But if you have any questions you can drop a dime to Jami Butman at 383-0851.

Sailing Club Lobster Bake is Saturday

The Cohasset Sailing Club will be holding its annual lobster bake at the sailing club, Saturday, Aug. 9 from 7 to midnight, rain or shine. The event is for both sailing club and yacht club members and their guests. There will be live music for your dancing pleasure, provided by "Bottom of the Fifth."

Tickets are $28 per person and include chowder, corn, sweet sausage, watermelon and a choice of lobster or sirloin steak. People may bring other refreshments.

Tickets must be paid for no later than Thursday evening, Aug. 7. Payment can be left at Lynn Previte's, 38 Summer St., Tel. 383-9723 or left at the sailing club with an instructor. Please indicate on your check how many lobsters or steaks you will require.

Enjoy the great food and all the fun.

Rotary club installs new officers

At its installation of officers, held at its new home at the Lightkeepers residence on Government Island, Peter Workman was installed as president of the Cohasset Rotary.

Members of the board of directors for the 1997-1998 term are Peter Guild, Peter Pearce, Peter Workman, Tom Gruber, Bob Grobel, Kenneth Roth and Joseph Cheney.

Workman, who is a real estate specialist with Dunkin' Donuts, was inducted by Peter Guild and will assume office for a one-year term.

Workman is one of 26,000 incoming rotary presidents, residing in more than 180 countries and regions throughout the world, serving more than 1.1 million members.

Yacht Club fashion show

Scituate Harbor Yacht Club will proudly present Boston designer Denise Hajjar at its annual fashion show and luncheon to be held at the Yacht Club on Wednesday, Aug. 13. Denise Hajjar is known for her elegant day and evening wear.

Ms. Hajjar is coming to the Yacht Club after a stint in Hollywood working as a costume designer for the upcoming television movie "Under Current." She outfitted twelve of the film's characters.

Tickets will be available at the Yacht Club through Friday, Aug. 8.

Class of 1930 reunion

Calling all 1930s Hingham High graduates and friends. Just a reminder that the reunion at the South Shore Country Club, Sunday, Aug. 24, starts at noon. Reservations may be made by calling Lisa Smith at (617) 749-1720. The cost for the buffet is $15.

Children's author and illustrator to sign

Author Nathalie Ward and illustrator Tessa Morgan will sign copies of their new book, "Do Whales Ever ..?" Friday, Aug. 22, from 10 a.m. to noon at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset.

Ward is a marine mammal biologist and environmental educator with the Boston University marine program in Woods Hole. She knows what interests kids about whales, porpoises and dolphins. As a whale-watching guide for many years, she collected their most asked questions about sea mammals, and gave them serious answers in this fascinating tour of sea mammal evolution. Imaginative and colorful illustrations by Morgan provide just the right touch for this easy-to-follow text. Morgan will also help children learn how to draw some of the animals from the book.

Call 383-2665 for more information or to reserve your signed copy.

Shaw's has lower prices.
You know it.
We know it.

And apparently the competition knows it.

There's information around Cohasset that a competitor is suddenly lowering its grocery prices in anticipation of Shaw's arrival. And we say: it's about time!

Shaw's will give Cohasset more value.

Our new store will certainly give the competition a lot to keep up with. Yes, we'll have remarkably low prices throughout the store. But you'll notice convenient extras, too. Like an in-store branch of Abington Savings Bank. Pick up a book or magazine from the wide selection at Shaw's Book Stop. Take home ready-made entrées from our Home in a Hurry section. We even have award-winning Sterling Silver certified premium beef, exclusively at Shaw's Butcher Shop. There are so many great reasons to shop at Shaw's.

Shaw's: The next generation of supermarkets.

Our new Cohasset store will open soon. Come visit during our Grand Opening celebration. With just one trip down the aisle, you'll see why we're well-known for our low prices—and why the competition has good reason to be nervous.

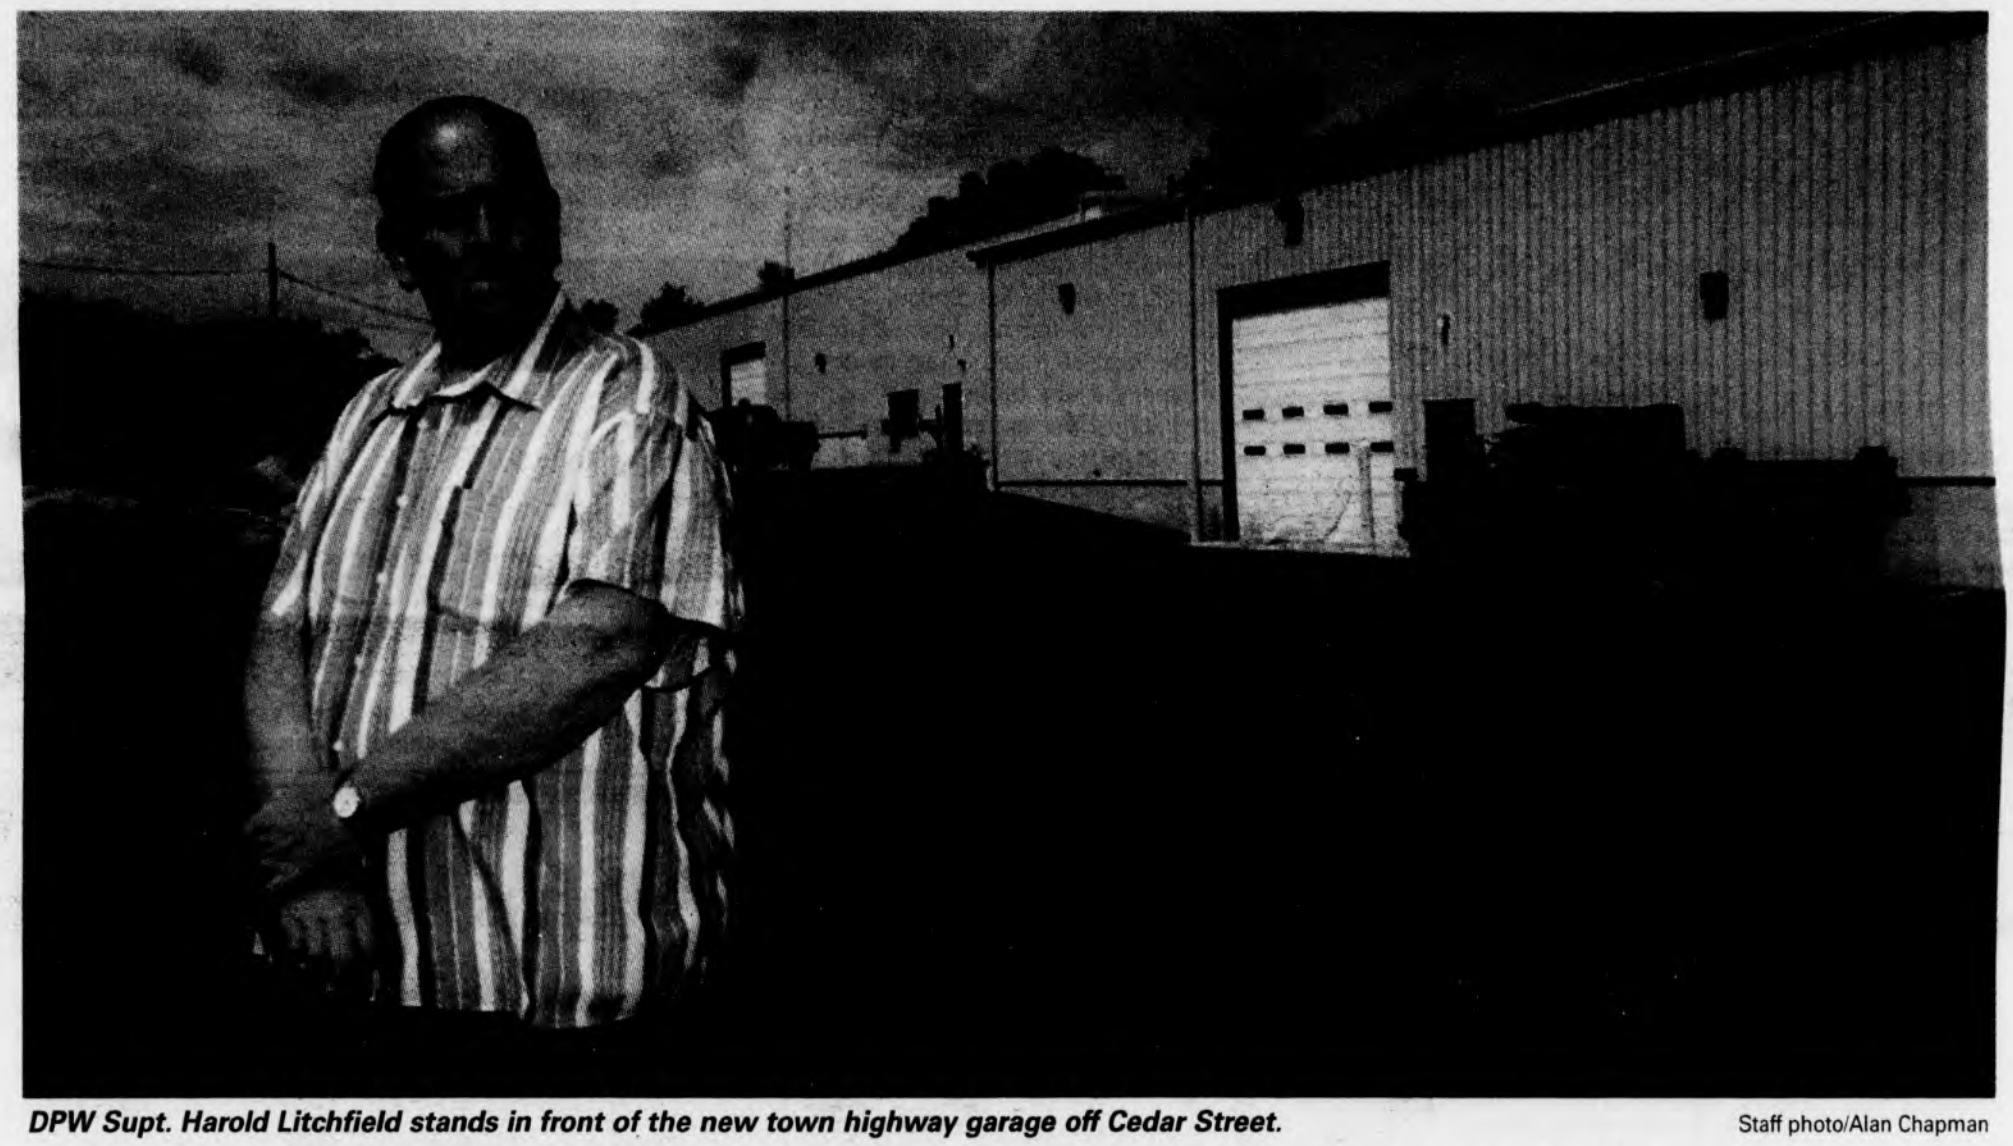
Bike trail possible along railroad tracks

T plan to close off private ways nixed

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

A bike trail abutting the length of the train tracks in town could be in Cohasset's future, the Greenbush Mitigation Committee said this week.

That was a bright note in a grueling three-hour meeting in which committee members held a powwow with two of the town's representatives on Citizens Advisory Committee on how best to play hardball with the MBTA.



What's at stake whether or not the town can be "whistle free" by creating new access roads to three private ways off South Main Street which are too narrow for the required medians and gates.

The Greenbush Mitigation Committee was appointed by selectmen to negotiate with the MBTA, which plans to restore rail service along the abandoned right-of-way, on how to alleviate the adverse affects of the train.

The Citizens Advisory Committee, appointed by the state secretary of environmental affairs, is made up of representatives from all towns in the Greenbush corridor which extends from Braintree to Duxbury and also includes Norwell. The CAC is addressing the adequacy of the MBTA's draft environmental feasibility study on the project. Cohasset's representatives Martha Gjesteby and Deborah Cook attended Monday's mitigation meeting.

Harold Litchfield could not be more pleased with the new Cohasset Department of Public Works garage. The D.P.W. superintendent's former office, after all, was located in the nearly dilapidated, highly inconvenient ramshackle old garage in the back of the town parking lot.

"The new building is great," said Litchfield, who will be celebrating his 37th year of service for the D.P.W. on Nov. 10. "Now we have everything under one roof."

The $1.05 million D.P.W. garage sits regally on its Cedar Street site. The new corrugated-metal building is a virtual palace compared to the old facility — which local teens are trying to renovate into a dance club.

The new facility is fully equipped with everything from spacious, handicapped bathrooms to a 16-ton

Woolworth customers will miss the little things

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

When the doors to Woolworth close after more than 35 years in Tedeschi Plaza, it's the little things that its customers will miss.

"I come here especially for notions — zippers, thread, iron-on patches," said Gertrude Mann of Hingham, who was taking advantage of the marked-down prices Monday.

"It has the everyday things you need," she said.

But the small items that attract people to Woolworth Corporation's 400 remaining five -and -ten cent s stores, like the one in Cohasset, don't pay the bills.

"The stores were losing millions of dollars a year," said a company spokeswoman at Woolworth's headquarters in New York.

"Our customers, in reality, are purchasing from other larger stores," she said.

The company, founded in 1879 in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, decided to close its Woolworth stores last month. Its U.S. stores had an operating loss of $37 million last year, according to published reports.

The 15,300-square foot Cohasset store, which is one of 15 Woolworths in Massachusetts, opened in Tedeschi Plaza off Route 3A in April 1962. It employs six part-time and three full-time people.

Peter Lemieux, store manager, said he had no idea when the store would actually close. All merchandise in the store is currently on sale with discounts up to 30 percent.

John Whelan, director of leasing at Tedeschi Realty Corp., the plaza landlord, said Woolworth's still has a lease so Tedeschi is not actively seeking a new tenant or tenants at this time.

He said the news of the store closing was a "shock to a lot of people, including us."

Meeting schedule announced

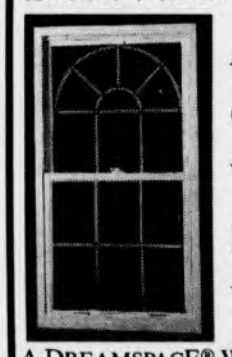
The town's drug and alcohol committee will begin holding regular meetings on the second Wednesday of the month at town hall at 7:30 p.m.

Committee chairman Margo Aikens announced the change for September at Tuesday night's meeting. She said the meetings will be posted in the school calendars and at the town hall.

Aikens reminded all committee members to attend the scheduled meeting in order to remain on the committee. There are currently nine members on the board.

Jody Butman has recently been named secretary of the board. "We are getting our momentum back and are looking to have a successful year," Butman said.

Update on skating park



The in-line skating park that Cohasset teens are hoping to build is still in the beginning stages. At the Drug and Alcohol meeting on August 12, the committee discussed possible sites including the high school and the sand pits.

Once a site has been approved the next step is to raise money to have the park built.

Jody Butman, secretary for the committee said that there is tremendous support to have a skate park built.

The park will be available to people who ride bikes, rollerblade or skateboard.

Speaker time limits for Greenbush hearing

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has announced that time limits will be imposed on speakers at the Aug. 14 public hearing regarding the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's proposal to place fill in 5.11 acres of wetlands and waterways for restoration of the commuter rail service on the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad line in Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. The 7 p.m. session is being held at Lombardo's Conference and Function Hall, 6 Billings St. in Randolph.

"Based on the large response to our public notice, a time limit will be imposed on all speakers at the hearing to assure that everyone has an opportunity to be heard," said Larry Rosenberg, Chief of Public Affairs for the Army Engineers. "The exact amount of time will be determined once those who wish to speak have signed up but will be allotted no less than two and no more than five minutes."

If it is determined by the Corps that all registered speakers cannot present testimony Thursday evening, the hearing will recess around midnight and will reconvene at 10 a.m. at the same location Friday (Aug. 15) morning.

Sign-up for the hearing will begin at 5:30 p.m. After following established protocol (i.e., a presentation by the applicant, followed by comments from public officials), speakers will be called upon in the order in which they registered.

Both written and oral testimony will be received. In addition to making an oral presentation at the hearing, a stenographer will be available to take statements from those who wish to have their comments placed on the record. Written statements may also be submitted for 10 days following the hearing or until Aug. 24.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Ted Lento at the New England Division, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Rd., Waltham 02254-9149, (617) 647-8863.

Traffic headaches ahead

Route 3A roadwork stalls motorists

By Jennifer R. Horan
STAFF WRITER

The next year's traffic forecast in Scituate calls for heavy congestion along Route 3A due to a major state resurfacing project from the Marshfield border to the Cohasset border.

"It's going to be murder," Selectmen Chairman Joseph Norton said of the project, which started July 28. "I'm afraid, on certain days at certain times, it's going to be a real boon doggle."

While motorists can expect to wait for single-lane travel through town where construction crews are working from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., they should not suffer delays of more than a few minutes, said Mass. Highway District Highway Director Skip McCourt.

"We will be monitoring the traffic conditions," he said. "If cars are waiting more than just a few minutes, we'll have the construction vehicles pull off the road to let the traffic go by."

A project of this nature — which the state does periodically as needed — has not been undertaken in Scituate in about 15 years, McCourt said. The project's total cost will be $2.1 million, with Hanover-based P.A. Landers Inc. as the lead contractor, he said.

No detours are planned for the estimated 12-month project scheduled for completion in August 1998.

"There will be a lane open at all times," said McCourt. Police details will be stationed along construction sites to move traffic along. Crews could be working at more than one site at a time, he added. No work will be done on weekends.

"We don't anticipate any major problems with the project," McCourt said.

The project's scope includes excavating and resurfacing the portion of Route 3A that runs through Scituate and does not extend beyond town lines.

Since the project began, crews have been installing, adjusting and rebuilding drainage structures along the five-mile route. The hay bales that are piled at the intersection of routes 3A and 123 will be used during this phase of the project, which will last until the end of the construction season.

After a winter construction hiatus, Landers will return in the spring to remove two inches of existing bituminous concrete from the roadway and resurface Route 3A with three and a half inches of pavement. Granite curbing, curb inlets and berms as well as new traffic signs will also be installed .

The Route 3A bridge construction project will not begin until next spring at the earliest, McCourt added.

Just over the town line in Cohasset, drivers on Route 3A have had to reckon with construction at the site of the soon-to-open Shaw's Supermarket for about a year.

"We had a lot of problems with early morning back-ups," said Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan. "Sometimes there were 20- to 25-minute delays."

But Noonan predicts that Scituate's project will be less of a mess than the tie-ups in Cohasset, which required six police details. The Shaw's construction project, located in an active business district at a busy intersection, entailed more than a resurfacing project, he said.

"Scituate is much different. There are not a lot of businesses on 3A there," he said. "I don't think people will suffer as much. In Cohasset, there are lots of businesses along where they were doing construction and they were doing work on both sides of the road. They were trying to do everything at once. Paving alone is not all that bad."

Scituate Police Chief Thomas Neilen agreed.

"There may be some slowdowns but I don't anticipate any big problems," Neilen said.

Each day since work began, an average of three police details have been employed to direct traffic at a rate of $25 per hour, he said. The project will not detract from officers' regular policing duties since they work eight-hour detail shifts on their days off, he said.

But the work will not be easy.

"They have to be careful out there. They have to be alert all the time. It becomes tedious work, especially with the heat," Neilen said. "Several officers have been injured and killed in the commonwealth while on traffic detail."

"We had a lot of problems with early morning back-ups. Sometimes there were 20- to 25-minute delays."

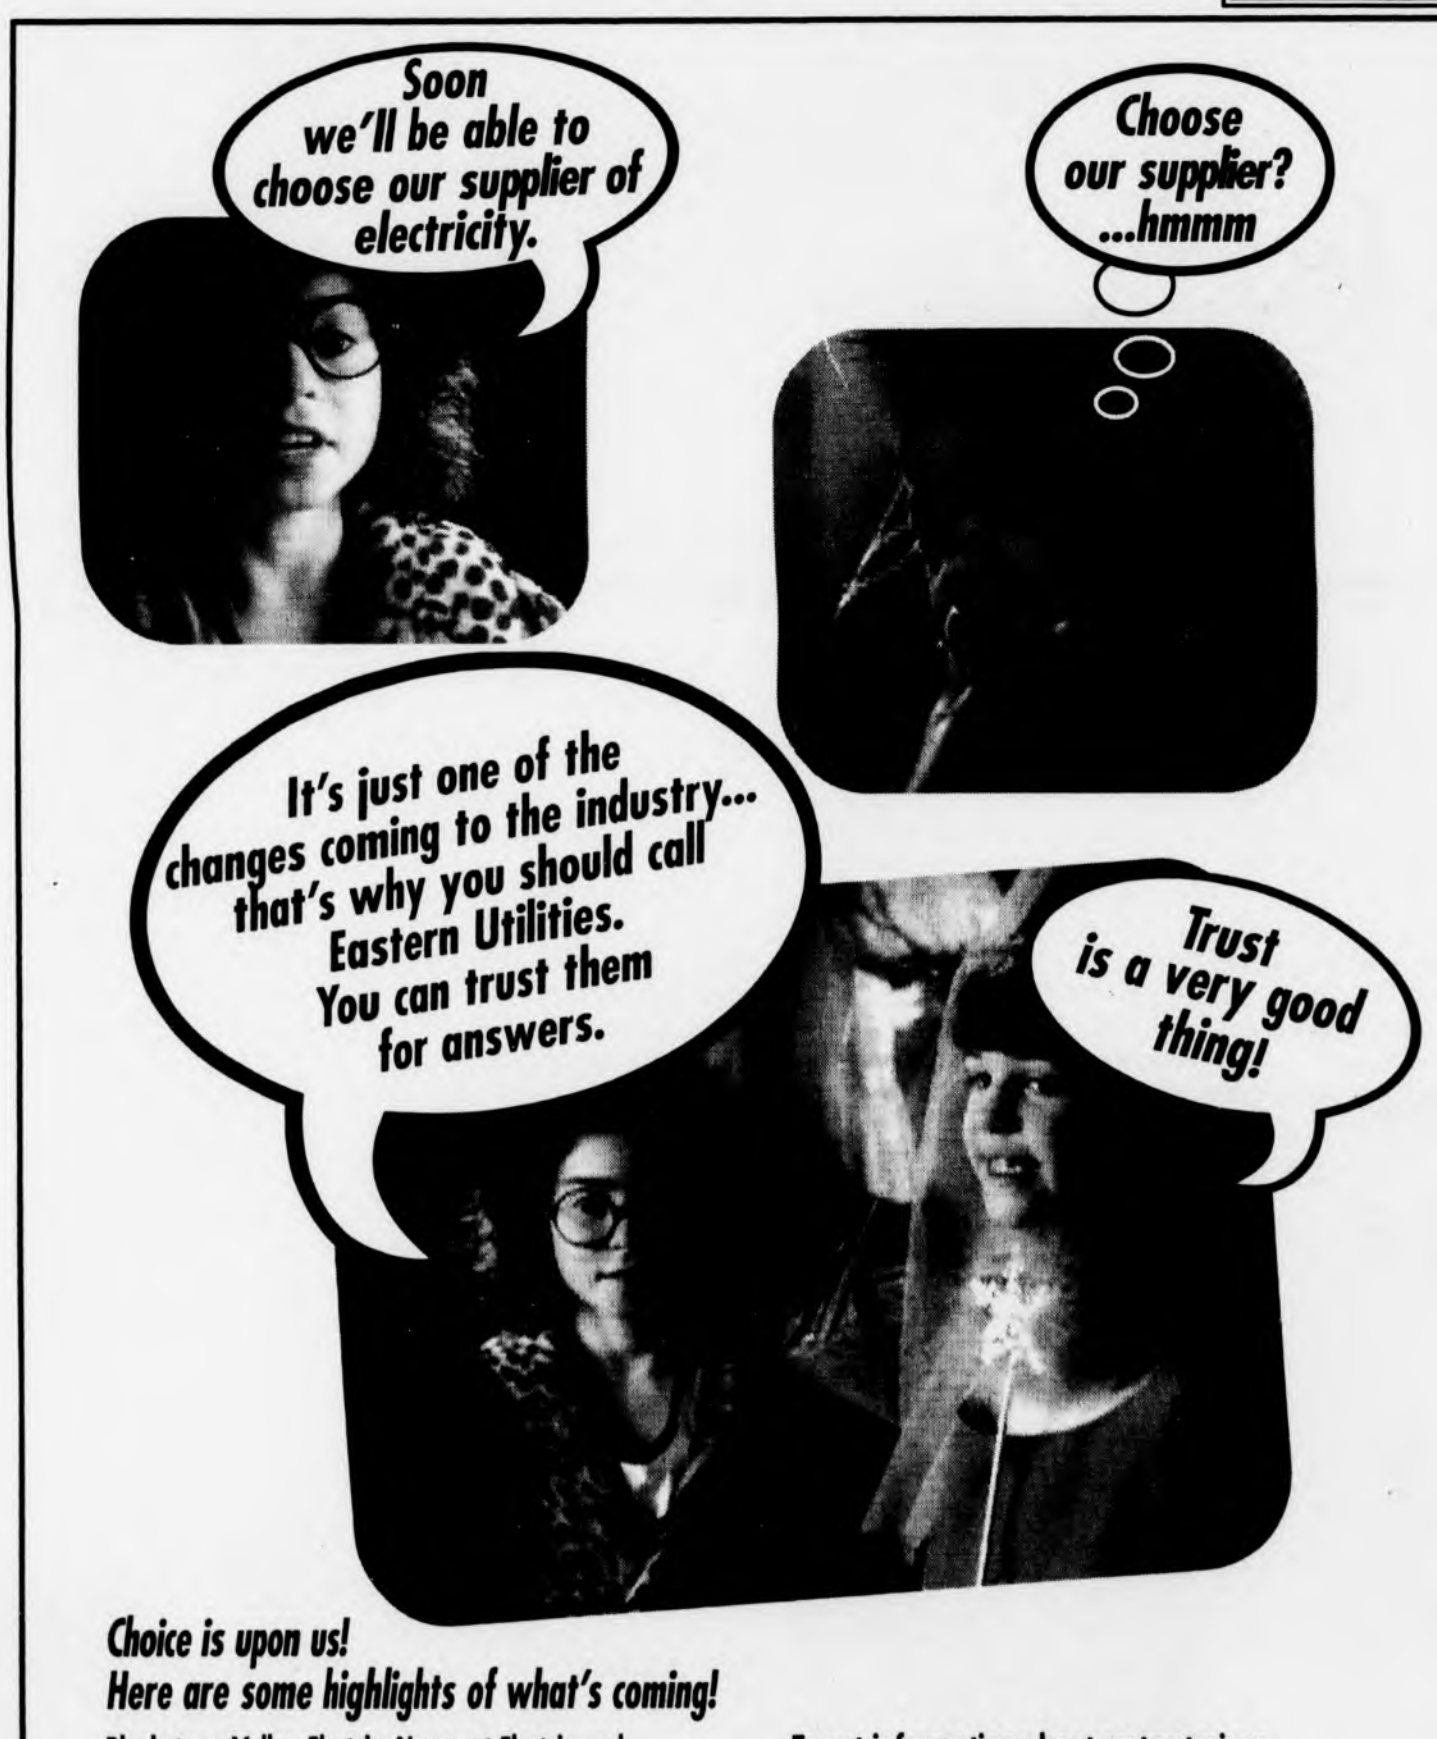
"Unfortunately its closing is disenfranchising a lot of small towns which rely on Woolworths and are not big enough to support a Walmart or Kmart," he said.

Whelan said once Tedeschi Realty assumes control of the space, it will actively seek a suitable, credit-worthy tenant. He did not rule out subdividing the space to accommodate two to three stores.

Carolyn Sargent, who has worked at Woolworth for 14 years, says she'll miss her customers.

"You know everybody," she said.

Sargent said the store is unique because of its variety of merchandize from candy, by the pound, to a certain type of nylons or girdle.



"Our biggest seller is yarn," she said.

Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road, said Woolworth was an invaluable place to find things while she raised her four children.

"It had all the odds and ends — sewing stuff, candies, toys, notepaper for school," she said.

Woolworth also owns Footlocker shoe stores and Champs sporting goods stores.

Historic walking tour continues

The Historic and Architectural Walking Tour series will continue Sunday, Aug. 17, at 3 p.m. This walking tour will be of the Lincoln National Register Historic District. The tour group will meet in front of Old Ship Church, at 90 Main St., and will include historical and architectural highlights of Hingham Square. Included on the tour will be Old Ship Church, Memorial Bell Tower, St. Paul's Church, Old Ordinary, New North Church, The Community Center, Derby Hall and Loring Hall. The tour will also spend a lot of time in the shady confines of the Hingham cemetery, so we will stay as cool as possible if it should be a hot day.

The tours are free and open to all interested. For more information, call Rick Desmarais, 749-2463.

Service academy nomination applications available for 1998-99 school year

U.S. Rep. William Delahunt will begin accepting applications for nomination to the U.S. Service Academies for the 1998-99 academic year.

Interested candidates who would like to attend one of the academies are invited to request a nomination application by writing to: U.S. Rep. William Delahunt, 15 Cottage Ave., 4th floor, Quincy, MA 02169.

To be eligible a candidate must be a resident of the 10th Congressional District and a high school graduate by June 1998. The deadline for a completed application will be Nov. 1, 1997.

"The academies offer a superb, tuition-free education, and I urge any interested students on the South Shore or Cape and Islands who would like to attend either the Naval, Military, Air Force or Merchant Marine Academies to get started on their applications early," said Delahunt.

For more information about the application process, or about the U.S. Service Academies, call the Congressman's office at (800) 794-9911.

Return of stolen Farmers' Market banners sought

On Wednesday, Aug. 6, two banners were stolen from the location where they hang on the corner of Jason Road and Main Street at the Cohasset Farmers' Market. All that was left Thursday morning was the rope which ties them to the trees. The banners, valued at approximately $550, will be difficult to replace. If anyone has any information to their whereabouts, call 383-1994. If anyone wishes to drop off the banners with no questions asked, drop them off at Aquarius Sunrooms, 22 Depot Court. They can be left either in the front alcove of the building or on one of the benches in the rear of the building. Please return them — they are the only banners to promote the market.

Garage

Mohawk-brand lift. All tools, signs, buckets, barrels and other devices and equipment are neatly arranged in the 14,700-square-foot home of the D.P.W..

"I love it," said Mary Snow, who works in the new facility. "It's big. it's clean. There are less interruptions. My (air-conditioned) office is more than twice as big as it used to be."

The stoic boulders and pastel flowers — planted by Lynn Eisenhauer and Mary Edmonds from one of the local garden clubs — which decorate the perimeter of the new garage are a stark contrast to the poles, signs and other assorted D.P.W. debris that litter the old site.

The old garage, built in 1945, was built to accommodate trucks with a 108-inch wheel-base, according to Litchfield, and not the 155-inch wheel-base that his trucks currently have.

The new facility also houses the tree and park division and is a neighbor to the recycling-transfer facility and road salt shed. Also on the premises is 8,000 gallon fenced-in fuel depot which cost $90,000. Litchfield said that this consolidation has made things run much more smoothly and efficiently.

He said that he expects the new facility to save him from some head-aches.

"(In the old garage) we weren't able to put everything inside," said Litchfield. "A lot of stuff had to stay out and it was vandalized — kids put sand in the gas tanks and broke windows and mirrors on the trucks.

"In the winter time, we'd have to drain the (street) sweeper and put it in the old Cohasset Fire Station. We had to take all the filters and everything out of it. Now we can keep it i n a warm garage. This means that if we get a good day in February, and I want to go out and sweep up some of the sand, I can do that without going through a major production."

"Now we have everything under one roof." — DPW Supt. Harold Litchfield.

Construction of the garage was approved at the 1994 annual town meeting but budget estimates were low and an additional $230,000 had to be added onto the budget in October of 1996.

Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said the excess in cost was directly attributable to improvement in the construction economy and planners' efforts to be conservative when the initial proposal was brought forward.

Sullivan said he is happy that the garage is now standing.

"The old garage was too small for the current department," said Sullivan. "It was in a tough location — they had no property around them to speak of. Everything about it was inefficient and old and needed to be brought up to date."

Former garage committee member Gary Gardner, 90 Beechwood St., said that the new site will be good for things such as a meeting area for contracted snow-plowers or a place to put a town boat or two during the winter.

"The new D.P.W. garage is a great facility for the long-term vested interests of the town," said Gardner, who estimates that the project to get a new garage has been in the works for 28 years.

One thing Litchfield said he would like to see added to the new building is a maintenance bay and a mechanic to work there.

"At some point, Cohasset should look for a town mechanic to take care of some of the repairs," said Litchfield.

Kids pet show coming

The children's section of the Paul Pratt Library will sponsor a Pet Show on Cohasset Common on Thursday, Aug. 21 from 10 a.m. to noon. Children may pick up a registration form for their pet or pets in the children's room at the Library beginning on Aug. 1. Each pet to be shown — dog, cat, bird, duck, rabbit, iguana, tortoise, et al. — must be registered. Ribbons and prizes will be awarded in special categories. Refershments will be provided by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library. Watch for more news about the pet show in this column.

Puzzle club, story hour debut

Deer Hill School librarian Marge Murphy conducts the very popular puzzle club Monday and Tuesday evenings from 7 to 8:45 p.m., continuing until the last week of August. Children from grades two through six are welcome. They should be sure to bring their library cards. Popsicles, courtesy of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library will be served at 8 p.m. Parents must pick up their children no later than 8:45 p.m.

An informal story time for preschool children will take place every Friday throughout the summer, at 10 to 10:30 a.m. continuing until August 22 in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Library. Children must be 3 1/2 years old. There is no registration required.

Local citizen's group defends landfill site denial

By David Tibbetts
COHASSET MARINER

A group of more than 150 residents who oppose the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) have filed a 71-page legal brief in Norfolk Superior Court supporting the health board's decision to deny the company's expansion.

"This is the big one," said John McNabb of Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE), a group dedicated to opposing any expansion of CHL.

CHL filed an appeal in Norfolk District Court asking the court to overturn the board of health's site denial last April.

CHL submitted a 55-page brief last May stating that errors of law were made in the site denial process. CHL claims that the health board decision was not based on substantial evidence and was illegal.

"Now it's up to the judge and whether the court buys into CHL's arguments that errors of law were made," McNabb said.

McNabb said he is confident that the case against CHL looks very good.

"In our brief, we also argued that the board of health decision must be upheld unless CHL can prove that it was illegal, arbitrary, and capricious since the decision was in effect a regulation of the board," McNabb said. "We proved that CHL can't show that the decision was illegal, arbitrary and capricious and therefore must be upheld in court."

Attorney Kevin O'Donnell prepared the brief with help from McNabb.

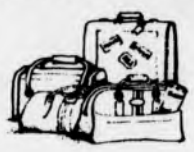
McNabb said the next step is for the court to assign a judge to this aspect of the case. The judge must review the entire record of the case, which includes more than 3,500 pages of testimony, 70 hours of hearings and 144 exhibits.

McNabb said the judge may schedule a hearing within the next 6-9 months, at which time the health board, CHL and the citizens' group can speak. The judge will make his ruling after the conclusion of this process.

Judge to view disputed area in CHL land court case

Land Court Judge Peter Kilborn, who is presiding over Cohasset Height Ltd. (CHL) landfill's lawsuit challenging the validity of the Cohasset Water Resource District, comes to Cohasset Aug. 15 at about 11 a.m. to view the disputed area.

In the suit, CHL alleges that the town of Cohasset, in the zoning bylaw that created the district by vote of town meeting April 7, 1986, improperly included Crocker Lane and about one-third of CHL's proposed Area V landfill expansion. Land filling is prohibited in the district to protect Cohasset's public water supplies, including the Sohier Street wellfield.



Judge Kilborn, along with attorneys for CHL and for the town of Cohasset, and amicus curiae John McNabb Jr., will tour Crocker Lane to view the road and the drainage structures that CHL says directs stormwater away from the Sohier Street wellfields.

Kilborn will also view the Sohier Street wellfields, which CHL alleges are not lawful water supplies.

This 'taking of a view' is the next to last step in this legal process, which began Nov. 29, 1994, when CHL filed the suit. On June 21, 1996, Kilborn dismissed Count V. CHL's claim of denial of procedural due process, and Jan. 23, 1997, he dismissed Count I, CHL's claim that the district was preempted by the Solid Waste Act.

Trial was held Feb. 13 and 14, and March 24 and 25, on Count II, which alleged denial of substantive due process, and Count IV, which alleged that the district was inverse spot zoning. Count III, alleging taking without compensation, was held over for later action if necessary. On June 10, McNabb filed his post-trial brief, as did CHL and special counsel for the town of Cohasset. There is no time limit for Kilborn to make a decision.

Deadline extended for directory

The Cohasset Against Substance Abuse group, part of the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, has extended its deadline for accepting forms for the new Safe Homes Directory. Forms can be picked up at the Town Hall and the Library.

The new deadline is Sept.10.

Margo Aiken, chairman of the Drug and Alcohol Committee, would like all parents with children in grades 6 through 12 to participate in this program.

The directory provides parents with information about the affects ofdrugs and alcohol. There is a list of resources on how and where to get help or information if they become aware that a problem exists.

The directory also lists parents in the community who have agreed to provide an alcohol-free and drug-free environment in their homes.

Aiken also announced that additional directories will be printed and will be available at the Town Hall.

"In the past we have printed enough for those who have returned the applications and are part of the program," Aiken said. "Our goal is to reach as many people in the community as possible."

No decision on cellular tower yet

The zoning board will decide by August 27 whether to allow Sprint Spectrum L.P. to erect a 120-foot telecommunications antenna near Foreign Auto Repair on Route 3A, according to Mark DeGiacomo, zoning board chairman.

Sprint presented its antenna design, which would be disguised as a flagpole, to the board at a July 30 meeting at town hall. Sprint had changed the design from a lattice-style to the more aesthetically-pleasing flagpole.

"It is certainly a more preferable design," said DeGiacomo. "I'm still concerned with the distance (200-feet) the pole is from 3A as well as the height of the pole."

The land for the proposed antenna is in a light-industrial zone with a 45-foot restriction on the height of any structure. The antenna is allowed in a light industrial zone with a special permit for height.

Sprint, which is currently concerned only with 3A coverage, said that more antennas would be necessary in the future to provide cellular service to all of Cohasset. They assured the board, however, that no more giant poles would be needed.

APOLOGY IS NOTED

We must begin this week by giving a huge apology to Cameron Nugent — Cameron is a female who will be attending Tabor Academy in the fall, and it was she who participated in Tabor's "Orientation at Sea" program a few weeks ago!

We were not the only ones to make the error, the press release that we received referred to Cameron as a male also — in any case, my fault, and I am sorry. By the way, it is twice as impressive to hear that you are a female, we just know that we will hear all about Tabor and your experiences — everyone will want to hear them through a woman's eyes! Again, sorry for the error, Cameron.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO LUCY

Here's plenty of advance notice, so that you may be sure to give Lucy Leonard huge birthday greetings and lots of hugs Aug. 20. She can always be spotted around town, either at Stop and Shop or the consignment shop! Wish her a happy birthday — maybe she will tell you her age, maybe not — in any case, she looks superb, is a grand lady, and everyone loves her! Oh, by the way, Happy Birthday from the Gang at Bancroft Road; Mrs. Leonard!

THE JEROMES ARE GRANDPARENTS

Tom and Florence Jerome certainly had plenty of reasons to celebrate recently, they are one happy couple! Five days before celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary, their daughter, Donna, gave them the best present they could receive; their first grandchild!! Her name is Elise Marie Greitzer, and she lives in Arlington with her Mom and Dad, Donna and Ian. The Jerome's two other children, Karen (who lives in Dedham) and son and Daughter-in-law, David and Sylvia, live in Rutland, Vt. Tom and Florence celebrated their 40th in a special way, they took a cruise through the Panama Canal. The family celebration (of which there will be a few we'll bet), will take place when Elise is just a smidgen older! Won't that just be so much fun?! Needless to say, all are extremely excited, Elise will sure be surrounded with lots of love! As will Florence and Tom! Congratulations to all of you!

HATS OFF TO JARROD

Have you been wondering why you haven't spotted Jarrod Batts around town recently? Well, there is surely a good reason! Jarrod is now a Marine, and he is Rec. Jarrod Batts! He is in Parris Island, where he will spend 14 weeks! For those of you who would like to drop him a congratulatory note, or just say hi, his address is: Rec. Jarrod Batts 015684409, 3rd Bn MCO PLT 3085, MCRD Parris Island, S.C. 29905.

Be sure to tell him how proud of him we all are, it is quite a thing to serve your country, and we know he will do an admirable job!

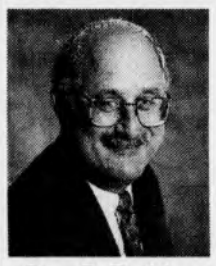
OUT OF STATE VISIT

Florence Hitt (from Lacey, Washington) visited her daughter, Sandy Hitt Young and her husband Bruce at their home in Bowie, Md. Sandy and Bruce's daughter, Katherine Griffith and husband Bob, along with their children Cody Ryan and Morgan James Griffith, came from Hedgesville, W.V., to visit Grandma, Grandpa, and Great-Grandmother. Florence and Sandy came to Cohasset for a party with all of their friends at Dick and Locke Tousley's in Cohasset — they stayed in Hingham with Janet Vanderweil, who also had a party for Florence. Florence and Sandy went back to Lacey, Wash., but Sandy will be back in Cohasset about Aug. 9, when Sandy and Bruce will be visiting Bruce's family in Saugus. She hopes to see the rest of her friends at that time, she sure is a busy person!

SWEET ADELINES

The Island Grove Chorus of Sweet Adeline's International is holding a membership drive, they are attempting to double their membership. No previous experience is necessary, and rehearsals are every Thursday night at the United Church of Christ Hall, Route 18, Abington, at 7:30. These gals really have a great time with their singing, and their voices are truly beautiful with harmony that is unexcelled! For more information please give a call to 383-9582. It will be a great way to spend you winter, and you will meet a great group of gals!

AWARDS WON



Hats off to Patricia A. McCarthy, artist extraordinaire! Pat recently won two awards from the Duxbury Art Association at their Summer Show Aug. 1. Her two pictures won her an Honorable Mention and a First Prize! Not that we are surprised, Pat's work is beautiful, and we love it! Congratulations to you Pat!

FOOD PANTRY NEEDS ITEMS

Finally, the Cohasset Food Pantry has a few items on its wish list this week, they would appreciate it if you could help out — toothpaste, shampoo, laundry soap, maple syrup, white sugar and regular coffee are the items on the list, double up the next time you hit the market and donate one to a most worthy cause!

Obituaries

Ellery H. Clark Jr.

A memorial service was held Aug. 12 at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset, for Ellery H. Clark Jr., U.S. Navy, Ret. 87, of Scituate and Cohasset, an author and a retired professor at the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

Burial was private.

Capt. Clark died Aug. 4.

He attended elementary school at Brown and Nichols in Cambridge. He graduated from Roxbury Latin High School in 1929 and was a Golden Boy track star that year. He continued his athletic career throughout his lifetime, winning 120 gold medals in track and field events, including one at the 1995 Springfield Senior Olympics.

In 1933, Capt. Clark graduated cum laude from Harvard University where he studied English and naval history and was a member of Navy ROTC. That year, he was commissioned as an ensign in the Navy. He was appointed to the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis in 1940 as a professor of English and naval history, as well as assistant track coach.

He signed on for active duty in World War II and served on the aircraft carrier USS Randolph as a damage control officer in the South Pacific. In 1945, with the rank of lieutenant commander, he was involved in several famous battles, including Okinawa.

When the war ended, Capt. Clark returned to full-time teaching in 1946 and earned a master's degree in English from Boston University in 1955.

When he retired from the academy in 1979, he was a full professor of naval history and coach of the track and cross country teams. Among the students he had coached was Jimmy Carter, who went on to become president.

Capt. Clark co-authored several naval history textbooks, including "Sea Power", helped found the "Naval Review", and founded the academy's Toastmasters Club.

With the help of his first wife, the late Grace Marion Clark, he ran the Annapolis Civic Ballet and Dance Studio from their Annapolis home.

Between 1979 and 1982, Capt. Clark wrote three books about the Boston Red Sox, "Red Sox Fever," "Red Sox Forever" and "75th Anniversary History of the Boston Red Sox."

A lifelong Red Sox fan and member of the BoSox Club since 1985, he was a friend of team owners Tom and Jean Yawkey and of players Ted Williams and Dom DiMaggio.

He was a lifelong member of the Boston Athletic Association, along with his late father, Ellery Clark Sr., who won two gold medals in the 1896 Olympics in Athens, Greece.

Capt. Clark was born in Cohasset and summered there for many years while living in Annapolis.

He leaves his wife, Joanne Ramsden-Clark; a son, William Ellery Clark of Severna Park, Md.; daughter, Victoria Clark-Waidner of Annapolis, Md.; two step-sons, Christopher Ramsden and Mark Ramsden; and a granddaughter.

Arrangements were made by the Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to Boston Athletic Assn., 131 Clarendon St., Boston 02116.

Frank Rosano

Frank Rosano, 81, of Bristol, R.I., son of the late Frank and Rose Rosano of Cohasset, died recently in the Veterans Hospital in Bristol, R.I. where he has been, following an amputation several years ago.

Mr. Rosano fought in World War II in the Battle of the Bulge Company B 643rd Tank destroyer attached Battalion 82nd Air Borne and 83rd Division. They were the first troop over the Alp River where they met and battled with the Russian troops.

He leaves two sons, Frank Jr. and Anthony Rosano both of Bristol, R.I.; a daughter, Rose Margaret Lothrop of Abington; two sisters, Libby Pompeo of Cohasset and Marion Reynolds of Bridgewater; and two grandsons. He was the brother of the late Joseph Rosano, Rocco Rosano, both of Hingham; Pauline Loiacono of Hingham and Mary Sue Hardy of Cohasset.

Funeral arrangements took place in Bristol, R.I.

THE PIRIFORMIS MUSCLE AND SCIATICA

While sciatica is most often blamed on a bulging intervertebral disc pressing on the sciatic nerve, there may be another culprit. The piriformis muscle starts at the side of the tailbone or sacrum and stretches over to the head of the femur. All the adductor muscles (which work to pull the leg closer to the midline of the body) lie under the sciatic nerve with the exception of the piriformis muscle. When this muscle pulls tight enough, it can press on the sciatic nerve and cause pain to radiate down the leg. While both a bulging disc and a tightened piriformis muscle can press upon the sciatic nerve to cause pain, disc-related pain usually goes all the way down to the foot, and piriformis-related pain usually goes no farther than the knees.

When the sciatic nerve is inflamed, it can cause numbness, tingling, pain, or weakness in your lower back and leg. At SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, we look at your overall health - focusing not only on your sciatica but also on your lifestyle. This total approach to wellness helps determine the best treatment for your problem. We're located at 80 Front Street, Scituate Harbor, where we provide safe and gentle chiropractic care for the entire family. Please call 545-7388 to schedule an appointment and start feeling better.

P.S. The chiropractor can prescribe stretching exercises designed to prevent the piriformis muscle from becoming so tight that it leads to sciatica.

EDITORIALS & OPINIONS

Peripheral vision

Sometimes it's easy to lose perspective.

It's hard to appreciate the beauty of each sunrise when you are rushing past on your way to work. It's hard to remember how important it is to listen to the birds, count the stars or share a conversation with an old friend when the constant crises of the working world and family life are always threatening to overwhelm you. Our employers, teachers and parents encourage us always to pay attention to what we are doing and not the world happening around us.

That's why art, and artists, are so important. Our painters, writers, actors and musicians learn by their calling to celebrate what is beautiful, rather than what is necessary. They invite us to question the patterns and priorities of our lives; they entice us into the forgotten details of the universe and the dizzying pleasures of imagined worlds. They inspire, they provoke, they require us to think; they invite us to play. They remind us that we are alive and that we are human, and that both of those are good things.

Understanding and confronting art is not an easy thing. It is easier to be entertained than challenged. Given a choice, many of us would rather spend our time and money on amusements that provide us an escape from our problems, rather than art that will help us transcend them. Popular, commercially viable art reflects this tendency.

To survive, the best art requires the financial support of an educated patron. In a democratic society, it falls upon the people and the government that represents them to act as that patron. On the local level, government support for the arts comes in the form of organizations like the local cultural councils, whose grants fund children's concerts, murals by the seashore, poets and plays and countless other projects that enrich and inform our lives.

On the national level, this support has come in the form of the National Endowment for the Arts, an institution marked for dissolution by the actions of our legislature.

The arguments against continued federal funding for the arts are many and persuasive. NEA grants have nurtured expressions many people find obscene, sacrilegious, or otherwise offensive, all with public funds. The endowment has been accused of favoring the East Coast elite with its disbursements.

It may be that a retooling of the endowment is necessary to make it the kind of grand experiment in democratic patronage its creators intended it to be. To abandon the idea that the government has a duty to support the creative achievements of its people would be, however, a serious mistake. We cannot hope to advance as a people on the strength of our backs alone; we must nourish our hearts and minds if we expect them to play a role in our future.

Bay State Games coverage appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation, I want to thank you for you coverage of the 1997 Bay State Summer Games. The Games celebrated its 16 year and your support and coverage made it special.

Through June and July, close to 10,000 athletes, from across the state, participated in team tryouts, regional qualifiers and festival events. More than 5,000 athletes advanced to the Bay State Summer Games Finals July 17 to 27 at MIT, UMass/Boston, BC, BU, Harvard, Devens Field Complex and the Reggie Lewis Track & Athletic Center. These individuals put endless amounts of time and commitment into participating in this Olympic-style festival.

The Bay State Summer Games provides athletes, of all ages, an opportunity to compete with and against some of the state's finest competitors. Every individual should be applauded for their success and accomplishments.

Thank you for covering these athletes and giving them the recognition they deserve.

Polly Logan to be honored at GOP

Political consultants will discuss 1998 and 2000 campaigns with GOP leaders of Bristol, Barnstable, Plymouth and Norfolk at the Ocean Edge Resort & Golf Club in Brewster, from 2 to 5 p.m., Aug. 24, Division 5 Chairman Bernard Nugent of Yarmouth announced.

Division 5 will also honor state GOP Vice Chairman and former Division 5 Chairman Polly Logan. Special invited guests include state, county and present and past members of the General Court.

Logan has been active in Republican politics for many years and has raised money for Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Sen. Robert Hedlund, Sheriff Peter Forman, state and national candidates. She was a member of the Weld-Cellucci Transition Team and of state Treasurer Joe Malone's Inaugural Committee.

She served on the Republican National Committee for 12 years and presently is Vice Chairman of the Republican state party, having been re-elected April 10.

Logan is active in civic and community affairs and received a special award, "Stateswoman of the Year," from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, and the Abigail Adams Award from the Massachusetts Womens Political Caucus. Wayne Budd of The Middlesex Club awarded Logan the Lincoln Medallion for service to the nation and the commonwealth. Of 18 recipients of the Lincoln Medallion, Logan was the third woman behind Congresswoman Margaret Heckler and the late Mary Newman. She is a former trustee of Old Sturbridge Village, former member of the Board of Overseers for Harvard College and the Museum of Fine Arts, founder and Executive Vice President of the Doric Dames, the volunteer guides at the Statehouse.

The meeting is open to the public, but reservations must be made in advance by calling, Mimi Sundstrom of Milton (698-1864), Shawnie Littlehale of Norwell (659-4191) or Larry Novak of Brockton (588-6484).

Shaw's to host pre-opening reception

Shaw's Supermarket will open its doors to V.I.P. guests with a two-hour hor d'oeuvres reception on Saturday, Aug. 23 at 5 p.m., according to an invitation sent by Phil Francis, president and CEO of the supermarket chain.

On Saturday morning, Shaw's will also hold a reception for its new associates and their families. The events— both to feature catored food and music— will precede Shaw's grand opening, which will be held the next day.

Several hundred guests— including town officials, the contractor, and others who have supported Shaw's during its recent strike-related turmoil— will be on hand for Saturday's V.I.P. reception, according to Shaw's representative Bernie Rogan.

Selectmen Chairman Mark Sullivan, who is unsure whether he will be able to attend the reception, said that he is pleased that Shaw's is opening in Cohasset.

"It's always in everyone's best interest to have competition," said Sullivan, referring to an expected rivalry between Shaw's and the Stop & Shop further down on Route 3A. "The Cohasset consumer should benefit and it will provide a good tax base for Cohasset."

Rogan expects the store to be fully staffed in the near future thanks to the $7.00 per-hour starting salary Shaw's is offering.

Town Hall is venue for teen dance

By Aleisa Fleming
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset Town Hall auditorium is getting a new look.

It's going to be decorated with plastic palm trees, fishing nets and funky colored light. But don't worry, it's only for one night.

On Friday, Aug. 22, the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol committee is turning the auditorium into a "beach" setting for its Summer Beach Dance.

The dance is for teens in grades 7 through 12. The cost is $5 and the money raised will go toward various projects the committee is looking to sponsor.

"We have been all over Cohasset posting flyers about the dance," said Alex D'Urso, a student helping the committee.

Committee secretary Jody Butman has received numerous phone calls from parents offering to be chaperones.

DJ Jay Fiori will provide free music so students can dance the night away. Other donations such as baked goods, snacks and sodas have also been received.

Margo Aiken, chairman of the committee, said she is hoping for a large turnout.

Town garage eyed as teen dance hall

By Aleisa Fleming
CORRESPONDENT

Anthony Bramblett is hoping to turn the town's old highway garage into a meeting place for area teens.

The garage, he envisions, would become a teen dance hall.

Anthony, a student on the town's Drug and Alcohol committee, met with Bob Egan this week to inspect the old garage.

"The dance club will be for students in grades 7 through 12 who want to have fun, dance and hang out," Anthony said enthusiastically.

Bramblett said the idea is to have a place for students under 18 to have a place to go on Saturday nights and dance. He is also looking for people in the community to volunteer as chaperones. "It would nice to have other people instead of just parents helping out," Anthony said.

The concept of a teen dance hall is in the very early planning stages, Anthony said.

"Right now I have some ideas, but nothing has been decided on," Anthony said. Anthony would also like to set up a board of directors, mostly students, to help organize how the dance club will operate.

He is scheduled to meet with selectmen chairman Michael Sullivan to begin writing the proposal once Egan completes the inspection.

"From what I have been told, the selectman are really excited about the dance club," said Margo Aikens, chairman of the Drug and Alcohol committee.

ing the streets off and constructing a new access road to Sestito and Castle lanes through a condominium development off Pond Street. Lincoln Lane would hook up to Gannett Pasture Lane in North Scituate.

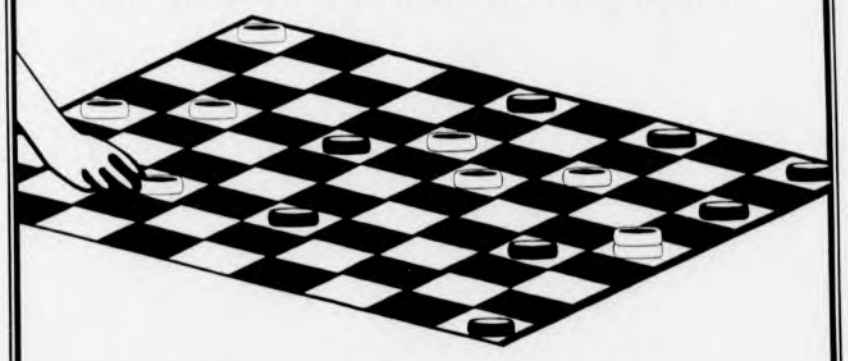
Committee members nixed both those ideas because it would be too disruptive to the residents and take too long for fire service to reach the homes. Each of the lanes contains only one or two houses.

They asked member Fire Chief Roger Lincoln explore with the residents the possibility of creating a connector road between Sestito and Castle lanes making them one way. One way traffic would allow a smaller crossing gate system. Lincoln Lane could possibly be closed off and connected to Ledgewood Estates off Brewster Road if there's an available lot.

"I'll wear my protective helmet," Lincoln joked about chatting with the affected residents.

Other mitigation committee members include Selectman Diane C. Sullivan, Michael Dick of the Conservation Commission, Tom Gruber and Martin Corry.

The other grade crossings in town will be able to accommodate four-quadrant gates, which drop across every possible lane of traffic, and median strips possibly eliminating the need for whistle blowing. However, federal railroad authorities must agree that those protective measures would be adequate before the T could get a whistle waiver, the committee explained.



The proposed bike path would be constructed by the MBTA along the right of way as mitigation for loss of open space. The town owns the old rail bed and the T will buy it back from the town for about $11,000 an acre. The bike path would be separated from the tracks by a fence, committee members said.

The committee plans to ask the T for a traffic light at the intersection of North Main, Forest and King Streets

A 44-car proposed parking lot off Pleasant Street across from James Lane is also a concern because it would affect a neighborhood. The T has promised to replace parking that is lost when the train comes. The committee would like to see if the T can create more spaces toward the far end of the town parking lot instead.

Encephalitis discovery prompts caution

By Rob Rogers
STAFF WRITER

Public health officials have advised residents not to worry following the discovery of two mosquitoes carrying Eastern equine encephalitis in Kingston last week.

Dry weather and the approaching end of the summer season will offer disease-carrying mosquitoes little chance to breed and multiply, lowering the chance that one will bite and infect a human. In addition, the two mosquitoes found carrying the virus are members of a mosquito species that bites birds, not humans.

Nevertheless, the state Department of Public Health is recommending that area residents take a few simple precautions to avoid mosquito bites.

Although saying an outbreak of the disease was "unlikely," state health officials recommended area residents avoid contact with mosquitoes during the remainder of the mosquito season, which ends with the first frost. Officials recommend wearing long-sleeved shirts and trousers when traveling outside at dawn or dusk, using a mosquito repellent containing the chemical DEET (except with infants or small children), maintaining door and window screens and eliminating standing water.

Last Monday's discovery marked the first time since 1993 Massachusetts health officials have identified mosquitoes carrying Eastern equine encephalitis. The discovery is not unusual, however, health officials said, since the virus has been detected in mosquitoes in 25 of the last 29 years. No humans or horses have contracted encephalitis this year.

Eastern equine encephalitis is an extremely rare but serious disease that affects the nervous system. Victims of the disease can suffer neurologic damage or death. The last human case of encephalitis in Massachusetts was recorded in August 1995.

Symptoms of encephalitis are a high fever, stiff neck, headache and lack of energy. A swelling of the brain is the most serious symptom. Symptoms may show up two to 10 days after infection. The disease progresses quickly, and many patients go into a coma within a week. There is no cure for the disease, and three out of every 10 people who get the disease die as a result.

News of the virus' discovery prompted a number of additional calls to the Kingston-based Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project, which monitors and manages the mosquito population in 27 communities. The agency received 451 calls last week, an average of 90 calls a day. During the 1997 summer season, the group has received 12,241 calls, 888 from Marshfield.

Because relatively few mosquitoes will be around to spread disease in the last few weeks of summer, project officials said they have no plans to increase spraying of mosquito-killing pesticides as a result of discovering the encephalitis-carrying insects.

A summer drought has meant fewer than usual mosquitoes in the area, said Ray Zucker, assistant superintendent of the project. Summer rainfall levels so far are five and a half inches below normal.

Of the 40-odd species of mosquitoes in Massachusetts, only about six carry encephalitis, Zucker said. The disease is carried by migratory birds. Horses and humans become infected when mosquitoes which bite both birds and humans transfer the encephalitis virus from a bird to a human or horse. Only a mosquito bite will carry the disease; humans cannot be infected by birds. Disease-carrying mosquitoes appear most often in the cedar swamps of southEastern Massachusetts.

Health researchers say the number of mosquitoes in Massachusetts is far below the levels present during previous years when humans have contracted encephalitis.

The state has stepped up its trapping program in Kingston to continue monitoring disease-carrying mosquitoes. The program uses traps baited with carbon dioxide, a gas exhaled by humans and other animals that attract mosquitoes.

For more information, contact the Department of Public Health State Laboratory at (617) 983-6201 or the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project at (617) 585-5450.

How to avoid mosquito bites

- Limit time spent outdoors when there is increased mosquito activity, at dawn and dusk. Wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants if outdoors during these times.
- When outdoors during periods of noticeable mosquito activity, use mosquito repellents that contain DEET. Products containing low concentrations of DEET — 15 percent or less — are for children and backyard environments. Repellents containing DEET should never be used on infants.
- Small children and infants, when resting or sleeping outdoors in playpens and carriages, should be covered by mosquito netting.
- Repair and securely fasten all screens on doors and windows of your home to keep mosquitoes out.
- Eliminate backyard mosquito breeding areas by preventing the collection of standing water in old tires, buckets, gutters or toddler swimming pools.

A mosquito gets up close and personal on human skin.

EEE packets are available

Although EEE virus has not been found in mosquitoes in Massachusetts since 1993, these isolations are not unusual as the virus has been detected in mosquitoes in 25 of the past 29 years. Multiple human cases of EEE have occurred in six years during this period, while there have been single cases of human EEE in three of the years. Numbers of mosquitoes trapped remain below average at the long term sites. Supplemental trapping using CO2-baited duplex cone traps will be initiated at the Kingston site and other sites as EEE virus is detected, to augment our collections of human-biting mosquitoes."

Packets containing basic information on Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and general measures for mosquito control are available at three Cohasset sites: Town Hall (in a receptacle mounted on the large billboard), the Community Center, and the Paul Pratt Library. This information has been provided by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the Audubon Society, and the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee (CMCC). For further information call 383-9900, Ext. 121, or leave a note in the CMCC mailbox in town hall.

South shore braces for area code change

Sarah R. Coffey
STAFF WRITER

The South Shore will soon be the recipient of a new area code, courtesy of the state Department of Public Utilities and NYNEX, but many are unaware or unconcerned with the upcoming change.

Twenty-two communities on the South Shore from Canton to Kingston will change from the current 617 area code to the newly-established 781 area code Sept. 1. A statewide three-month permissive dialing period beginning Sept. 1 will enable callers to use either the old or new dialing patterns. Beginning Dec. 1, NYNEX will begin converting its switching centers across Eastern Massachusetts to accept only the new area codes and dialing patterns.

The change will affect businesses, who will need to spend money on new letterhead, business cards, computer updates, and other area-code related expenses; and residents, who will need to adjust to a new way of dialing neighbors who had been in the same area code.

Customers must dial the seven-digit telephone numbers for local calls within the same area code; the area code plus the seven-digit number for local calls to a different area code; and the number one plus the area code plus the seven-digit telephone number for calls anywhere outside the local calling area.

The new area codes and dialing patterns will not change telephone service rates, NYNEX said.

Cellular phones, modems, fax machines, and beepers are responsible for the needed change, said Kenneth Horne from NYNEX.

"In 1988, we changed to 508, which was supposed to last for 20 years," Horne said. "In reality, it only lasted 10." Horne anticipates another change in area code for both the North and South shores in the next five to eight years. North Shore communities are being assigned to a 978 area code.

Even though the change is set to occur in less than two months, many residents and businesses seem blissfully unconcerned with the switch over.

"We haven't even thought about it," Joseph Russo, an employee for Ricciardi Construction in Hanover, said. "I don't have a clue."

Those who do have a clue include print shops, who anticipate a substantial raise in business due to companies forced to fork out cash for new signs, letterhead, and anything else with a phone number on it.

"In 1988, we changed to 508, which was supposed to last for 20 years," Horne said. "In reality, it only lasted 10." — Kenneth Horne from NYNEX.

Diane Pynn, a supervisor at Flinn Printing Company, Inc. in Hingham, has noticed an overwhelming increase in business.

"We've increased printing of local area business letterhead and business cards by more than 50 percent," Pynn said.

"We are now open on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. until the changes go through," she said.

At Cards and Shards in Cohasset, one employee said, "We have no choice, eventually we will have to make the changes. I haven't thought too much about it."

NYNEX has been in the process of informing the public since last September, Horne said.

"As soon as we knew the area code change was coming in effect, we let people know," he said. Horne admitted, however, that his friends and family were surprised when he told them of the imminent change.

"They talk to me and say 'Geez, we didn't realize that was happening'," Horne said.

NYNEX sent out press releases to newspapers, radio stations, and television stations, including a new release three weeks ago, he said. A letter is being sent this week to all cities and towns informing them of the upcoming change, and inserts will be included in phone bills for the next two months. An advertising campaign is planned for September and December when the big changes will occur.

"I don't know what more" we can do, he said.

Ronald Zooleck of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce felt the changeover is "not as easy as the telephone company is leading is to believe," anticipating businesses' being hurt by added printing expenses.

Seery said the change will cost his business upwards of $8,000 to change business cards, letterhead, direct mailing lists, and hours of manpower to manually change information on 5,500 customers stored in his computers.

The chamber made the decision to support the upcoming change mainly to "get it over and done with," Zooleck said.

Zooleck chalked up the apparent lack of concern over the change on people's unwillingness to deal with things until they are an imminent problem.

"People don't react until it becomes a crisis," he said. "They say 'I know it's coming', but some don't want to deal with it."

Ron Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics in Cohasset said,"I am more concerned with the UPS strike than the area code change."

"We've had to use the post office, or using our own trucks to deliver shirts to Boston three tines a week," Goodwin said.

Goodwin said he hasn't made any changes for his company yet, but knows he will soon have to.

Tony Amonte: The Samson of the NHL

Local star nets 41 goals, big contract with help of long hairdo

By David McKee
STAFF WRITER

If you want to become a high-scoring superstar in the NHL all you have to do is grow your hair.

At least that's what worked for Hingham's Tony Amonte during the '96-'97 hockey season for the Chicago Blackhawks.

Amonte, 27, finished 11th in the NHL with 41 goals, as his hair, untouched by scissors all season, flowed well beneath his helmet to the middle of his back.

Amonte, already in his fifth professional season, decided to become an NHL version of Samson after he began scoring bunches of goals early in the year.

"It was kind of a gimmick but it was good luck for me," Amonte said of his peculiar grooming habits. "I was playing well so I didn't want to make a change and cut my hair."

Hockey players are generally a superstitious lot and Amonte wasn't about to break up a good thing, especially in the final year of his contract and free agency right around the corner.

So Amonte's hair kept growing and the goals kept finding the back of the net. He ended up having a career-year for the Blackhawks.

"It was traumatic for me to even consider getting a trim," Amonte laughed. "But it ended up as my best year, so what can I say? It worked."

Not too shabby for a player who grew up playing youth hockey in Hingham before attending Thayer Academy in Braintree and Boston University.

After the '96-'97 season came to a close, Amonte did two important things.

First, he got a haircut.

And second, he signed a five-year, $15 million contract to stay with the Blackhawks.

"It was good timing for me," Amonte said of his 41-goal season in the final year of his contract. "But I really wanted to stay in Chicago and I let management know that. And they wanted me to stay just as badly."

Amonte signed a five-year deal earlier this month without testing the free agent waters.

"I was looking for a contract of that length," he said. "I didn't want a two or three-year deal like a lot of players are getting these days."

Amonte also wanted to avoid a prolonged and potentially bitter

Cohasset swimmers sink Scituate

Cohasset swim team marched on last Monday in its quest for an undefeated season, beating the formidable Scituate Yacht Club team. Team members and fans roared with encouragement as Cohasset swimmers poured it on, resulting in yet another victory.

The team has one more meet, against Duxbury Yacht Club, before the regional championship meet at Wheaton College August 16.

Special congratulations to the following swimmers for rapid decreases in their times over the last several weeks: Becca Butman, Ashley Cook, Arianna Dedes, Sera Genovese, Martha Henderson, Kelly Hurley, Main Marry, Maura McKenney, Marissa Mello, Nicole Needle, Krista Nicynski, Delia Regan, Alicia Sanchez, Emily Simmons, Cally Speed, Cally Steele and Nicole Turgiss. Keep up the good work.

Here are the results of the Cohasset vs. Scituate meet.

In the boys eight and under medley relay the team of Alexander Hunt, Corey Faber, Reed Dickenson and Nick Zappolo came in first, and the team of Peter Ernst, Wesley Ulmer, Ben Flynn and J. McCarthy came in second.

In the girls eight and under medley relay the team of Vanessa Plante, Lindsay Durkin, Caren Garber and Megan Sacks came in first, and the team of Alyssa Campbell, Michelle Madge, Samantha Lehr and Abigail Markert came in second.

In the boys 10 and under medley relay the team of Noah Wilcox, Zach Markert, Parker Berg and Teddie Straughn came in first, and the team of Dan McCarthy, Will McCarthy, Colin Regan and Jake Previte came in second.

In the girls 10 and under medley relay the team of Jenna Larson, Ashley Faber, Becca Lehr and Casey Anderson came in first, and the team of Amanda Barrow, Corey Steffens, Rachel Garber and Mary Silvia came in second.

In the boys 17 and under medley relay team of Derek Bugley, John Crowley-Buck, Justin Golden and Mike O'Hart came in first, and the team of Matt Farley, Chris Golden, Jodi Roach and Nate Wilcox came in second.

In the girls 17 and under medley relay the team of Hillary Habershaw, Kimberly Ulmer, Alison Berg and Gemma O'Brien came in first and the team of Kellie Straughn, Cara Foley, Carly Carter and Jen Chastain came in second.

Tony Amonte: The Samson of the NHL

contract negotiation. He saw first-hand how ugly that situation could be when 50-goal scorer and Marshfield resident Jeremy Roenick went through contract negotiations with Blackhawk management two years ago.

Roenick, who played on the same line with Amonte at Thayer Academy in high school, ended up playing for the Phoenix Coyotes this year after leaving Chicago with a bitter taste in his mouth.

"Unfortunately, that's the business of hockey," Amonte said with a shake of his head when talking about Roenick's departure from the Blackhawks. "Jeremy is my best friend in the world and I wished something could have been done to keep him in Chicago. But I think even Jeremy would admit that his departure was the best thing for me. I got more chances to show my skills and more ice time. It was nice knowing I would be out there on every power play and would be on the ice when the game was on the line. I think I took advantage of my chances this year."

Amonte was at the Brant Rock gift shop in Marshfield last week to sign autographs with Calgary Flame and Hingham resident Marty McInnis. The duo was in Brant Rock to raise funds for the Melanson family of Hingham. Other local NHL stars, such as former Stanley Cup champions Chris Nilan and Bobby Sheehan, also signed autographs at Brant Rock.

In June, Eric Melanson, a former HHS hockey player, was killed in a car accident in Hingham.

The newly-shorn Amonte spends his off-season at his summer home in Humarock and works out continually with McInnis and personal trainer Ed Connors.

NHL training camp begins in a few weeks for Amonte and McInnis.

Amonte used to also work out with his sister, Kelly, an All-American and two-time NCAA women's lacrosse champion at the University of Maryland. However, Kelly now works full-time for Brine athletic equipment after graduating from college. With her scoring records, All-American status and back-to-back NCAA titles, Kelly Amonte is considered by many as the finest women's lacrosse player in the country.

"I still do the same workouts and try to work just as hard," Amonte said. "I want to keep improving in hockey and my off-season training is very important to me."

However, Amonte will probably keep his hair short for a while.

With a five-year, $15 million contract, who needs luck?

THE FISH STORY

MARK TRASK

Fishing stays as hot as the summer weather

The fish are jumping.

Yeah, heard that before. The fish are jumping into the boat. Say again?

The fish are jumping into the boat. Nick Welz and Joe Litchfield couldn't believe it. But it happened to them. Nick and Joe had spent the afternoon feeding shiners to the hungry fish of Old Oaken Bucket Pond in Scituate and had decided to call it a day.

On the long slow lazy paddle back to the car, a pound-and-a-half bass flipped clear of the water and landed flapping nose over tail in the bottom of the canoe. Laughing at the odd happenstance, Nick slid the bass back into the warm water. Joe laughed till his sides hurt. No one is going to believe this, he said.

Two days earlier, Nick and Joe had a more conventional day in Marshfield. The big fish of the day tipped the scale at 7 pounds even and measured off 23 and 1/2 inches, a fine largemouth bass. Several others in the 4-5-pound range gorged on the big rubber worms they were using. Up at Lily, Greg Lowrance had the big fish of the day using shiners.

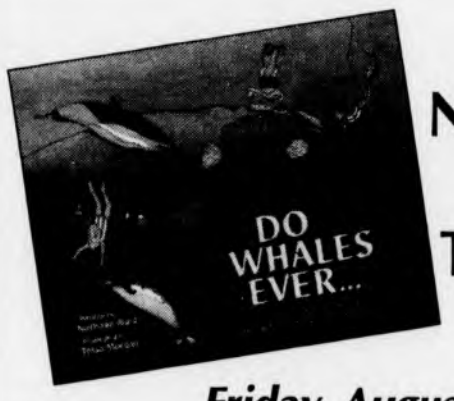
Anybody tired of catching stripers yet?

Dr. Barry Tufts and the clan dropped umbrella rigs over the side soon after clearing the Tar Pouch Buoy and soon were battling a steady stream of bluefish. You put us right on the fish, Barry chortled, as young Barry hoisted a fat blue for the camera. Everybody wore themselves out hauling in blues. Even Margaret? Yes, even Margaret! Many boaters had similar results over the last few days as massive schools of bluefish once again shifted into the shallow waters looking for food.

Others found a resurgence of bass ready to take tube and worm rigs. From the Graves to almost every area, south bass were obliging new angler and old salt alike. George Dolan took a few hours off from Tedeschi's and floated pogie chunks over the falls at Cohasset Harbor. The sun was setting as George's bass was hung on the official scale, 18 pounds and 14 ounces on a 39-inch frame. Mark Roder nailed a 35-inch racer bass on a mackerel chunk at the North Scituate Beach. Mike Daly took a page out of Jim Klix's fishing tactics and used a whole pogie to fool a hungry 27-pound bass near Boston Light. Mike's fish cleared 44 inches and was a tagged fish. Mike will be reporting his latest catch to help the biologists track the striper's progress. Tags are generally found on the lower rear flank toward the tail. They look like a small rubbery straw, which is attached perpendicularly to the skin of the bass. They may be orange, yellow or white, or any combination of faded color and stained brown depending on how long it's been attached. If you find one, there are usually instructions printed on them.

Mark and Paul spent a pleasant two weeks fishing the Great Point area of Nantucket and found it loaded with blues and keeper stripers. Dave Alexander nailed a wild bass out near Minot's Light. The 24-pound, 43-inch linesider gobbled Dave's pogie chunk and headed for Portugal. By the time the fight was over and Dave had boated the bass, it had wrangled the hook straight! Rory got another 17-pounder. Rory, dare you to catch a 20! Richie Figueredo hauled in a fat 41-incher near the Graves ledges. Pogies have been hot for the boating anglers.

Carl Wagner was in picking up some more bucktail jigs. How are they doing? Pat Cochran jigged up a 29-1/2-pound striper on a red Cape Cod jig, while Jean maneuvered the boat. Guess she knows where they are! Carl, what color are you getting? Shhh, he said with a smile, as a fistful of red jigs dropped into the bag.



Mike Russell is the current leader in the Beachcomber Tournament. Mike's 25-pound, 3-ounce bass takes the early lead. Mike used a tube and worm rig to entice the nice striper near the Grampuses. Nice start! Anglers wishing to sign up may do so daily at the store. Beachcomber T-shirts are also available.

Catch one that's hard to carry!

It's a four-peat for the Last Call squad

The Cohasset Mens Softball League championship trophy did not have to change it's address. The Last Call won the prize for the fourth consecutive year.

Last Call exploded with 11 runs in the final inning of the rubber game to defeat a spirited team from Scituate, Who's on First. The all-Cohasset squad consists of four Dooley boys, (Den, Joe, Tom and Kevin), Jay Fiori, Paul Buckley, Tim Farrell, Joe Masci, Mark Froio, Dave Patroli and Don Cahill.

The MVP trophy went to Tom Dooley who only made two outs in the whole series. This was Tom's second trophy of the week; his wife, Ann announced she is expecting with their third child.

Other highlights of the series included great catches by Joe Masci, Joe Dooley and Dave Patroli.

Paul Buckley Tom Dooley and Tim Farrell hit monstrous home runs.

Jay Fiori and Den Dooley (CHS Class of /72) combined for 14 hits in the three games.

Coach Kevin Dooley led the way with nine RBI while Mark Froio and Don Cahill scored eight runs each.

The Cohasset softball league is an over-30 league and is in its 20th year.

The season runs from May to August and the games are played on Sunday afternoons.

If you would to join a team or put a team in the league, inform one of the league's members.

Teens enjoy being tour guides at local museum

By Robert Ziff
CORRESPONDENT

Question: What summer occupation for Cohasset High School students would allow them to meet people from all around the country and the world without leaving the town, looks good on a resume, pays an ample amount of money, is not unduly time consuming, and is also educational? The answer to this riddle is being a docent for the Captain John Wilson House on Elm Street.

"It's not a bad summer job," said Craig Davis who was on duty with Evan Cutler Thursday afternoon. "I was able to learn a lot about the history of Cohasset that I didn't know before and I'm getting paid $5.25 an hour to boot," the going rate for high school docents.

"Sometimes it's slow when there are no visitors and we read or play cards, but when it rains it pours and several groups of people will show up at the same time and then we have our hands full," he said.

Patricia Murphy, a retired teacher, who now serves on the board of directors for the Cohasset Historical Society, said, "It's important for kids in Cohasset to recognize what a treasure the town is."

She, along with Annette Sawchuk, were primarily responsible for starting the "Docent Program" four years ago, is very pleased with the success it's had. Murphy says that she and David Wadsworth, the curator of the Maritime Museum next door, stop by often to see how things are going.

"They all meet at the beginning of the summer," Murphy says, "to learn about the history of Cohasset and the Wilson house along with other training that goes along with being a docent. They're a good group of kids," she adds and hopes that one day they will be able to bring their own children to the museum.

Abby Butman, another docent, says that she enjoys it because she had never really known much about the history of Cohasset before this and she also gets to meet interesting people. She mentioned that one of the aspects of being a docent was that they were each assigned a room and they had to catalog and characterize each item. Butman was too young for the position last year, however, this fall, she will be a freshman at Cohasset High School and was able to secure the opening.

"I was able to learn a lot about the history of Cohasset that I didn't know before and I'm getting paid $5.25 an hour to boot."
— CRAIG DAVIS.

During their stay many visitors to Cohasset over the years have come to take a tour of Captain John Wilson House. The house was built in 1810 by David Nichols and sold to John Wilson, who was a candle maker, for $475. Wilson added several rooms including a kitchen, a birthing room, and a bedroom, upstairs. Over the nearly past two centuries the structure has served as a home for various families, as well as a candy store, a taylor shop and an ice cream parlor. Today the house is furnished with art work, furniture and other necessities of that time period, and is open to the public free of charge, but donations are accepted.

When one enters the house he or she is greeted by one of 10 high school docents who include Liz Myers, Meagan Leahy, Abby Butman, Tom Anderson, Tim Grassey, Peter Minnar, Evan Cutler, Craig Evans, Susan Dane and Craig Davis. They give a tour to the visitors, explain about the house and what the furnishings consist of, and answer any questions that the visitors may have.

"Because we leave the front door open," Craig said, "now and then a dog will come walking in and it's our duty to see it back to the door but that's about as much excitement as we get around here."

The museum is sponsored by the Cohasset Historical Society and opened June 1 through September every day except Mondays. The docents alternate the days they work so it works out to be a pretty relaxed schedule.

Plans are to continue the "Docent Program" next year and for the foreseeable future, so if you are a high school student and may be interested in doing this next summer, call the Cohasset Historical Society at 14 Summer St. in Cohasset.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Opting for a bigger safety net can help in an emergency

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

What happens if your homeowners or auto insurance is not enough to cover a liability? If you are President Clinton or O.J. Simpson, you were smart enough to purchase an umbrella insurance policy for the proverbial rainy day. The president's umbrella policies are paying to defend him against defamation charges that are part of Paula Jones's sexual-harassment lawsuit. And O.J.'s policy paid for his defense in his civil trial.

WORTH

Personal umbrella policies are the safety net beneath the safety net. They provide liability protection beyond the point where your auto or homeowner policies leave off. And they are not just for the famous.

Let's say, for example, your auto insurance policy covers $100,000 per person (for injury) with a maximum outlay of $300,000 per accident – a pretty standard policy. And you hit a bus filled with people. An umbrella policy would cover the medical costs that exceeded your 100/300 limit. Or, an umbrella would cover the costs to fight such a lawsuit for damages.

"Consolidating your auto, homeowners and umbrella with one insurer, you can usually qualify for a 15% discount."

Jayna Neagle
Insurance Information Institute

Umbrellas often include coverage for things that standard homeowners and auto insurance policies do not, such as wrongful death, wrongful eviction, defamation – basically most lawsuits except those involving sexual-harassment, discrimination, business activities or an intentional criminal act. (Clinton's policy covers him for defamation – one of the issues in the Paula Jones's lawsuit)

Each state and insurance company has guidelines and policies about which kinds of lawsuits are covered and which are not. Check with your insurance representative for specific details concerning the umbrella policies offered.

Umbrella policies may be among the best buys in insurance. For between $100 and $300 per year you can get $1 million in liability coverage. Additional coverage is often sold in million-dollar increments. After the first $1 million, the cost usually drops to between $50 and $75 per $1 million, says Jayna Neagle, a spokesperson for the Insurance Information Institute.

In comparison, an auto insurance policy with 100/300 coverage and other standard benefits might cost you between $500 and $1,000 a year.

What's more, many insurance companies will give you a discount for buying an umbrella along with other of their policies. "Consolidating your auto, homeowners and umbrella with one insurer, you can usually qualify for a 15% discount," says Neagle. Umbrella policies are relatively cheap, even on their own, because "very few people (file) umbrella claims," says Tracy Mordock, senior claims consultant at State Farm Insurance Cos. in Bloomington, Ill. "That's why we can afford to sell so much coverage."

That does not mean umbrellas aren't worth it. It only takes one big accident or lawsuit to jeopardize your financial future, after all. Insurance essentially protects your assets, so you don't have to sell your car to cover medical bills or to sell your house to pay for damages. Umbrella liability kicks in after you exhaust the liability limit of your home or auto policy.

You may feel that your standard auto policy coverage of $300,000 in personal damages per accident is sufficient. But that policy may only cover $25,000 to $50,000 in property damage; an adequate limit unless you cause an accident that damages a bridge and three expensive cars, each car worth at least $25,000. In that instance, $1 million umbrella policy could save you from financial ruin.

"I had a client – a lawyer – who was driving and hit a 35-year-old pediatrician making $400,000 a year," says Rick Blank, an independent insurance broker at Preferred Services Group in White Plains, New York. The pediatrician put in a claim for 30 years of lost income. Luckily, Blank says, the lawyer's $5 million umbrella more than covered the $1.2 million settlement.

Examples like these show that it can be crucial to purchase insurance that will cover big accidents and lawsuits, not just everyday bumps and scratches that you could possibly afford to pay for.

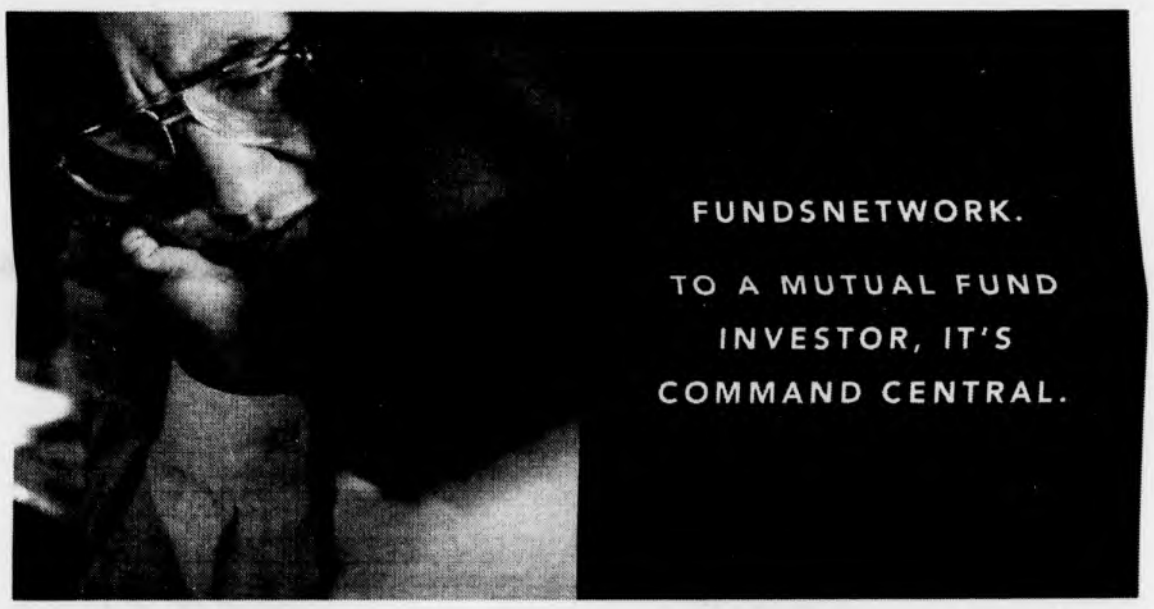
"You should self-insure for the small things like fender-benders and buy insurance to protect against financial ruin," says Robert Hunter, director of insurance at Consumer Federation of America.

Those people who need umbrella coverage most – and who are charged higher rates – are highly visible within their community or by a larger public audience, and could be perceived as having "deep pockets." They are the ones who are most likely to be sued, even if they don' t have significant assets to protect.

You don't need to be Bill Clinton or O.J. Simpson to qualify as one of that group. "You could be a spokesperson or a TV reporter, someone who puts their name and face out there," says Neagle.

But it is true that the more assets you have, the greater the importance of having liability coverage which will protect them. Your odds of being sued increase if you own more than one home or car.

There are other people who fall into the high-risk category because they own property that introduces the possibility of damages: people with swimming pools, boats, hunting property or an aggressive dog.



A $1 million umbrella policy should cover potential liabilities for most people, says Bill Watson of Independent Insurance Agents of Tennessee. "I would say for well over 90% of people, $1 million is adequate. It's very rare for people to be sued for more" he says.

The Your Money's Worth article on auto insurance, which appeared on this page the week of July 27, included information not applicable in Massachusetts. The article discussed competitive ratings for individuals, something which is not allowed under state law. Massachusetts only allows competitive ratings for groups — an example being the American Automobile Association (AAA). Furthermore, the companies mentioned in the article are not licensed to do business in this state.

Grand Canyon offers unparalleled beauty and serenity

By Linda Saulnier
CNC Travel Correspondent

How shall I see thee? Let me count the ways. By mule? By river? By air? On foot?

Some would say the only way to see the Grand Canyon is to descend the breathtaking chasm to the Colorado River, or walk the limestone rim while a park ranger explains two million years of layered rock.

Others prefer to view the steep slopes and burnt-orange mesas from a luxurious balcony suite at the El Tovar Hotel that stands on the grounds of the Grand Canyon National Park. Still others catch their first glance from the platform of a vintage steam engine as it chugs into the park's historic log cabin depot.

Yet, of the more than four million tourists who visit the Grand Canyon every year, most only stay two hours. That is just enough time to stop at a lookout and capture the panoramic vista on film or video. More's the pity. Because if you stay, you can indulge in activities only a natural wonder of the world can offer and many of them are free.

"Each day the park service runs from five to 10 different naturalist programs led by an interpretive ranger," says Laurel Angell, spokesperson for the Grand Canyon National Park. "We have fossil walks, hikes and geological walks all free of charge. The park admission fee is $20 per car."

During the day, guided hikes coincide with sunrise and sunset, which Angell attests is nothing less than spectacular.

Guided hikes to Cedar Ridge and the more secluded Kaibab Trail take three-to-four hours. Cedar Ridge drops an elevation of 940 feet and is doable as long as you don't have a heart problem or walking difficulties,

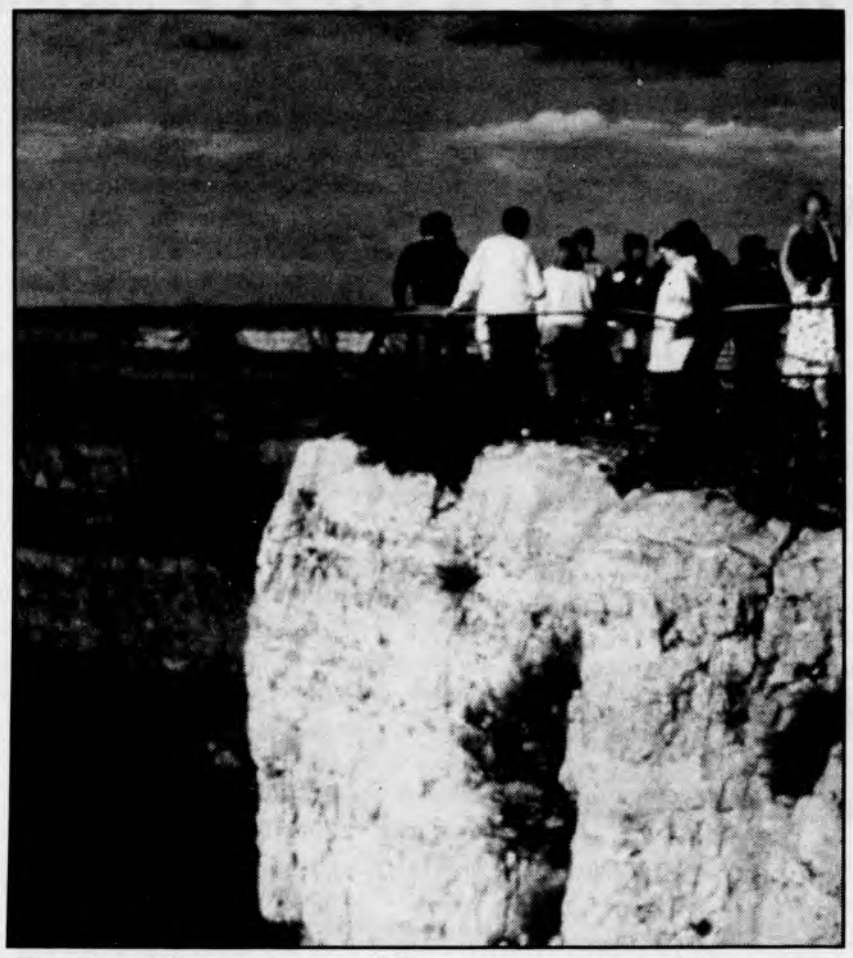
Angell says. The Kaibab Trail elevation is 780 feet but steeper and unpaved. Kids do fine on the Cedar Ridge hike but Angell doesn't recommend they hike Kaibab. If you prefer, get a permit from the rangers to hike or backpack on your own.

A hand-out of do's and don'ts is available from the park service. Do bring plenty of water, snacks and juice. Don't hike in the heat of the day. Remember that once you get down the canyon, you have to get back up, which takes twice as long and is twice as strenuous.

"People do misjudge it so we started an aggressive education campaign this summer," Angell explains.

The canyon's South Rim is the base for most park programs and tourist activities including shuttle busses that take you to overlooks. You can drive to some overlooks yourself but others are accessible only by shuttle during the summer.

The canyon's North Rim is far less populated than the South Rim and an imposing 1,000 feet higher reaching an 8,000 foot elevation. Angell says that if you look across the canyon from the park, the north rim is only 10 miles away but it is a four-hour drive. Plan on substantial changes in temperature when you visit the Grand Canyon.



America Facilities Parks and Resorts, Inc., AMFAC, operates six hotels inside the park and two are on the South Rim. Lodging ranges from $39 plus tax for a rustic room with a bed and sink but a bathroom down the hall to a luxury suite at the El Tovar for $280 plus tax per night per room. Most of the accommodations are in the range of $80 to $110 per night per room with a $9 per person charge for more than two people.

AMFAC manages all the tours, concessions and attractions inside the park including the mule and bus tours. Spokesperson, Missy Ecija, says mule expeditions sell out 11 months in advance during the summer months. You have to be 4 feet 7 inches tall, under 200 pounds and speak enough English to understand directions to take the trek by mule down the canyon. The mules have special shoes put on in winter that grab the terrain.

Phantom Ranch at the bottom of the canyon has rustic accommodations and the only way you can get there is to hike or come by river raft or mule. Ecija says meals range from steak to vegetarian. There is a concession and a camper store.

"We don't have a lot for kids to do at night in the way of video games and we don't have any swimming pools," cautions Ecija.

The Grand Canyon Railway will bring you to the Grand Canyon National Park aboard a restored steam locomotive. The vintage train leaves from Williams, a quaint town near Flagstaff, and arrives at the park's historic district two hours and

15 minutes later pulling into an authentic log cabin depot, one of only three left in the United states.

"It puts you in the right frame of mind for a wild west train ride," says Railway spokesperson, Julia Andrick.

When all are aboard naturalists from the Grand Canyon Field Institute give talks and answer questions. Strolling musicians entertain you. Depending on your budget, you can ride coach class in a restored 1923 Harriman car or first class in the plush Chief's Car complete with open air platform off the back for excellent picture taking. In between there is the Coconino Car that has two levels. The lower level has recliner chairs next to oversize windows. Above is the exclusive Dome Car that seats only 20.

As a classroom, the Grand Canyon has few educational peers. The Grand Canyon Field Institute, an extension of the park service, offers more in-depth naturalist classes that involve from one-to-ten days in the canyon sometimes in remote areas others don't get to see. They are held mid-March through mid-November but they lighten up during the heat of the summer. Typically, they are for adults but on many different experience levels.

John Frazier, director of the institute, says there are beginner classes though you have to be somewhat fit to take them.

A popular class is the four-day venture that leaves from the South Rim and begins with a day-long orientation. The second day the class hikes down the heart of the canyon and stays two nights. The middle day is spent hiking to the Colorado River. The class costs $180 for the four days and is limited to 10 people. You bring your own food and equipment. Rental equipment is available at the institute.

Old-fashioned fun: New York's Lake George resort area

By Marci Bailey
CNC Travel Correspondent

My husband and I have fond memories of Lake George. Never mind that the memories date back nearly 30 years, long before we met.

As youngsters, we each were fortunate enough to visit Lake George with our families. I remember making friends, riding a speed boat and going out to dinner dressed identically to my younger sister. My husband remembers a favorite pinball game and using his allowance to buy his oldest brother an ice cream sundae for his birthday.

Lake George is located 222 miles from Boston, about a four-hour drive. At 32 miles long, it is known as "The Queen of American Lakes," with 109 miles of shoreline and about 300 islands.

Decades later the same simple pleasures remain abundant in and around Lake George, in New York State's Adirondack Mountains. Lake George is the ultimate family resort, with activities to please all ages. Starting at the beginning of the alphabet with "airplane rides" and making it nearly to letter "z" with the "Wild West Ranch and Western Town," the Lake George area offers hundreds of activities both on and off the lake.

Lake George is located 222 miles from Boston, about a four-hour drive. At 32 miles long, it is known as "The Queen of American Lakes," with 109 miles of shoreline and about 300 islands.

True to my memory, speed boating is still one of the most popular activities. At 44 square miles, crowds are rare. Families frequently drop anchor at Paradise and Log Bay for a day of swimming. Those looking for peace and quiet can slip into a secluded cove.

Off the water, the surrounding mountains offer extensive trails for hiking, biking or just enjoying the vistas. The Warren County Mountain Bike Trail System covers 180 miles of trails to suit all ability levels.

The 10-mile Warren County Bikeway starts at the southern tip of Lake George and ends in Queensbury. The path meanders through mountains, avoiding street and highways. While most of the trip is flat, there are some rolling hills.

While there are many golf courses and tennis courts available for those not exhausted from swimming and hiking, history buffs won't want to miss Fort Ticonderoga, to the lake's north, and Fort William Henry, to the south. Both provide great history lessons, with loud and colorful re-enactments of battles long past. Fort William Henry was built by the English to defend against the French and Indians in the war of the same name. Movie buffs may recognized Fort William Henry as the setting for "Last of the Mohicans."

Fort Ticonderoga has its place in the Revolutionary War. It was seized one month into that war from the English by Ethan Allen, Benedict Arnold and the Green Mountain Boys. The fort fell without loss of a single life and was the first American victory in the Revolution.

Lake George's high season gets in gear just after school is out and lasts through Labor Day. With literally hundreds of accommodations, there is something for all tastes and budgets. Large hotels, inns, bed and breakfasts and campgrounds all abound.

"There are still vacancies, because we have so many resorts," says Chris Molella, office manager for the Lake George Regional Chamber of Commerce, Inc.

The fun comes to a climax in late August. The 23rd annual family festival, with concerts, arts and crafts, clowns, and face painting, among other activities will run from Aug. 19 through Aug. 24. "[Lake George] is very much geared toward the family," Molella says.

For more information on Lake George, contact the Lake George Regional Chamber of Commerce at (518) 668-5755; in July and August only, the Chamber adds a second number, (518) 668-2846.

You can also check Warren County, NY, Tourism Department at their Web site with information on accommodationsand attractions at www.adirondacks.org/lakegeorge or call 1-800-365-1050, ext. 5100.

Old and new featured at Marshfield fair

What do sheep, pygmy goats, swine, sharks, cows, chickens, and fruit-sniffing beagles have in common?

All will make appearances at the 130th annual Marshfield Fair, set to wow audiences with both agricultural demonstrations and more modern attractions, beginning Aug. 15 and running through Aug. 24.

Marshfield residents who show some kind of proof of residency can get into the fair for $1 the first day of the fair.

Favorite attractions from years past continue to draw crowds, along with new acts designed to please both the young and old.

While new-fangled attractions are featured, such as monster trucks, demolition derbies, and wrestling, agricultural awareness continues to be the mission of the fair, run by the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

"The fair tries to draw people in with car shows and other entertainment, but while people are on the grounds, they get exposed to the agriculture exhibits," Bob Burns, publicity director for the fair, said. "It's education on the importance of agriculture."

New acts this year include circus performances, garden club displays, an open horse show, the Raptor Project, featuring birds of prey, and a live "oldies" show, broadcast live by WATD radio.

"We like to have different things as we move forward," Burns said. "People want to see something different."

The fair still has its share of old favorites, including 4-H displays and competition, the Kris 6-horse Belgian hitch and display, agriculture and horticulture exhibits, and Joie Chitwood's Chevy Thunder thrill show.

The pumpkin contest continues this year, with a second pumpkin contest limited to residents of Bristol, Plymouth, and Norfolk county held Aug. 17.

"It's for people who try hard at it - we're calling it the non-pros," Burns said.

Musical attractions include the North River Blues Festival Aug. 17; Masquerade, a musical troupe, Aug. 19; and the Green Harbor Rhythm and Blues Festival Aug. 24.

Fireworks are held Aug. 16 and Aug. 23 at 9:30 p.m.

Admission to the fair is $5 weekdays, $6 weekends for adults; $4 weekdays, $5 weekends for seniors; and $2 weekdays, $3 weekends for children 6-12. Children under 5 are free. Fairgrounds parking is $2. Gates open at noon Mon.-Fri. and 10 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Gates close daily at 10 p.m.

Police status report for June

June was a relatively active month for the Cohasset Police Department. There were a total of 17 arrests: five were for motor vehicle violations; four were for Protective Custody. There were two each for warrant arrests and Possession of Class A Substance. There was one arrest for Possession of Class D and one for Possession of Class E. Finally there was one arrest each for operating under the influence and for minor in possession of alcohol.

There were two breaking and enterings reported during the month of June. One was a business and one was a residence.

During June, the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 135 E-9-1-1 calls.

On June 26, our Domestic Violence Officer, Ptl. Lisa Matos, attended a conference in Dedham held by the Office of the District Attorney's Domestic Violence Unit in which they discussed the different issues that continue to arise in the handling of these complex cases.

Also, during June the bicycle patrol was reinstituted around the town. The safety officer is in the process of reviewing parking in the square area of town.

That's Cohasset PALS officer Lisa Matos, on the ground, helping a cyclist perform a stunt at the recent bicycle safety day during Summer Playground sponsored by the recreation department.

Dutch carillonneur to present recital

The 73rd Annual Series of Summer Carillon Recitals from the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset will continue Sunday, Aug. 24, at 6 p.m. with a performance by Carlo van Ulft, city carillonneur of Venlo and Hilvarenbeek, The Netherlands. Mr. van Ulft has recently been appointed city carillonneur of Centralia, Illinois for a period of one year, and will assume that post later this summer.

St. Stephen's Church overlooks Main Street and the Common in Cohasset Village. The carillon recital will take place rain or shine; in case of bad weather, the bells may be heard from parked cars. Blankets, lawn chairs and picnic suppers are invited. Printed programs may be found in the wooden stand near the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, and will also be distributed on the Common and at other designated listening places, along with recital schedules and brochures describing the carillon. At the close of the recital, interested listeners are invited to gather in the Highland Avenue courtyard for a tour of the tower and demonstration of the instrument. For further information, call Sally Slade Warner, St. Stephen's carillonneur at (508) 475-2599, Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur, at (617) 383-9599, or the church office at (617) 383-1083.

Request program to end Cohasset carillon series

Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset, will play the final recital in the 73rd Annual Summer Carillon Recital Series on the 57-bell Cohasset carillon. The program will take place Sunday evening, Aug. 31, at 6 p.m., rain or shine. Featured will be requests submitted previously by listeners, as well as a selection of original carillon music, popular tunes, hymns, and transcriptions of works for other musical media.

The Cohasset carillon is an instrument containing 57 English cast bronze bells, and is housed in the square English Gothic tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, overlooking Main Street and the Common in Cohasset Village. The locations where the carillon may best be heard are listed on the back of the printed program which may be obtained at the wooden stand by the church courtyard on Highland Avenue, along with brochures describing the carillon. Listeners are invited to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers. There is no charge for the concert. Following the recital, interested listeners are invited to gather in the courtyard on Highland Avenue for a guided tower tour and demonstration of the carillon.

For further information, telephone the church office at (617) 383-1083 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., or Sally Slade Warner at (508) 475-2599, or Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur, at (617) 383-9599.

Family fun night at Paragon Carousel features local storyteller

Children are encouraged to come dressed in their pajamas for the next Family Fun Night at the Paragon Carousel. On Wednesday, Aug. 6, Randy Zella, host of the local cable television show "Snuggle Up With Me" will entertain children with selected stories. Zella will be taping for her local show which will air Friday, Aug. 8, at 7 p.m. on Channel 3 in Hull.

Stories will begin at 7:10 p.m. and 7:40 p.m. This will allow children to take a ride on the Carousel as well, and wish their favorite horse goodnight! Stuffed animals and pillows are more than welcome during storytelling.

There is no charge for the storytelling. Rides on the Carousel are additional; a single ride ticket is $1.50 per person, a ten ride ticket can be purchased for $13.50. Family Fun Night will take place rain or shine.

The Family Fun Night series will come to a close August 20 with a free family concert by local performer Dawna Hammers. The concert will take place at 7 p.m. across the street from the Carousel at The Bernie King Pavilion, and will immediately be followed by a sing-a-long at the Carousel.

The Paragon Carousel is open seven days a week during the summer from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. For more information on Family Fun Night and the Carousel, please call 925-0472.

Cohasset artists featured in Faculty Focus exhibition

The South Shore Art Center announces an exhibition of work by 34 faculty artists in the Bancroft Gallery of the South Shore Art Center from Aug. 15 to Sept. 21. This diverse exhibition includes the work of nine Cohasset artists including Kimberlee Connelly Alemian (paintings), Nancy Hansen Connolly (mixed media), Julie Hawkins (photography), Ros Farbush (paintings), Lisa 0. Marder (paintings), Patricia McCarthy (watercolors), Michael McNabb (sculpture)), Claffy Williams (monoprints). This exhibition will also include drawings, ceramics, pastels and other media by faculty artists from other South Shore towns, as well as Boston and Cape Cod. Several of the artists have enjoyed an outstanding reputation with the Center for more than 25 years while others have joined the faculty within the year, offering new courses and perspectives. Many of the exhibiting artists will be teaching a course or workshop at the Art Center in the upcoming fall term, which begins Sept. 22.

This exhibition was curated by Scituate resident Susan Nalband, with assistance from Connie Cummings, Education Coordinator at the South Shore Art Center. Exhibition events include an opening reception Friday, Aug. 15, from 6 to 8 p.m. and free docent gallery talks Aug. 17 and Sept. 21 at 2 p.m.

Other exhibiting faculty artists include Virginia Avery (Marshfield), Donna Basile (Scituate), Mary Bell (Hingham), Mary Callahan (Marshfield), Tara Law Campbell (Marshfield), Marion Carlson (Abington), George Dalton (E. Falmouth), Susan Fusco-Fazio (Braintree), Becky Haletky (Rockland), Tom Hannon (Rockland), Anne Heywood (E. Bridgewater), Janet Killian (Worchester), Lis Koopman-Wyman (Weymouth), Mary Lizotte (Norwell), Patricia Marshall (Hull), Esther Maschio (Scituate), Lauren O'Neal (Chelsea), Margaret Pace (Brighton), Donna Rossetti-Bailey (Marshfield), Judy Rossman (Scituate), Eileen Rotty (Scituate), Ruthe Sholler (Quincy), James Smalley (Scituate), Lauren Teller (Hull), Valerie Vitali (Scituate), Mary Wilkas (Boston).

During the same time period of Aug. 15 to Sept. 21, the South Shore Art Center's Dillon Gallery will host a Featured Gallery Artist Exhibition with the work of Cohasset artist JoAnne Chittick as well as Joreen Benbenek (Marshfield), Elizabeth Bourne (Scituate), A. Carol Carney (Scituate), Elizabeth Baglione (Hull), Nancy Howell (Dedham), and Gordon Lunderg (Hingham).

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday noon to 4 p.m. The South Shore Art Center is wheelchair-accessible. For further information on these exhibitions and upcoming fall courses, with registration beginning Aug. 11 and classes beginning Sept. 22, call (617) 383-ARTS (2787).

Maritime Museum is open

Health board gets its hand slapped — again

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

For the second time this summer, selectmen gave the board of health a public tongue lashing over what they perceive as its lack of team play with the sewer commission.

What's at issue is how independently elected boards should interact when their jurisdictions overlap and whether or not the town should present a united front when the state is involved.

At the centerpiece of the dispute are two health board letters which relate to Cohasset's legally binding sewer agreement with the state that includes management over some septic systems in town. Septic systems fall under the purview of the board of health.

Although state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Coxe recently gave the town's wastewater management plan the go ahead, selectmen are concerned that the health board's actions could have jeopardized that approval.

(Last month, selectmen scolded the health board for breaking trust by sending the letter to Secretary Coxe without talking to them and the sewer commission first. Health board members were not present at that meeting).

But the health board said by sending the letters, it was doing its duty to protect the public health and to voice its concerns that it be included in septic system management decisions.

After a half hour of public venting and feuding with selectmen assuming the role of both referee and angry parent at Monday's meeting, both boards said they would try to cooperate with each other.

The July 11 letter consisted of the health

Selectmen to seek audit of school department

By Mary Ford
STAFF WRITER

Selectmen may ask to have the school department audited this year.

They said Monday they have no specific concerns about the way the school department conducts its business but think an audit would be a good idea anyway.

"It came up for discussion and we thought why not do the school department this year," Sullivan said. "It's healthy for the town to have this done in different departments."

The water department and board of health have been targeted for in-depth audits in the past, he said.

Army Corps train hearing attracts 500

By Alice C. Coyle
STAFF WRITER

Residents and businesses throughout the Greenbush corridor have three more days to speak their minds on the proposed rail restoration project to the Army Corps of Engineers.

On Thursday more than 500 turned out for a hearing at Lombardo's in Randolph to register comments with the corps which must decide whether or not to permit the MBTA to fill 5.11 acres of wetlands along the 17.7-mile rail line through Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate.

While the public comment period ends Aug. 24, the Army Corps is not expected to render a decision for several months.

Project Manager Ted Lento of the Army Corps said the permitting process has many stages. In addition to the wetlands filling permit, the MBTA must apply for a state water quality permit from the Department of Environmental Management followed by a water quality certificate from the Corps. And there is al-

Brush chipping is slated

Brush chipping at the RTF will be conducted from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 13. No logs under four feet long will be accepted, Selectman Merle Brown said.

Trash barrels for the common

Selectmen agreed to the DPW's request to purchase five green trash barrels with lids for the town common.

The purpose of the new barrels is to prevent animals and birds from strewing trash all over the common, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

The Cohasset Common District Commission approved the style and color, Haddad said.

No figure was provided at the selectmen's meeting Monday, but money to buy the barrels will come from the Common gift fund and not from tax money.

Fire overtime is topic

While selectmen support sending newly hired firefighters to the fire academy, they want the fire chief to see if there is any offset in the salary account to avoid some of the overtime costs.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said there would be a cost of $12,000 in overtime to cover the firefighters' shifts while they attend the academy.

Haddad said he felt it is important that firefighters receive the best possible training and authorized the fire chief to schedule them for the next opening at the academy.

Cemetery policy committee named

Glenn Pratt of the Cemetery Study Committee, Peter Laugelle of the Tree & Park Department, Town Manager Mark Haddad and Selectmen Merle Brown and Ronnie McMorris will sit on the Cemetery Regulations Committee. The new board will look at cemetery policy and procedures in town including the pricing of graves and possible acquisition of computer software to map the graves at Beechwood and Woodside cemeteries.

Ambulance billing update

The fire department billed for 32 ambulance transports in July for a total of $11,605.30. The town collected $9,629.75 last month.

At Monday's board meeting, selectmen authorized $3,793.11 in write offs on uncollected bills and send $6,713.64 to a collection agency as authorized under the town's 1993 ambulance billing policy adopted.

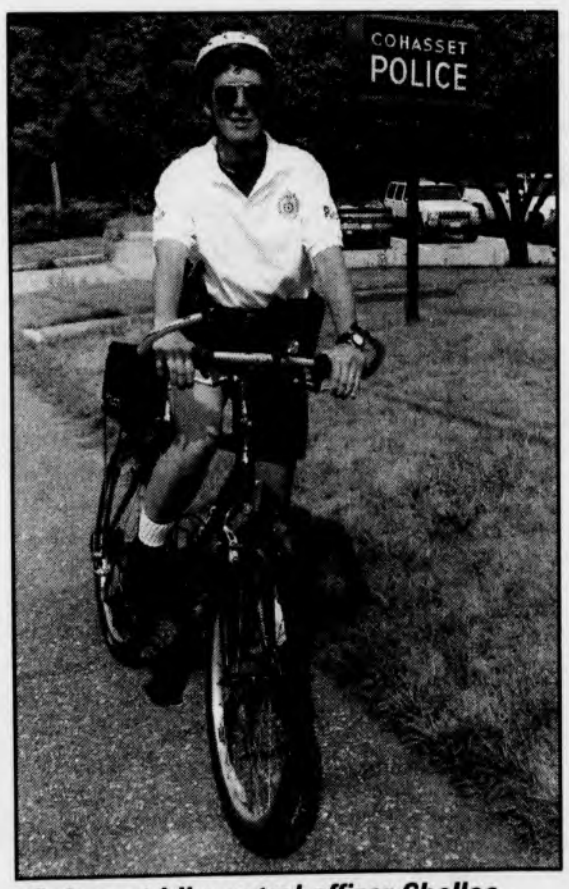
Pedaling a beat

By Jennifer R. Horan
STAFF WRITER

On a quiet evening in Scituate, two young people sat in a parked car in a deserted parking lot, indulging in illegal substances.

The driver of the car turned to the passenger and said, "Watch out for those police bikes. They sneak right up on you."

A moment later, a flashlight shone through the car window and both occupants were placed under arrest.



Bicycle patrols have given local police departments the ability to go where no cruiser has gone before.

Instituted in several South Shore towns over the past few years, bike patrols offer police officers a new route to better law enforcement, better community relations and better fitness.

"Bikes are adding another dimension to enforcing laws," said Scituate Safety Officer Arthur O. Wood III. "It's nice to have something you can slide in with that doesn't attract a lot of attention. And it's a great way to connect with people."

"They are very effective," agreed Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan, who noted that residents are accustomed to seeing police cruisers around town, not officers on bicycles.

"There's an increase in the interaction between the officers and the public. We get a lot of positive feedback," noted Hingham Police Sgt. John Norkaitis. "We're far more approachable and we can do a lot more community policing."

Cohasset bike patrol officer Shellee Peters gets set to pedal her beat.

Drug and alcohol arrests have increased in Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham as a result of the bicycle patrols. Bikes allow officers to penetrate the off-road sanctuaries teens flock to on weekends and summer nights.

"People looking to do something know where the cruisers can and can't go," Wood pointed out.

For breaking up parties and attending to incidents on special occasions like the Fourth of July, the two-wheeled vehicles put the officers in stealth mode.

"People don't see them; they don't pay attention to bikes," Noonan said. "The officers are able to come upon a situation before anybody realizes what's going on."

Bikes are ideal for patrolling beaches, the harbor and the village area in Cohasset, he said. When construction along Route 3A ends, patrols will also concentrate on the plaza areas, he said. Patrols go out every evening from about 4 p.m. until after dark.

Scituate bike patrols have cut down on crime and boosted their approachability at the town's beaches, near the harbor and business district and in public parking lots.

In Hingham, bikes patrol the Square, the beach area, neighborhoods and Bare Cove Park during the day and into the evening.

During crowded downtown events like Hingham's Fourth of July parade and Scituates Heritage Days, two wheels can maneuver through crowds far easier than four.

In Cohasset, eight of the 17 officers are certified to patrol by bicycle, with four more signed up on the waiting list.

"(Bicycle patrols) are a good community policing tool. They put the officers much more in touch with the citizenry and the businesspeople," Noonan said.

Half the members of the Scituate Police Department are certified to patrol by bicycle.

"It's fun to get out and ride," said Wood. "You're a lot more in touch with what's going on. You hear things you wouldn't hear in a cruiser — you're too insulated."

Eighteen of the 45 officers in the Hingham Police Department ride the bike patrol and they like the change of pace.

"I like being out there and out in the wind," said Norkaitis. "You see and hear far more than being in a cruiser. You're just very mobile. It's amazing how much ground you can cover. People really love it. For me, it's a welcome break to get out of the cruiser."

Officers must pass a rigorous three-day training session — which includes a four-mile bicycle obstacle course — before they can don the department's cycling uniform and ride one of their department's donated bicycles.

Norkaitis teaches state bike training courses, which run throughout the summer.

"Five years ago, people smirked at the idea of police on bicycles," he recalled. "But people have accepted it well."

While the policing aspect of bike patrols benefits the community, riding around also provides officers an intensive workout.

"The cops get into it too. It gives them a chance to get in shape and get off the donuts," he said. "The health benefits are tremendous."

Officers on bike patrol still carry guns but sport more casual uniforms.

In Cohasset, cycling cops wear a white polo shirt with CPD logo, nylon shorts, sneakers and helmet and jacket— a get-up that costs about $1,000, Noonan said. The five bikes, Treks and Raleighs valued at more than $1,000, are equipped with headlights, flashing blue lights and sirens.

Scituate bike patrol uniforms consist of black shorts, sneakers, a short sleeve shirt, jacket, helmet and padded gloves, which costs a few hundred dollars, he said.

Scituate's six bikes also cost in the neighborhood of $1,000 but do not come equipped with sirens or blue lights.

In both towns, the bikes are donated to the police department or paid for through community policing grants.

In Hingham, the department's nine mountain bikes — valued at $1,000 — are sponsored by businesses and individuals in the community.

Officers wear royal blue shirts with the HPD logo, black shorts, sneakers, and a full issue gun belt.

Health board gets its hand slapped — again

board's comments on the final environmental impact report (FEIR), which is an environmental feasibility study on the recent sweeping wastewater management plan agreed to between the town and state.

A second letter was sent to the Department of Environmental Protection Aug. 6 following the health board's July 15 declaration of a public health emergency in a neighborhood off Atlantic Avenue where the septic systems have failed. The health board asked the sewer commission for an immediate connection to the town sewer but was asked to "jump through hoops" before that could happen, health board member Kevin Ulmer said.

In both cases, the health board insisted it was within its rights to contact the state.

"We don't know what you're looking for here," Ulmer said.

He explained that in the first letter, the board was simply commenting on the FEIR as the state wanted. Ulmer added that the health board had passed the letter by then acting Town Manager Ed McCann, who said it was okay to send it. In the second letter, the board was looking after the health and safety of the town, he said.

In the letter commenting on the FEIR, the health board said it had not been included in discussions about the wastewater management plan approved at town meeting and included in the "agreement for judgement" with the state.

Ulmer said that type of comment was just what state Secretary Coxe sought.

"We expressed the need for the board of health to be involved and we don't see what's wrong with that," he said.

The second letter was a response to a health emergency, Ulmer explained. The letter details alarming findings of raw sewage and high fecal coliform counts posing a threat to public health and the environment including the adacent salt marsh and harbor.

> 'We expressed the need for the board of health to be involved and we don't see what's wrong with that.'
> — KEVIN ULMER.

He said the board of health was not comfortable with the sewer commissioners' answer to the problem in the Newtonville area off Atlantic Avenue which would have required Title V inspections. Under Title V, the state environmental code, property owners with failed systems, once inspecteed, would have two years to upgrade. Because of ledge and high groundwater, upgrades in that area aren't even possible, the health board said.

"Before hanging these homeowners out to dry, we wanted to see if the state would okay the extension of sewer to their homes," he said.

Ulmer said the sewer commission wanted too much documentation and the health board was simply following the process spelled out in the agreement for judgement.

"You may not like the path, but our goals are quite responsible — to solve a health problem in town," Ulmer said.

But sewer engineer Dan Couglin defended the sewer commission and said documentation was needed to exempt homes from the sewer moratorium on new connections which pre-dates the agreement for judgement.

Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said the selectmen, health board and sewer commissioners had agreed at a meeting in June to pass any letters to the state before the three boards first.

Health board member Tom Cook said he did not recall any such agreement.

The boards made no decision on health board chairman Alix White's suggestion that the sewer and health boards meet on the same night so if there were any overlapping issues they could just go across the hall.

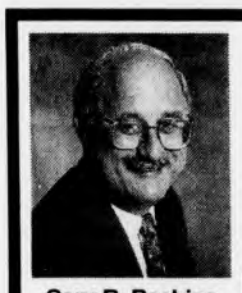
However, sewer commissioner Henry Rattenbury agreed to attend the next board of health meeting. The boards also agreed to communicate with Town Manager Mark Haddad who would then keep all the boards informed.

Elder affairs clerk is topic

Selectmen want to talk with Council of Elder Affairs Director Kathy Bryanton and members of the CEA board before authorizing the hiring of a new part-time clerk with expanded work hours at the senior center.

The former clerk, who recently retired at 80, worked 12-15 hours a week. The position is funded through a state grant.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said the council has been unable to fill the position at the rate provided through the grant.



Haddad recommended increasing the hours to 25. The annual cost would be $12,168. He said there should be enough month in the current grant of $10,500 and the town hall clerical budget to cover the position in fiscal year 1998. In future years, the town might have to pick up the entire cost if the grant was not available, he said.

Selectman Diane C. Sullivan asked what the justification is in increasing the hours if an elderly woman could do the job in 12 hours.

Haddad said the CEA was using a lot of volunteers to do the additional work.

Sullivan said she was also concerned that the position would be eligible for benefits, an additional cost to the town.

The board will as Bryanton and Anna Abbruzzese of the CEA board to come in and explain an increase in hours is needed.

Selectmen to seek audit of school department

tant will be invited to the selectmen's Sept. 15 meeting to discuss the proposal.

It is not clear how much the audit would cost and if it would be conducted by the auditing firm Tucci and Roselli, which is under contract to provide the annual town audit.

Town Manager Mark Haddad explained the auditors provide a cursory audit of the school department during their normal town audit which is covered under their fee. If selectmen are looking for something different, they would have to specify what they are looking for so a price can be determined, he said.

The audit is welcomed by at least one member of the school committee.

School committee member Joseph McElroy, who attended the selectmen's meeting, said he thinks an audit can be productive and that good can come of it.

In a telephone interview McElroy, who was elected to the school board in April, said after he examined the two recent town audits, he was surprised to find that they had "next to nothing on the schools and schools are 50-60% of the town budget."

McElroy said while he finds the schools academically strong, "managerially" they are not.

"No one, including myself, is suggesting any mismanagement of funds," he said. "I look at an audit as a tool to give us direction."

He said the time for a school audit is ideal for the following reasons:

• town audits of the school department have been superficial at best;

• 60 percent of the budget is spent on the schools and a $10 million school building is under construction;

• the schools have hired three new principals in two years;

• the superintendent's contract is up in June of 1998.

McElroy, who said he feels a managerial audit is critical, said in the 1980s the school department went from a full-time to a part-time business manager.

He said, at the time, the school department may have been "penny-wise and pound foolish" in light of the recent school problems with school bus maintenance and American with Disabilities Act compliance. These are problems that a full-time business manager would be on top of, said.

Another example, he said was the need to develop a property accountability system.

The schools are developing a technology plan and there's a fitness center proposed at the high school which will both entail "highly pilfer-able equipment," he said.

"I do not feel assured that an adequate property accountability system exists.".

McElroy explained a bar code system could be established through which computers and exercise equipment could be tracked and an inventory could be maintained.

Patricia Walsh, 270 N. Main St., attended Monday's meeting and noted that while the town declares items it no longer needs surplus, she isn't sure what happens to unneeded school department equipment. Walsh cited sewing machines as an example.

"What do they do with items they are not using?" she asked.

Post office sewer hookup

The post office, whose septic system has failed, may be hooked up to the sewer earlier than planned through a temporary sewer line across Constitution Park at the corner of Ripley Road and Depot Court.

Selectmen agreed to issue a permit to allow installation of the pipe, which will hook up to the sewer line on North Main street through the Community Center's connection.

The post office property is owned by Roger and Ann Pompeo, 130 Forest Ave. The owners will be asked to pay $2,000 which will be put in an escrow account to ensure the park is satisfactorily restored, selectmen said.

The sewer pipe across the park is temporary and will be abandoned once the sewer is extended along Ripley Road in about two years time.

On the Mark airs Aug. 27

Please tune in on Wednesday, Aug. 27 at 8 p.m. to watch "On the Mark with Ilana Marks", for an interview, filmed last summer, about five lesbians who marched in the controversial Gay Pride Parade. This is a debate on whether marching topless detracts or adds to the lesbian cause. Guests also share their personal life stories and experiences with regard to raising children, adoption and same-sex marriages.

If you would like to send in comments or questions, the address is, "On the Mark", P.O. Box 717, Scituate, MA 02066. E-mail address is ilanamarks@aol.com. This show will be repeated on Tuesday, Sept. 2 on channel 3 in Cohasset at 8 p.m.

Diane Sullivan objects to Haddad working in Littleton

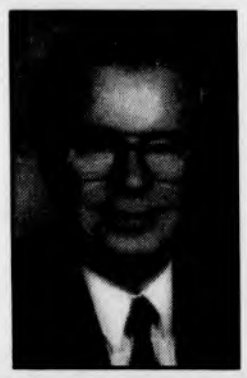
Selectman Diane C. Sullivan broke with her counterparts this week by not supporting a request from the new town manager to temporarily continue working for the town of Littleton in his free time.

Town Manager Mark Haddad had the approval letter written and ready for the board's signatures at Monday's meeting.

Haddad asked for permission to work Friday afternoons and weekends for up to three months to assist his former employer, the town of Littleton, through its transitional period. Littleton is looking to replace Haddad, who served there as town administrator until he was came on board as Cohasset's town manager earlier this month.

"The town expects Mark's full attention. I don't support it. I don't think anyone can serve seven days a week and do justice to our community," Sullivan said.

Haddad said he expected his duties in Littleton to amount to no more than four hours a week.



Selectmen Michael Sullivan, Merle Brown and Ronnie McMorris supported his request.

The board's approval was required under Cohasset's Town Manager Act approved at last spring's town meeting and subsequently by the state legislature.

INSPECTING FOR SAFETY'S SAKE

▶ One of the best preventive steps car owners can take is to have their auto technicians inspect their vehicles on a yearly basis. This inspection can prevent unnecessary breakdowns, as well as catch minor problems before they become major ones. An inspection of this sort involves a visual check for cracked brake hoses, fluid leaks, rust holes in the exhaust system, leaking or worn shock absorbers, unusual tire wear, worn front-end parts, corrosion build-up on battery terminals, frayed electrical wires, burnt transmission fluid, and the like. It is a good idea to ask for this type of inspection at the same time that oil is being changed, the tires are being rotated, or the brakes are being inspected.

▶ Annual inspection makes good sense, because that way you are more likely to prevent problems before they arise, which means you are more apt to always be able to get to where you are going. At SOUTH SHORE CHEVROLET-GEO, (383-9090), we know what you are looking for in an automotive facility—superior service, skilled technicians, and folks who listen to what you want and make sure you're happy with the results. You won't have any unexpected costs when you come to us, because we keep you informed of any new problems we run into when we work on your car and seek your approval before proceeding with repair. Stop in at 828 C.J. Cushing Hwy., Rte. 3A (open Thurs. eves).

HINT
The visual inspection described above should only take about one-half hour.

HAT'S OFF TO JOEY ANDRADE

Joey Andrade, son of Dottie (Infusino) Andrade, graduated in December from UMass/Amherst with a degree in sports management. Joey has landed a job as a sales associate with the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, one of major league baseball's two expansion teams, which will begin play next season. Only the top three of the nine sales associates selling season ticket packages in Tampa, Fla., were asked to continue with the franchise. During its inaugural season, Joey placed second and was assured a top sales position in the organization. Guess we know who to call when the Tampa Bay Devil Rays come to town! And, we sure are proud of you, Joey!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Aug. 9 surely was a big day for Carol Sasso, and we cannot wait to tell you why! It was her birthday, and her celebration was a fantastic one! Her friends, Joey and April Kramer (the drummer for Aerosmith) flew her (in their own plane) to the Aerosmith concert in Hartford, Ct. As if that wasn't a big enough thrill, imagine her surprise when Steven Tyler wished Carol a happy birthday from the stage! Wow! Now that is what we call special!

Polly Murray and Emily St. John wait impatiently to be admitted to the town pool for their swimming lesson.

MEMORIAL ROUNDABOUT

The Cohasset Maritime Institute and the Alden Ocean Shell Association are pleased and honored to co-host the "Jack Hubbard Memorial Minot Light Roundabout" traditional and sliding seat rowing race. It will be held Saturday, Sept. 6, from noon to 5 p.m. at the CMI boathouse/Cohasset Sailing Club. Registration begins at noon, the race begins at 2 p.m. at the breakwater; a cookout and the awards will be from 3 to 5 p.m. Please help make this a successful event by participating in one of the following ways: working at the race registration table, working as a race timer, preparing a side dish or desert for the cookout, supplying condiments or paper plates and utensils, flipping burgers and dogs, working as the "official photographer," offering services as a chase boat or tow boat, attending as a spectator or participant, or offering financial support to help cover expenses. Please call Jack Buckley at 925-1284 as soon as possible to let him know the way in which you are willing and able to help out.

JOAN WILL BE MISSED

Many of you may have noticed that the flag was at half mast last Thursday at the South Shore Music Circus. The reason for it was that the SSMC lost a "family member," Joan Nelson. Joan worked at the Music Circus for many years, and was the head of the box office for lots of those years. She was the one with the warm smile and ever-present knowledge of exactly what was where, what was sold, what was left, and so on. She worked long hours, and loved her work and her fellow workers. And we all loved her. Our deepest sympathies go to Joan's husband, John, and her family. John was an ever-present figure, always there to pick Joan up at the end of her night. Hopefully John will be around the tent for his ritual cup of coffee, a nice big hug is definitely in order when you see him!

WELCOME TO ZACHARY

Zachary Ethan Connors makes the news this week. He is the brand new son of Patty and Brian Connors, and baby brother to twin brothers, Ryan and Justin (who are 7 years old). Zachary was born July 24 at 7:52 a.m., and he weighed 9 pounds, 13 ounces. Welcome to Cohasset ex Zachary, we'll see you strolling "around town."

DEAN'S LIST

Middlebury College sends us news this week. Two Cohasset residents are the reason! Thomas M. Greco, son of Thomas R. Greco, attained dean's list status. That means he earned a grade point average of 3.3 or higher, and had no grade below a B- for the semester. And, Robin M. Lawrence, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robin M. Lawrence, received a Bachelor of Arts degree in American Civilization at the 1997 Commencement exercises on the Vermont liberal arts college campus. Our congrats go to both gents!

WELL DONE, WILEY

Accolades are also in order for Wiley Wakeman, a student at Derby Academy. Wiley won the Massachusetts Foreign Language Association Board of Directors Award for outstanding achievement in the study of Latin language and culture. This certificate is conferred upon the student who has demonstrated the highest achievement in the most advanced Latin courses taught at Derby.

COLLEGE GRAD

Hats off to Bridget Marie Corkery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Corkery of Cohasset. Bridget was one of 392 students who received degrees from Saint Michael's College in Colchester, Vt. Bridget received a Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology.

DPW garage to get cable

The new DPW garage will have cable, thanks to Media One (formerly Continental Cablevision).

The company has offered to install the service at no cost to the town.

Town Manager Mark Haddad said it will cost Media One about $4,000 because the closest hookup is 1,200 feet away from the garage.

Selectmen approved the request after learning that the police and fire departments and town hall are also hooked up to cable.

Haddad to get new computer

Town Manager Mark Haddad will get a new computer for $2,455 and a laser jet printer for $1,020.

The system will be paid for through available funds in the selectmen's budget.

That account will be reimbursed at the October special town meeting.

Haddad said he would meet with the computer study committee on Aug. 28. In the meantime, he has given his old office computer to the treasurer's office and is using a loner at no cost to the town until the new one arrives.

Old garage to be history

The old wooden DPW garage in the town parking lot will come down soon.

The contract for the demolition will be awarded to John F. Kehoe Excavating, the low bidder.

There were four bidders ranging from $3,400 to $4,500, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

Haddad said he would ask the advisory committee for a transfer at its Aug. 26 meeting.

Selectmen supported the request noting that the dilapidated old barn has become a safety issue.

Sailboat sale to benefit lobster lab

R. Murray Campbell, president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, announced that a 20-foot Corinthian sailboat has been donated to the Cohasset Lightkeepers latest project, a Learning Laboratory for Marine Biology and Genetic Research which will occupy a building on the former Hagerty property at Parker Avenue. The boat, moored in the harbor for many years, was used regularly for pleasure sailing in the locality.

According to the donor, the gift is one way to help a worthwhile project on our water front. The boat will be sold with the proceeds going to the Learning Laboratory. Inquiries are invited; call Steve Bobo 383-6893

Quonset huts back on zoning board agenda

Noel Collins, owner of the Quonset huts buildings at 430 S. Main St., said he will consider building five condominiums at the site.

The new plan will be before the zoning board on Aug. 27.

Collins initially proposed tearing down the Quonset huts and building ten condominiums but the zoning board rejected his request in Nov. 1966, citing density concerns.

The ZBA subsequently offered four units but Collins said that would be a losing proposition.

Collins thought six was a nice compromise but the ZBA rejected that.

Collins said he was cautiously optimistic that the zoning board would be receptive the the new plan.

"The market is good if we catch it this year," he said. "This would be no huge money maker but it would be an opportunity to get something good done at this end of Cohasset and hopefully not lose our shirt in the process."

The Greenbush weary

"I've been workin' on the railroad all the live long day."

Let's make that "all the live long decade" and longer, for so many involved in the seemingly endless Greenbush rail restoration saga.

"When are people going to cry uncle?" asked train proponent Richard Prone of Duxbury who has pushed for the train's return to the South Shore for nearly a quarter of a century. "I'm sick of this."

Even the usually boisterous, vocal opponents to the train project seemed subdued at last week's Army Corps of Engineers hearing in Randolph.

Anti-rail activist Ilana Marks said the public's desire for closure on the issue is the one point on which both sides can agree.

"We don't want to be here anymore," Marks told the Corps. "We don't want to spend our summers doing this."

Amen to that.

As many as 1,000 people, fired up over the most controversial issue to hit the South Shore ever, were expected to pack into Lombardo's ballroom. Only half that number showed. But that's not bad considering the hearing was held miles away from the Greenbush corridor during one of the summer's busiest vacation weeks.

The last time this many folks on both sides of the Greenbush tracks made their way to Randolph was in November 1995, when then governor William Weld announced plans to restore at-grade commuter rail service to Greenbush before a delighted South Shore Chamber of Commerce. It was a cold day following an early snow, yet in anticipation of the decision, hundreds waving signs for and against the project filled the parking lot outside starting at 6 a.m.

It was a long-awaited decision that had been dragged out interminably while the state looked at vastly unpopular transportation alternatives such as the guided busway.

But two years down the line with service set to begin on the Plymouth and Middleboro lines of the Old Colony railroad, Greenbush remains buried in the mire we've come to call the environmental review process.

We're all train tired — exhausted from worry. Some of us worry that the train will come back, others worry it won't.

Getting on board late in the day, the Army Corps is taking a tour of the issue for the first time and we're along for the ride. For many of us it's deja vu all over again.

Most opponents hope the Corps will deny permits or initiate more environmental review at the federal level which could eventually force the T to head back to the drawing board or scrap the project altogether. Proponents — many of them commuters facing daily gridlock on the "distressway" into Boston — hope the Corps will give the green light to the necessary permits and expedite the project's final approval.

But these hopes are mixed with a weariness that shows on the faces of those at the forefront of the issue. Nothing new is being said and few are left to be converted to one side or another. A faded "Rail Yes" banner on Mr. Prone's truck, left over from two years ago, was the only sign in that Randolph parking lot Thursday.

Parents asked to commit to C.A.S.A.

The Drug and Alcohol Awareness Committee with the support of the police, the Cohasset schools and the selectmen will mail an informational brochure to the parents of children in grades 6 through 12 entitled C.A.S.A. (Cohasset Against Substance Abuse).

C.A.S.A. was formerly entitled Safe Homes. In the past Safe Homes helped parents network a safe home environment. The need to reinstate a support network has become evident because of the presence of alcohol and drugs among our youth. Parents are concerned about the alarming increase in alcohol and drug use among our youth, and social acceptability of this use. Communicating and networking among parents has been proven to be effective in the past under Safe Homes. All parents of children in grades 6 through 12 are asked to participate in this program by taking a stand and by showing your concern for the health and well-being of young people.

Please read and fill out a form, available at town hall. Be sure to check off the box at the bottom and mail it back before Sept. 10. Forms can be mailed to town hall/attn. the drug & alcohol committee. A booklet with the names of the participants will be mailed out in the fall to all parents with children in grades 6 through 12. Signing this form will be our first stand in making a commitment against substance abuse.

Wading pool adds new chapter to swim center story

By Mary Sheppard Earon
CORRESPONDENT

To serve the growing population of swimmers under three feet tall, the Cohasset Swim Center has installed a wading pool that is just their size. Referred to as 'the kiddie pool,' small children can play in the water to their hearts' content without fear that bigger children will splash in next to them.

According to Stephanie Hernan of Beechwood Street, who is on the swim center's board of managers, it was learned that the idea for the kiddie pool arose three years ago at the suggestion of Diana Karcher, a board of trustees member.

It was this year, however, that swim center trustees said they would contribute 50 percent of the amount if the board of managers could raise the other $6,250. The board agreed and the new kiddie pool began construction four weeks ago. Now, in the second half of this summer season, small children will be enjoying water at their own level. Fundraising efforts by the board of managers, however, have just begun.

The South Shore League's 1997 champions, the Cohasset swim team, organized a swim-a-thon recently and raised $500. Additionally, there are donations promised from private sources. The major portion of the funds, $4,300, will be solicited from the town itself.

"We are sending out a fundraising letter to all townspeople, requesting a donation," said Hernan. "In return for a $25 donation, the donor can opt for a family weekend pass for unlimited swimming. This is useful for someone who doesn't frequent the pool on a regular basis, but may be expecting weekend guests and will want to use the pool during that time.

In return for a $50 donation, the donor can have the family name dedicated and painted on a fish or turtle at the bottom of the kiddie pool, which will be painted in the spring of 1998.

HISTORY OF THE SWIM CENTER

The story behind the 23-year-old swim center, now comprised of three pools and a pool building, has been an interesting evolution through the years.

The first distinction is that, unbeknownst to some, the Cohasset swim center is a private pool.

A small group of five anonymous donors who called themselves the Cohasset Swimming and Recreation Trust, donated the money to obtain the 3-1/2 acres of land for the swim center site in 1970. The original plans included tennis courts and a year-round pool.

John H. Meyer, a Cohasset resident, led the trust group. His idea was to provide the town with a swimming and recreational facility and educational swimming programs.

But even before 1974, when Cohasset got its swimming pool, the town had a swimming and diving team, starting in 1966. In fact, Cohasset's swim team went from last place in their first year of competition on the South Shore to second place the following year.

How could the town have such high scoring aquatic teams without a facility in which to train?

"We trained in the back yards of Cohasset residents," said Hernan.

Stephanie Hernan joined the swim team in 1969 at age five, and became one of the youngest members of the Cohasset swim team. By age 8, she spent the next 11 years as an undefeated swimmer in the South Shore League.

"Training to race and compete in private pools was a challenge," she laughed.

Aside from the issues of liability even back then, the private pools had no lane lines, and many times, the pools were curved instead of rectangular.

"The kids training on the ends naturally finished before the kids in the middle," said Hernan.

Swimmers had to enter the pool in shallow water instead of in diving depth water, Hernan said, and the team usually ended up swimming 200 laps in a back yard pool to equal the distance of 25 meters.

By 1970, the initial 100 swimmers of the Cohasset swim team doubled in number, then almost tripled. Excitement and team spirit ran high.

It was obvious to those involved that the team needed to be facilitated. Although the generosity of the back yard pool owners was appreciated, evidenced in the letters homeowners received, a diving pool was needed. The team needed a place to call their own.

At this point, John H. Meyer and the Cohasset Swimming and Recreation Trust stepped in and purchased the acreage on Sohier Street. Water and wetland issues delayed the pool from being built for more than three years. But by the spring of 1974, the pool was completed and it opened June 15, 1974.

True to the word of the trustees, the swim center served anyone who wanted to swim, including not only the swim and diving teams, but the Red Cross program, disabled children from the South Shore Collaborative, summer recreation day camps, and of course, the public. For families who wanted to swim, but couldn't afford the membership fee, scholarships were provided. No one was turned away. Where the original plans called for an enclosed year-round pool and tennis courts, the funds available for those entities became the money maintaining the pool over the years.

"The swim center's board of trustees were very generous people. They still are," said Hernan. "They wanted people to use the pool. They made it available to anyone who wanted to use it, thus making it seem like a public pool."

Over the ensuing 20 years, available funds dwindled because of the generous nature of those in control. Although a board of managers had always been in existence, they considered themselves more as friends of the swim center. They had been instrumental in getting the swim center established in 1974 by supporting the idea and organizing committees to appear in front of the zoning board meetings. Their desire was to understand the problems and help with solutions.

The Cohasset Swim Team in 1966 practiced in backyard pools around town.

TAKING AN ACTIVE ROLE

This was the same motivation that prompted Stephanie Hernan and Leslie Faber of Bayberry Lane to take an active role at the swim center as board of managers members. Both women, in addition to being swimmers themselves, are mothers of aquatic team members.

"Finances were running at a deficit because there had not been any fundraising in a long time. If we continued on that same course, the goals set forth in the original plan for the pool might be altered forever."

Hernan and Faber approached the board of trustees, in particular Diana Karcher, who recognized their desire to help and encouraged them.

Besides the issue of finances, Hernan said the pool's management, which at that time was under the control of the life guards, needed to be reassessed.

"The life guards had the run of the place. They were 18-and 19-year-old kids who were trained as life guards and did that job well. But pool management should be run like a business, and in order for the pool to stop running at a deficit and to realistically expect improvement on money, management and communication, change was necessary."

Many families wanted to see structure there and didn't. Memberships fell each year.

But, according to Hernan, the question regarding membership is whether they were losing memberships over the years or just not keeping track of them.

"I don't think we'll ever know that. But when the pool opened, family enrollment was 400. It dwindled in the past 10 years to 200. Now, we're back up to 320. I don't know if it's word of mouth about the improvements we're making, or if it's the current controversy over a permanent pool enclosure that's drawing people," Hernan said. "What I do know is that we needed a system to set a precedent so we could keep track of memberships. We set up a computerized system with a data base. We're going into the year 2000. We can be organized, not dysfunctional."

The permanent enclosure over the pool that Hernan refers to is the effort being made by Joe McElroy of Windy Hill. This is an issue separate from the fundraising efforts of the swim center's board of managers.

McElroy, leading the group who call themselves Friends of the Cohasset Swim Center, said that they are continuing to investigate the pool enclosure.

"The most popular athletic activity in the United States today is swimming, seconded by walking," said McElroy. "Weather in New England curtails both activities for many people. Swimming offers a broad-based appeal to a community for recreational and therapeutic purposes. Also, in the interest of the youngsters in Cohasset, a year-round pool would be a healthy outlet for their energies."

"A year-round pool was the original intention in 1970. But because of the expense, it just never happened. It's still expensive, so it's still an issue. I think all swimmers would love the idea of year-round swimming in their own town, but we need a solution that's affordable to the town," said Hernan.

MEETING IS AUG. 21

A meeting is scheduled Thursday, Aug. 21, at 7:30 p.m., in Elder Affairs at the Community Center for all those interested in the cross spectrum of information that the Friends of the Cohasset swim center has gathered so far. McElroy states that the committee has discovered a less costly alternative for a pool enclosure that will be discussed. Discussion will also include whether or not the matter of enclosing the pool should continue to be investigated.

The renewed spirit at the swim center is evidenced in the Cohasset diving team and swim team's placing first this year in the South Shore League, after an exciting 1997 season.

The swim center is serving more groups than ever before through word of mouth.

"We're raising money in order to continue the improvements here," said Hernan. "Although we don't like charging user fees, it is necessary as part of our revenue." User fees charged to outside groups this year are $300, with the possibility that they will rise next year in order to afford pool expenses.

"We'd like to hire a pool maintenance person next year who will keep the bathrooms clean, maintain the pool, and keep

Children's Drama Workshop celebrates 10 years on stage

By Laura Caldwell
CORRESPONDENT

The tenth anniversary of The Children's Drama Workshop was marked last week with the production of "Once Upon a Time..."

Founded by Elizabeth Deveney, The Children's Drama Workshop is a seven week theater program for 5 to 12 year old children. The program culminates in four performances.

"Once Upon a Time..." departs from past shows, such as: Aladdin, Beauty and the Beast, The Little Mermaid, Peter Pan, Alice in Wonderland, Cinderella, and The Wizard of Oz, in that it is a medley of music and scenes from a variety of sources. The performances give local youth a taste of theater, and, as Deveney points out, "It is a great opportunity for the kids—it gives them more self confidence."

Deveney estimates that of the cast of 100, half of the children are newcomers to the program, while the other half are veterans. According to Deveney, "The kids come back because they have a good time and form a lot of new friendships". This summer, five of the program's veteran participants received awards for their long-standing commitment to the organization.

The Children's Drama workshop has come a long way sice its early days. It began as a group of ten children performing in Deveney's garage. Each summer, the magnitude of the show has increased. Deveney is thrilled with the success, and feels that "the cast gets better and better every year," she says.

Deveney, who is 21 and studying music at Catholic University, devotes her entire summer to the show. She is assisted by her sisters Grace and Sarah, and by her cousin, George. Grace, 20, is an assistant director responsible for much of the scenes involving the leads of the play. She is a nursing student at Boston College and is working this summer as a secretary for the Recreation Department. Sarah, 24, is in charge of the sets and is the show's pianist. A Holy Cross graduate, she is now studying Psychology at the University of Massachusetts. This summer she is also working in the selectman's office. Of her sisters, Liz says, "I couldn't do it without them...they are my two best friends".

Deveney's tasks include arranging the script, communicating with the cast's parents, planning costumes, and choreographing dance numbers. Over the years, her biggest lesson has been, "...learning to work with people: the staff, the kids, the parents..." As director and producer, she undertakes an enormous job.

Deveney has a simple reason for putting such effort into the Workshop and the performance; as she says, "I love the kids". Although she cites the endless hours during the pre-show week as difficult, Deveney finds the show very rewarding. After weeks of rehearsal, Deveney says, "It's fun to see it all come together".

Although next summer's show is currently undecided, Deveney is looking forward to a similar success. Smiling, she says, "It's going to be another great show next year".

IT'S HAPPENING

Sign Language Program at library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will sponsor a program for children on Deaf Awareness on Thursday, Aug. 21 at 2 p.m. at the library. The kids will learn about deaf culture, "hearing" dogs (the counterpart of seeing-eye dogs), American sign language, interpreters, lip-reading and more in this exciting 45 minute presentation given by Karen Glickman, one of Massachusetts' leading deaf educators, her "hearing" dog, Delta and a storytelling interpreter.

Karen's dog, Delta, is specially trained to warn her of fire alarms, door bells, people calling her name from another room, the phone ringing or the alarm clock buzzing in the morning. She can't hear these or any other sound. Karen will show the children how her dog does this. She will also demonstrate sign language. Her interpreter friend will add words and tonal expression to Karen's telling of the story. A question and answer period for the children will follow.

It is not necessary to register for this event, however, for more information, please call children's librarian, Suzanne Terry, at 383-1348. This project is supported in part by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Piano lessons resume

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, resumes her lesson-schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure.

Mrs. Daniels is a graduate of the New-England Conservatory of Music of Boston, magna cum laude. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln, Norwood and currently in Cohasset.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

For further information, call 383-1487.

Farmers' Market week celebrated

Paul Celluci has declared Aug. 17 to 23 "Massachusetts Farmers' Market Week" and in celebration the Cohasset Village Farmers' Market will be holding a Summerfest Thursday, Aug. 21 during the regular market hours.

Music by Chris McNeil, face painting, pony rides and lobster picnic dinners will highlight the festival. Local cook Anna Abbruzzesse will also be cooking up fresh farmers' produce for all to sample. The Summerfest is sure to be fun for the whole family and is free to market shoppers. Bring picnic blankets or seating to enjoy the festivities.

The Cohasset Village Farmers' Market is held every Thursday through October 9 from 3 to 7 p.m. in Cohasset Village on the Common along Main Street. Ten Massachusetts farmers, gardeners, bakers and artisans participate in the market each week selling fresh fruits, vegetables, herbs, baked goods, specialty items and eggs, all home grown or produced.

stock of our supplies. We're also hoping to eventually have a concession stand, even if it's just snacks and drinks. People won't have to leave the pool to go into town for refreshments."

The swim center has a suggestion box that pool members have been steadily dropping messages into.

"We listen to what people want. We want people to regard the swim center as a safe, comfortable environment. There are bathrooms and showers there. The life guards are great with the kids. They play and talk with them. That's what they're there for. It's a positive first relationship with water and with those who guard them while they're in the water."

Hernan says it does take a village to raise a child.

"We're asking for help. We need to finish getting the kiddie pool installed and paid for. There are residents whom we haven't reached because they don't use the swim center. But, we're hoping for a good response from them through our fundraising letter. There are also those who frequent the swim center and know that when they have a concern or a suggestion, someone is going to listen and help. Now, through the fundraising letter we're sending to the town, we're asking for help back."

Many backyard pools the swim team practiced in didn't have diving boards or were curved instead of rectangular.

Army Corps train hearing attracts 500

ways the possibility that the Corps could seek to initiate a federal environmental impact statement, further lengthening in the process, Lento said.

In the meantime, MBTA Manager of Environmental Affairs Andrew Brennan said work is continuing on the final environmental impact report on the Greenbush line. Rush hour service on the other two Old Colony lines —Plymouth and Middleboro is slated to begin Sept. 29.

This latest public hearing brought rail opponents and proponents together again to reiterate concerns they have been raising for literally years.

More than 70 concerned citizens marched up to the microphone for their allotted three minutes to comment. Another 30 left their statements with a stenographer set up outside the hearing room. In all, Lento said the Corps has received more than 600 letters and 400 comments attached to an army corps advertisement clipped from local newspapers. Lento said about 80 percent of the comments have come from Greenbush opponent, with 20 percent from frustrated commuters looking for transportation relief. Army Corps officials assure those making statements that written and oral comments will be weighed equally and considered closely by the corps in making its decision.

While opponents to the project continue to worry about the noise, vibration and pollution the train will bring to the South Shore, project supporters fear without it Boston bound commuters will face complete traffic gridlock on local highways.

On one thing both the anti-rail and pro-train factions can agree, they're tired of debating the issue and want closure.

20 YEARS OF DISCUSSION

Richard Prone of Duxbury, a member of the pro-train Back on Track group said he's been working toward a restored Greenbush line for more than 20 years.

"I wrote my first letter to the editor on this in 1975," Prone noted.

"When are people going to cry uncle? I'm sick of this."

Scituate's Ilana Marks who stands firmly on the other side of the tracks on Greenbush shares Prone's frustration.

"It's ridiculous. This has been dragged out too long and has been an incredible waste of taxpayers' money," Marks said.

Still, Marks said she is hopeful that the Army Corps will be "a watchdog agency" rather than another rubber stamp for the MBTA's rail restoration project. Marks is particularly critical of the way state environmental agencies including MEPA have dealt with the public's concerns about the train.

"We're hoping that you can put an end to this, "Marks said in her statement to the Army Corps. "None of us want to be here anymore. None of us want to spend our summers doing this."

Fellow rail opponent Nancy Buckley of Hingham, the co-founder of the anti-train Coastal Coalition, isn't putting any stock in the Army Corps or any other public agency to stop the train.

"I think we need to stop participating in this endless environmental review process and start demanding the project is scrapped. I don't believe as others do that delay is victory," she said.

Armed with a Hingham Journal article from 1990 in which former Governor William Weld and then Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci are quoted as promising less disruptive transportation alternatives than the train, Buckley said she's calling on the state to drop the project altogether.

"We believe there are alternatives that will achieve the same transportation goals as the train and are less disruptive," Buckley told the Corps. "We're asking you to deny this permit so logic can prevail and so Governor Cellucci can finally draw a line in the sand and kill this project."

Buckley and the Coastal Coalition have long maintained that the MBTA has given rail alternatives like expanded commuter boat and bus service short shrift.

"There has been no equal time given or interest given to other transportation options like the boat options or extending the redline down Route 3," Marks told the Army Corps.

Directing their comments to the permit in question both former Cohasset selectman Peter Pratt and Cohasset Conservation Commissioner Vee Roebuck say they're worried about flooding problems and damage to wildlife habitats if wetlands are filled.

"How do you mitigate 50,000 square feet of wetlands," Roebuck said, noting that there are four vernal pools and several rare and endangered species currently thriving along the right of way.

The project's more than $215 million price tag continues to raise the ire of most opponents. State Senator Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said the price of Greenbush was "outrageous" and "disproportionate compared to the service it will provide."

PUBLIC SAFETY CONCERNS

Budget concerns also weighed heavily on the mind of Hingham's new fire chief William Johnson. In addition to public safety, Johnson said he is worried about the impact of train on his department's budget. With the right of way dividing the town, Johnson estimates he will have to increase staffing at the North fire station at a cost of nearly $200,000 to the annual operating budget.

While opponents to the project outnumbered Greenbush supporters by far, several proponents spoke out in favor of the return of rail including the Conservation Law Foundation (CLF) .

The non-profit advocacy organization is the largest environmental group in New England and is backing the Old Colony rail restoration project as a public transportation mitigation for the Central Artery project in Boston. The three pronged rail line is supposed to offset the increased pollution and traffic anticipated when the multi-billion transportation project is completed. CLF sued the state in 1990, delaying the "big dig" and set deadlines for the Old Colony Project to be completed. The most recent deadline was passed last December, and if further delays threaten this mitigation commitment, Heart said CLF will turn up the heat on the state again.

"We're watching this closely," Heart said, noting that CLF sees Greenbush as a benefit to the region improving both accessibility and the economy.

Marshfield Planning Board member Cathy Sferra said her town continues to support the restoration because it is efficient and makes environmental sense.

"We have become a country of car potatoes," Sferra said. "We urge you to listen to the entire region."

Ron Zooleck, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce— a group that has consistently backed the rail project— said he was one Hingham resident in favor of the project.

Drug & Alcohol Committee meetings

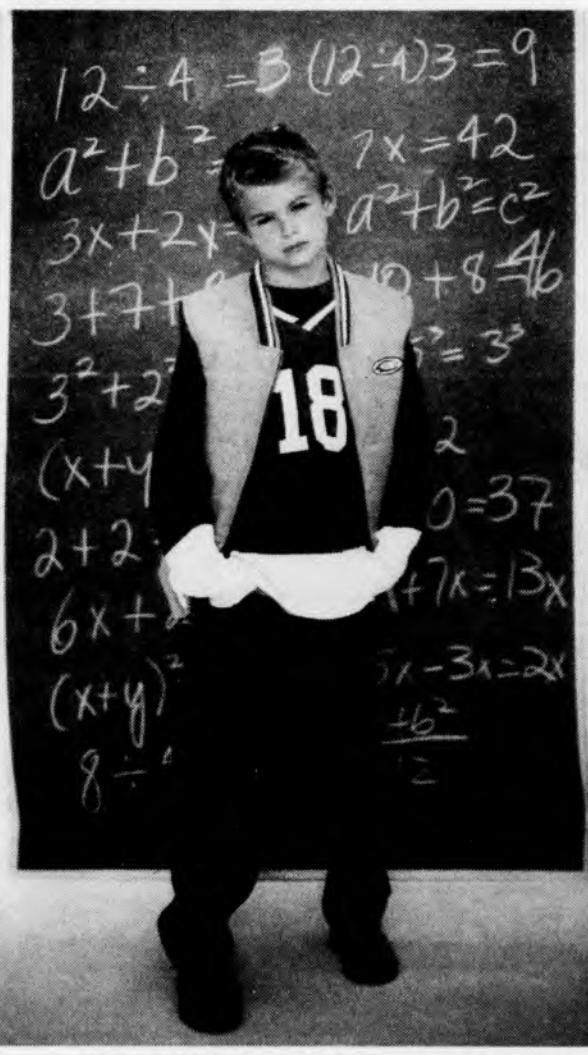
The town's drug and alcohol committee will begin holding regular meetings on the second Wednesday of the month at town hall at 7:30 p.m.

Committee chairman Margo Aikens announced the change for September at last week's meeting. She said the meetings will be posted in the school calendars and at the town hall.

Aikens reminded all committee members to attend the scheduled meeting in order to remain on the committee. There are currently nine members on the board.

Jody Butman has recently been named secretary of the board.

"We are getting our momentum back and are looking to have a successful year," Butman said.



'97 Teen Beach Dance

Who's up for soaking up some rays and hittin' the surf? On Friday, August 22, grab your JAMS, wax your surfboard, and surf on down to the town hall auditorium for the gnarly Cohasset Summer Teen Beach Bash.

Here's the skinny on this gig: Running from 7:30 to 11 p.m., this shindig is for grades 7 through 12. For this occasion, the town hall auditorium will be decorated with a funky beach theme. DJ Jazzy Jay Fiori has generously donated his time and talent to provide the entertainment. Drinks can be purchased by those who attend, but snacks will be provided.

Those who show up are encouraged to arrive in beach gear or casual clothing. Towels, goggles, flippers, swimies, tubes and big alligator floaties are acceptable. Donations for this rocking party are $5 and will benefit the Drug and Alcohol Committee/ youth projects. So just put your rear in gear, and shake that booty on Aug. 22. But if you have any questions you can drop a dime to Jami Butman at 383-0851.

Swim Center has adapted aquatics program

The Cohasset Commission on Disabilities will write about different places in the town of Cohasset whereby disabled children and adults can use facilities for socializing as well as exercising. Recently I visited with Chris Kondrat, a co-director of the Cohasset Swim Center. Chris extends an invitation for any permanently or temporarily disabled resident of Cohasset to come and swim. According to Chris, the lifeguards will meet with people one on one to enable anyone to enjoy a cool summertime swim.

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from noon to 1 p.m. there is an adapted aquatics program providing an individual swim program for special needs students. The students from the South Shore Collaborative who are physically disabled and/or developmentally delayed use this time for recreation and exercise. On Tuesdays and Thursdays from noon to 2 p.m. there is a senior citizens swim. On Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m. there are adult swim lessons. On every evening from 5 to 7 p.m. there is an adult swim.

After talking with Chris, I was impressed with his sensitivity to the needs of all swimmers. Because of the lifeguards' willingness to assist patrons, the swim center remains an accessible and friendly place to visit during the summer.

This column on disabilities issues will be an occasional feature in the Cohasset Mariner.

Cohasset Swim Team celebrates undefeated season

With a final win over Duxbury Yacht Club, the Cohasset swim team completed an outstanding, undefeated season.

Coaches Allison Hughes and Becky Golden celebrated with team members and their families last Sunday night at the annual Swimming and Diving Team Awards Ceremony.

Golden and Hughes told the crowd that this year's team, with approximately 140 swimmers, was the strongest ever, and that the hard work and dedication of each member contributed to the team's success.

In addition to working hard at each and every practice and meet, teammates enjoyed themselves, cheering each other on throughout the season. Some swimmers broke long-standing team records, others improved their personal times, and everyone made new friends. The coaches and team members alike are already looking forward to next summer.

Records broken included:

INDIVIDUAL EVENTS

Parker Berg (10 and under) Team Record, 25 yard Butterfly, 17.47, 8/4/97, (actually a tie with his brother Alex from 7/7/95)..

Kate O'Brien (12 and under)

THE FISH STORY

BY MARK TRASK

Charter your way to the big fish

When The Striper departed Saquatucket Harbor that early summer morn, the regular group in the charter was anticipating a nice day of fishing. By the time they were returning later that same day they talked the numbers almost in disbelief.

The fishing began from the Race southerly along the outside of the Cape's famous striper beaches. Using Cape-style bucktail jigs and Clouser flies the fish paraded into the boat. One tide produced 95 striped bass. Of the 95 fish, 92 were keeper size (28 inches or longer). Of the 95 fish caught (and most were released) an incredible 80 were taken by fly fishing gear! Needless to say Carl Wagner and his charter companions were a satisfied group on the trip back.

Overheard on the radio one busy morning this week. "I got three stripers this morning and nothing but bluefish since. I'm going in 'til later this afternoon. I'm tired of feeding them (the blues).

Nothing like catching one of those high jumping tail dancing ballerina bluefish. Ask Matt Lombardi of Milton who cast a Ranger lure around the base of Minot's Light. His hard fighting bluefish tilted the scale at 12 pounds 1 ounce, measuring 33 inches in length. Up to the north the old master himself was up to his usual tricks among the ledges and rocky outcroppings of the Boston Harbor entrance. Ted Abbadessa did his Pied Piper routine once again and captured a fat 39-inch bluefish on his pogie. The blue dropped the scale to 18 pounds 8-1/2 ounces! A formidable Governor's Cup contender!

While catching a blue is more of a topwater dance, the striper is more of a middle linebacker, bullying its way, bending and wrecking inadequate gear. After many years of putting in his time Tony Finegan brought home a 33-inch bass for dinner. Joe Durkin got out long enough to get his first keeper of the year as well, a perfect grill-sized 30-incher.

Do bass travel in schools? You be the judge. John Coleman and Chris Norton, both of Scituate, were drifting chunks near Tobias Ledge when they had simultaneous hookups. The fish were exactly 39 inches long. John's was slightly heavier at 22 pounds 10 ounces than Chris' 20-pound 2-ouncer. Both nice fish. A few days earlier Bob Clement was dragging his tube and worm rig around Tobias and fooled a 45" bass. Bob's fish weighed in at 28 pounds 12 ounces much to the delight of a curious crowd at the scale.

Josh Phippen traveled from Whitman to get in on the Scituate striper action. He nailed a bass on a pogie chunk at the Glades. The Lighthouse jetty proved productive for Kevin McCord and Kevin Jr. Kevin is the leader of the Gates School Fishing Club, a popular student activity. The striper that gobbled their pogie chunk was a slim 41-incher. The 19-pound 8-ounce bass is filleted and waiting to be dinner.

Every week there seems to be a "Can you believe this?"-type story lately. Ben Bolster and Brian Straughn were all set for a fine time of fishing at the Mill Bridge in Cohasset. The tide was right. They had their gear fitted out in top form. They had their bait. The first mackerel chunks hit the water and they settled in for the first hits. After a while the crabs had decimated the baits and they were back to the bucket for more. More? The bucket was empty. Vacant. Nada. Sam, the lab, sat nearby watching. If you looked hard you could see the grin on his face as he licked his chops giving himself away.

Local golfers swing out for the Cam Neely Foundation

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

Hackers and duffers from all around converged on the Pembroke Country Club on Friday for the Third Annual MGXG Golf Tournament.

All proceeds from the golf tournament will go to the Cam Neely Foundation for the Neely House, a home away from home for cancer patients and their families undergoing cancer treatments at the New England Medical Center or its pediatric facility, The Floating Hospital for Children in Boston.

Tournament organizer and Hanover resident Michael Graham puts together a number of these tournaments each year but this one may be a little closer to his heart than his other endeavors.

Graham, like both Scott and Cam Neely, has felt the loss of both parents, Dorothy and Ralph, from long term illnesses. The Neely's have dedicated The Neely House in the memory of their parents, Marlene and Michael, both of whom have succumbed to cancer in the last few years.

In addition Graham also lost a close friend, Sandy McCue, to stomach cancer three years ago. This tournament and a larger one honoring McCue combined have raised more than $85,000 for the Neely Foundation

Thirty-four foursomes turned out for the event. Players included foundation executive director Scott Neely, Bruins prospects Jean Yves-Roy and Rob Tallas, as well as Boston comedian Paul Nardizzi.

One of the more popular players to ever pull on the black and gold sweater, Cam Neely has made his foundation one of his top priorities since his retirement after the 1994-95 season due to chronic knee and hip injuries.

To honor the memory of their parents, the Neely brothers more than three years ago set The Neely House into motion as a place where cancer patients and their families could stay near to the hospital in an environment more like a home than a hotel room.

"We want to see the dollars that we raise go straight to the people," says Cam Neely about the idea of The Neely House. "There needs to be a tremendous amount of money spent on research. We know that, but we want to spend the money we raise to provide support directly to families dealing with this disease.

"We want to take some of the pressure off patients and families-to give them a safe comfortable place to stay where they can talk with others who are facing similar situations."

Their dream was accomplished this past June when eight apartment Neely House was officially opened for business.

"It really is a great thing to happen," said Graham. "It is quite a place to see.

"Cancer really hits hard on the whole family, not just the patients," Graham added. "Hotel bills and the stress from the chemotherapy treatments adds up fast and The Neely House is much more like a comfortable home rather than a small hotel room for these people in an already stressful period of their life."

Easter Seals marathon returns this weekend

By David Wolcott
STAFF WRITER

On August 23 and 24, men and women off all shapes and sizes will descend upon Train Field in the quiet hamlet of Duxbury in pursuit of the ultimate in athletic competition.

Tougher the any ultimate fighting championship could ever dream of being and demanding more from the human body and spirit than any ironman competition, the 14th annual 24-hour softball marathon to benefit the Easter Seals foundation returns in just two weeks.

The game will start at 8 a.m. sharp Saturday and players will show off their best in softball techniques and athletic wear to the game's conclusion, Sunday morning at 8.

What began 14 years ago as a couple of games in Brockton for a local charity while representing the former Casa Verrini Restaurant has blossomed into one of the more anticipated events on the local social calendar.

Marshfield selectmen chairman and Norfolk County Assistant District Attorney Jim Cantwell has been with the game since its inception.

"The way it started was someone approached me and some of my friends about playing in a tournament in Brockton. The next year we played in a ten-hour tournament in Marshfield," he explained. "Being young, we wanted to go the whole distance and the next year we moved to Duxbury and made it a 24-hour long marathon.

"It's always a great time and it's also for a great cause in the Easter Seals."

It's also been a financial boon to the charity. Coming into this year the game has raised just under $50,000 for Easter Seals, a national group that services more than 1 million disabled people annually.

According to their mission statement, Easter Seals is a direct service organization committed to providing world class, quality programs and services to help people with disabilities and their families live life with quality, dignity and independence.

More than 100 people are expected to take part during the game, which normally turns into more of a hitter's paradise than a pitching duel. Last year saw Star Market just slip by Hokinson Insurance to the tune of 161-127.

Once you've played a couple of years in the marathon, Cantwell said you learn a thing or two. Things like stretching a double into a triple with a head-first belly-flop slide once you've been playing for a good 14 hours straight just doesn't seem to be as important as you once though it was.

"You need to pace yourself and maybe think twice about running out a ground ball at full speed," said Cantwell. "We all get a little older each year. Lots of sleep is always good, both before and after the game. Adrenaline kicks in during the game, but that is only going to take you so far."

Spots are still open if you'd like to take part in the game. For more information call Cantwell at 834-6228 or Dan Bardon at 837-6337.

This Hawk flies high

Cohasset resident Matt Lewis is continuing to do well as a hockey and baseball standout for the Xaverian Hawks.

As a junior, Lewis took home team MVP and Catholic Conference All-Star honors on the baseball diamond, where the second baseman compiled a .423 batting average.

He also excelled on the ice, serving as team captain.

A member of the National Honor Society, Lewis hopes to continue his baseball career at the Naval Academy.

Bike to help fight MS

The Boston Herald, The River 92.5 FM and Plymouth Savings Bank have joined forces to help the National Multiple Sclerosis Society promote Oceanside Bike Fest '97, scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 20.

Oceanside Bike Fest '97 is a one-day bike tour that begins in Duxbury and takes cyclists along the rocky shores of Scituate, Cohasset and through the area's forests and parks. Whether you are an avid or recreational cyclist, we have a route designed especially for you — 25, 50 or 100 miles!

Multiple sclerosis is a disease that attacks your nervous system, wearing away the control you have over your body. Symptoms may range from numbness to paralysis and blindness. MS is a devastating disease because it is so unpredictable. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of the disease cannot be foreseen.

Funds raised from Oceanside Bike Fest '97 will help the Massachusetts Chapter continue to provide a wide range of comprehensive services to the approximately 7,000 families in Massachusetts living with MS.

For more information about Oceanside Bike Fest '97, call the MS Society at (508) 291-2169.

Gymnastic camp for girls

Come join the South Shore Community Center gymnastics staff for a fun-filled week of gymnastics for all levels of experience, from Aug. 18-Aug. 22.

Enjoy rotations on the vaults, bard, beam and floor exercises, as well as tips on conditioning and a good game of bowling.

Bring a snack each day.

The cost of the camp is $82.50 for the week.

Call the center at 383-0088 to sign up, Monday-Friday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., or see Susie at the gym.

Hockey squad seeks players

The Bay State Sharks are looking for a few good defensemen.

The bantam minor team of the Metropolitan Boston Hockey League is looking for a defenseman and alternates for the upcoming year.

The team plays a 40 game schedule, with weekly practices and four tournaments per year.

Transfering frequent-flier miles can be tricky

By Amy K. Barrett
Worth Magazine

People fuss over frequent-flier miles now more than ever since they are more widely offered and, hence, easier to accumulate. And with about 2 trillion frequent-flier miles in inventory, more Americans are beginning to think about bequeathing their mile stashes to their heirs when they die.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

It may be a scenario you'd rather not contemplate, but after you have passed away your family will have to divvy up your assets. Presumably they will follow your wishes set out in your will regarding investments and the house. Unless you've left very detailed instructions, however, they will be on their own in splitting up the smaller items. And, sad to say, two free plane tickets to Puerto Rico may inspire as much enthusiasm as your heirloom pearls or cuff links.

"You would be amazed. Families fight quite often over who gets the miles," says Tammy Massie, a customer service representative at American Airlines who handles frequent-flier matters. "And it may only be for 3,000 miles," she says, which is not even an eighth of the amount needed for a free domestic ticket.

These days you don't have to be a traveling salesman to accrue enough miles for a free plane ticket. In fact, you don't even have to fly to win miles. About 16,000 hotels, credit cards, and car rental companies are among the many companies that offer miles as an incentive for using their products.

"It's so easy to earn miles these days," says Randy Petersen, a spokesman at InsideFlyer, a magazine that follows the frequent-flier industry.

As people rack up large quantities of miles they start to think about what will happen if they don't cash them in during their lifetime. Making sure their heirs inherit the miles seems worth the trouble. After all, the miles are equivalent to cash, with each mile commonly valued at about 2 cents because most airlines require you to cash in 25,000 miles for a round-trip domestic ticket, estimated at $500.

The best way for members of frequent-flier clubs to deter a family squabble, and to ensure their heirs enjoy the clubs' benefits, is to name beneficiaries for the miles in their wills. Barring that, most airlines assume that the miles go to the surviving spouse or the executor of the will.

The beneficiaries, or recipients, should be aware that on their end the transfer of miles requires a paper trail that includes a death certificate, a will, and sometimes birth and marriage certificates for proof that the right person is cashing in on the miles.

Still, a named beneficiary in the will and the right documents on hand do not necessarily ensure a seamless transfer of miles. Airlines operate under their own idiosyncratic rules when it comes to bequeathing frequent-flier miles. And some charge for the process. American Airlines and United Airlines charge a $50 fee for their trouble.

While many of the airlines do not officially outline the transfer procedures in their rule books, all of their customer service representatives know the unofficial rules so that the airlines can be flexible in handling special circumstances.

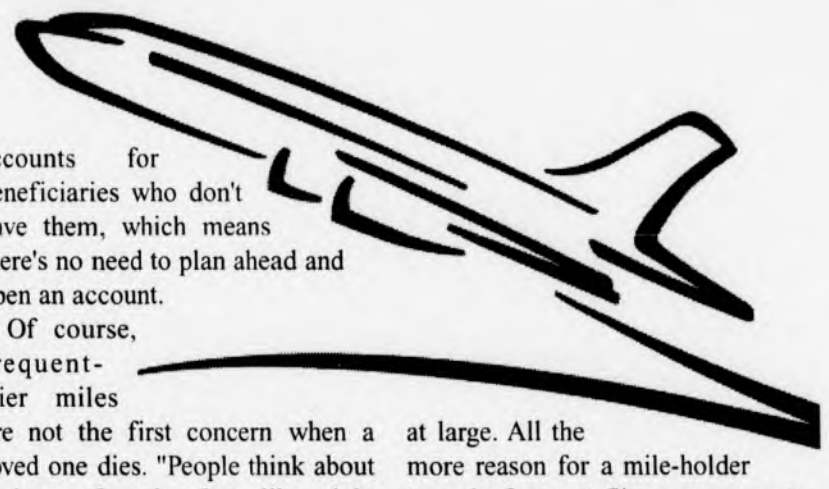
"[Transferring miles after a death] is a common practice, but it's just not stated in the rules and conditions brochure," says Delta Airlines' customer representative Kathy Herron, who then proceeds to recite Delta's policy in detail. Ergo, it is possible to know the facts.

"You would be amazed. Families fight quite often over who gets the miles. And it may only be for 3,000 miles which is not even an eighth of the amount needed for a free domestic ticket."

Tammy Massie
American Airlines

A "must know" is whether an airline will split up the bequeathed miles among family members. On this point TWA is flexible, and so is Continental; they will divide the deceased's miles amongst as many beneficiaries as named, which means a father can divide his miles equally amongst his six children in his will. This is not by any means the norm.

Northwest, United and Delta, however will not divvy up the miles. Instead only one person, either the named beneficiary or the will's executor, is allowed to receive the miles. They, in turn, can then buy tickets using the miles for their relatives--a complication that could be a headache, if not planned for.



Like milk, some miles have expiration dates. Inheriting frequent-flier miles could be for naught if the miles have expired. Northwest, Continental and American rescind unused miles at the end of the third year from the time they were earned. So, if you make a trip to Bora-Bora in 1995, you have until the end of 1998 to put the earned miles to use.

Delta, on the other hand, allows you to keep those Bora-Bora miles indefinitely as long as you fly with the airline sometime in the following three years. And Continental will let you hold onto your inventory of miles without any deadlines or restrictions.

In instances of small amounts of bequeathed miles, the heirs may need to already be a member of the airlines' frequent-flier club to make real use of them. TWA, for example, won't allow heirs to start up a frequent-flier account with inherited miles. Instead, it sends a certificate for the miles that can be cashed in for plane tickets. But a 3,000-mile award becomes a useless piece of paper, because TWA doesn't award tickets for under 20,000 miles.

But if beneficiaries have an account set up with TWA before the transfer, they can add the miles to their account. Viola: the 3,000 miles get added to the already accrued 17,000 miles and turn into a ticket to Florida.

Unlike TWA, airlines like Continental, Delta, and American Airlines will start a frequent-flier accounts for beneficiaries who don't have them, which means there's no need to plan ahead and open an account.

Of course, frequent-flier miles are not the first concern when a loved one dies. "People think about it long after the fact, like eight months down the road," says Bridget Adkinson, a Northwest Airlines customer representative.

The executors of the will, in the midst of bereavement, will be occupied with sorting through the estate at large. All the more reason for a mile-holder to make frequent-flier arrangements for his heirs. That way they can focus on dealing with the important issues at hand, and he can be sure that he is leaving a legacy of flight - not fight.
